Tells Commons That Loss of Kut-El-Amara Is Not Of Military Importance

Situation Was Never So Good, Premier Asquith Declares --Criticisms Are Not Well Based

LONDON, May 4.—In addressing the House of Commons Premier Asquith said the public was naturally depressed by the deplorable incident of the surrender of the garrison at Kut-El-Amara, but that it was not an event of military importance.

Referring to the attacks on the Government in this and other connections, he invited the House to turn to speeches delivered during previous crisis in the history of the country. It would be found that charges of exactly the same nature were made.

THE SAME ACCUSATIONS.

There has been the same accusation of indecision, procrastination, half-heartedness and delay, and exactly the same cry for a saviour or a combination of saviours. At one moment the people were told that the civilians in the Cabinet—as quite wrongly in the case of Gallipoli—had overruled their military and naval experts. At another moment—as he believed they would be told in regard to Mesopotamia—it was said the civilians in the Cabinet were too subservient to their military advisers.

"My answer to all this," Mr. Asquith continued, "is, that if there have been mistakes or blunders, perhaps both, in policy or strategy, our contribution—the contribution of the United Kingdom and the Empire to the common cause—has grown and is growing steadily, month by month, and is greater at this moment, and better directed, than ever before. And the naval and military situation of the allies has never been so good as it is to-day.

NOT WORRIED, IF—

"We have to put up with these things," the Premier said. He added that the Government would not be disturbed by them so long as it retained the confidence of the country.

NEW SYSTEM NEEDED.

After reviewing carefully the condition under which recruiting had been carried out, the Premier said it had been decided that the men required could not, and would not be obtained in due time with the existing machinery.

He pointed out there was an immense advantage in getting rid of peacemeal treatment of the question which had given rise to so much objection. Speeches made in the last week, especially by Labour representatives, he said, encouraged the belief that there was a general desire to settle the whole matter once and for all, and get it finally out of the way. He hoped that would be the effect of the bill to be introduced.

AN EXCEPTIONAL TASK.

There were two limiting conditions in the matter of recruiting which applied to England, but not to the other belligerents, namely, maintenance of supremacy of the seas, both by means of the navy and of the mercantile marine, and financing of the nation's allies.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT WILL BE BROUGHT TO TRIAL WITHIN NEXT FEW DAYS

LONDON, May 4.—Sir Roger Casement will be brought to trial in London within a few days on the charge of high treason with Baron Reading, the Lord Chief Justice of England presiding.

Unless Sir Roger escapes death sentence because he is found to be insane, he will be hanged with a silken rope—a "privilege" accorded condemned members of the Nobility by ancient custom.

Other rebels are being disposed of by Military Court martial.

The rank and file of the Irish rebellion will be dealt with leniently it was stated to-day. Sir Edward Carson, Ulster leader, and John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, have joined in an appeal to the Government for mercy. It is believed the majority of the Sinn Feiners will be given light sentences, and that a few will be deported.

A Dublin despatch to the Evening News to-day reported that in the Dublin hospitals alone the bodies of 188 victims of the seven days' rebellion have been counted. These include 66 soldiers and 122 rebels and civilians.

The Dublin morgues hold about three hundred more bodies, some of them mangled beyond recognition.

HOW THEY DIRECT THE BIG GUNS

One day we hear of the enormous range of the most powerful German gun, then it is France who has a type equal or superior in range, then it is Austria, then a prediction that England is about to disclose a gun that will dwarfe them all. The range of any of these guns is something that would have been considered marvelous only a few years ago. Their gunners are never within sight of their target. They are always several miles in the rear, and they point their guns according to distances and directions communicated to them from points much nearer their target. In the day, for instance, scouting aeroplanes fly ont high above the enemy and signal back their location, dispositions, and movements, and keep the gunners informed as to how their shots are landing, or, where possible, an observation officer stationed as far in advance of the battery as possible, with the aid of field glasses "picks up" the enemy and directs the firing by telephone, correcting the range by watching the falling of the shells. At night, the operation is a little more spectacular. The same observation officer, by telephone, directs the movements of the beam of light from the very powerful search lights placed near the battery. When this great beam "picks up" the enemy eight or ten miles off, he has the operator hold it on them so that they are most uncomfortably in the "lime light." Then he directs the firing, and, by the same search light, sees where and how the shells fall, just as in day light.

Thus, in the operation of these enormous guns of to-day, at least three modern scientific inventions are constantly employed: the high power field glass, high power search night, aeroplane, and telephone, all working in co-operation. Fortunately, all of these, except the gun itself, are capable of many very peaceful employments, and the great improvements in them, forced by the war, will be of benefit to the world for many years to come.

SIMPLE LIVING IS ORDERED IN GERMANY

The Kreuz Zeitung of Berlin announces that the Imperial Ministry of the Interior has decided to "simplify bills of fare" in all hotels, inns restaurants, and other public places of refreshment. The fatal rescript is to be published during the month of April.

The Government will justify the extraordinary measure as a "war necessity." For some months the table d'hote has been abolished, the public being obliged to order their meals a la carte, but in the opinion of the authorities the bills of fare were so varied, and implied in their in their variety such waste and extravagance, that steps had to be taken to simplify things and bring home to the people the extreme need of further drastic economy.

The simplification, according to the Kreuz Zeitung, is to effect their midday and evening meals. For the mid day meal restaurateurs will be permitted to put two kinds of soup on their bills of fare, two entrees, and two joints. A larger selection must not be made. Sweets are not to be limited for the present. For the evening meal there will be the same variety, but with the addition of cold meats. It is to be noted that the dualism in soups, entrees, and joints is only allowed [illegible] choice. No hungry person will be permitted, under any circumstances, to enjoy more than one of each, nor will second helps be permitted.

Helps will no longer be served in dishes, but in the plate from which they are to be eaten. If they are served in dishes it would mean a wastage of fat, and this cannot be tolerated any longer.

Business Normal In the Far East

Business in Australia, New Zealand and the Far East is normal despite the European war, according to Mr. J. H. Delamore, of Gore, New Zealand, editor of the Mautaura Ensign, of Gore, who is on his way to England and who was at the Wolcott Hotel, yesterday.

Mr. Delamore travelled through Australia, Western China and Japan on his way to this country, and after reaching here spent three weeks in California because he liked the climate so well.

"In Hong Kong and Shanghai," he said, "there is a great deal of feeling against the Germans. In Hong Kong where there is a strong British colony, the Germans are liquidating, and leaving the trade to their opponents. In Shanghai the British are virtually running the foreign cities. The Council of the Municipality, which had one German member before the war, now consits of seven Britishers, one Japanese and one American. The German left when war broke out. But German firms are still doing business in Shanghai and with the interior of the country.

"I failed to observe any indications in Japan that would lead to the belief that Japan is courting the Germans. There was some criticism about the British holding up Japanese shipping, but while I was there the English papers all published articles by many prominent officials of the Government, including members of the opposition, and the consensus of their views seemed to be that the Anglo-Japanese agreement should persist, and be upheld. All agreed that such an alliance was necessary for the peace of the world.

"However I long ago gave up trying to pierce the veil which shrouds the working of Oriental minds. I merely quote the surface indications as the basis for my opinions."

"New Zealand is extremely prosperous, despite high taxes on everything because of the war. Incomes, postage, telegrams, everything has been taxed and we have sent 50,000 young men away to the war out of a population of a little more than 1,000,000. But farmers are prosperous and they are our mainstay. Meat prices and wool quotations are at a maximum. Everybody is patriotic, and all are ready to do more than they have already done for the mother country."

IMMIGRATION JUMPS TO 33,000 IN MONTH

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Immigration is quickening after months of stagnation caused by the European war. Figures published by the immigration Bureau shows 23,000 foreigners reached the United States during March, against 24,000 in February and 17,000 in January. Each of the three months showed a large increase over the corresponding month of the previous year.

Italy is sending the greatest number, with England second and the Scandinavian countries third.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

Schofield had stiffened in his chair as though undergoing a spasm of pain. The sentences smote him between the eyes of his sensibilities. Had it come to this, that his name was being handled dishonorably about the bar-rooms of St. John's? If so, how and why?

"Then I suppose you've heard the talk in Grande Mignon before this?"

"Yes, Code, I have; and I've called every man a liar that said anything definite against you. I'm gettin' old, but there ain't very many men here able enough to shove that name back down my throat, an' I notice none of 'em tried. It's all idle talk, that's all; an' there ain't a soul that can prove a single thing against you, even cowardice. An' that's more'n can be said o' some men in this village."

Code was grateful, and he said so. It was something to find a friend so staunch and loyal that suspicion had never even found soil in his mind where it might take root. Two such he had now: Elsa Mallaby and Bijonah Tanner.

"What else did those men say?" he asked in conclusion.

"If I remember right, an' I was perfectly clear at the time, this is what one said: 'Fellers,' sez 'e to the other two, 'e sez—'fellers, that young Captain Schofield in Freekirk Head is goin' on the rocks, or I don't hear what's goin' on in my office.'

"'Then they're goin' to sue him to recover part of his insurance on the old schooner May Schofield?' asks the second.

"'If I didn't hear the chief say that this mornin' you can shoot me on sight!' the first answers. An' then for a while I couldn't hear any more, an' you can bet I was watchin' the door somethin' awful for fear me would come in an' spoil it all by braggin' me off."

"But who were these men?" asked Code. "Whom did they mean by the chief?"

"I was just gettin' to that. After a while, from a little bit here an' a little there, I made out that the first young feller was private secretary to the president of the Marine Insurance Company. That's the firm that carried the old May, isn't it?"

"Yes."

"I thought so. They've got my Rosan, too, though I wish mightily now that they hadn't. This feller is the private secretary to the president, an' the other two are clerks or something in the office. They may have been up to something crooked, and then again they may have just been talkin' things over as young fellers often do when they're interested in their work. Anyway, there's enough in what they said to set you thinkin', I cal'late."

"Yes," said Code slowly and grimly, "it is. I've only known that the island was talking since last night, and now I find St. John's is, too. It's spreading pretty fast, it seems; and I wonder where it will end?" He pondered silently for a while.

"If they sue to recover,' what'll you do?" ventered Tanner hesitatingly.

"God knows!" answered Schofield and laughed bitterly. "I haven't got a thing on earth but the Charming Lass, an' this year I haven't caught enough fish to pay for my new mains'l. My credit is still good at Bill Boughton's, but that's all."

"But the cottage—"

"That is my mother's, and they could never get that. If they sue and I lose they must take the Lass, and after they've subtracted the judgment from the sale price I suppose I'll get the rest—maybe enough to buy a second-hand sloop."

"Yes, but that isn't the worst part of it, Code. As soon as they bring suit they will attach the schooner, so that even if the trial doesn't come up for weeks you still can't use her, and will have to sit around idle or go hand-lining in your dory. And you know what that means with winter comin' on."

"I know." He had seen hard winters that had tried the resources of the village to the utmost, but he had never faced one that promised to be like the next.

"Well, what would you advise me to do, captain?"

"Get out!" snapped Tanner. "Get a crew and take the Lass to sea. There's one thing sure, a lawyer can't serve you with a summons or anything else if he has to look for you on the Atlantic Ocean."

Schofield smiled. The remedy called for was heroic, truly; but was it honorable?"

"I wonder if they can do that, anyway?" he asked. "After the May was lost the insurance people settled without a complaint. Can they rake up that matter again now?"

"By Jove! That reminds me. Them fellers discussed that very thing; an' the secretary said that if the law had been broke at the time of the sinkin'—I mean, if the schooner wasn't fit or had been tampered with—that it was within the law. But, o' course, somebody's got to make the complaint."

"That's just it," cried Code, springing up and throwing away the stump of his cigar; "somebody has got to make the complaint! Well, now, from what I can see, somebody's made it. All this talk could not have gone on in the island unless it started from somewhere. And the question is, where?"

They were interrupted by the sound of footsteps. In the darkness the figure of a man appeared approaching the house. A moment later the new-comer stepped on the low veranda, and both men recognized him.

It was Nat Burns.

"Is Nellie here?" he asked without the formality of the usual greetings.

"I cal'late she is, Nat," replied Tanner, rising to his feet. "Wait a minute an' I'll call her."

But he had not reached the door before the girl herself stepped out on the porch. She ran out eagerly, but stopped short when she saw Code in the darkness. Their meeting was obviously reserved.

In the interim Tanner walked to where Schofield stood, silent.

"I cal'late I can give you a pretty good idea where all this trouble started from," he growled in a low tone; but before he could go on Nellie interrupted him.

"Father," he said, coming forward with Nat. "I can to tell you something that we've all been too busy to discuss before this. Nat and I are engaged. He gave me the ring night before last when you were in St. John's. I hope you are pleased, father."

Bijonah Tanner remained silent for a moment, plainly embarrassed by the duty before him. Between most men who follow the sea and their daughters there is much less intimacy than with those who are in other walks of life. Long absences and the feeling that a mother is responsible for her girls are reasons for this; while in the case of boys, who begin to potter round the parental schooner from their earliest youth, a much closer feeling exists. Tanner could not bridge the chasm between himself and his daughter.

"Did you tell your mother?" he asked finally.

"Yes."

"And was she satisfied?"

"Yes, indeed; she was very happy about it, and told me to come right down and tell you."

"Wal, if it suits her it suits me," was the dry conclusion. "I hope you'll be happy. You've got a fine gal there, Nat."

"I know I have, captain," said Burns warmly; "and I'll try to make her happy."

"All right," grunted Bijonah, and sank back into his chair. Between praising one man who saved his youngest boy, and congratulating another who was to marry his eldest girl, Captain Tanner's day had been over full of ceremonial.

Face to face with the inevitable, Code Schofield offered sincere but embarrassed congratulations; and he was secretly glad that, when opportunity offered for him to shake Nat Burns's hand, that young gentleman was busy lighting a cigarette.

The lovers went inside, and Code stood dejectedly, leaning against the railing. Tanner removed his pipe and spat over the railing.

"It's too blamed bad!" he muttered.

"What?" asked Code, almost unconsciously.

"It's too bad, I say. I used to think that mebbe Nellie would like you, Code. I've counted on it consid'able all my life. But it's too late now. Young Burns'll have to be one of the family from now on."

"Thanks, captain," said Schofield with forced cheerfulness. "I had hoped so, too. But that's all past now. By the way, who was it you thought started all this trouble? I'd like to know that."

"One of the family," muttered Tanner, his thoughts still busy. Then recollecting Schofield's question, he appeared about to speak, hesitated, and at last said:

"Bless my soul and body if I know! No, I wouldn't want to say what I thought, Code. I never was one to run down any man behind his back."

Code looked in amazement at the old man, but not for long. A moment's thought concerning Tanner's recently acquired relation made his suspicion doubly sure that Nat Burns's name had been on Bijonah's tongue.

He immediately dropped the subject and after a little while took his departure.

Notes, Notes, Notes,—
Writing's my passion, you see;
With a pen I easily utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

'Tis hard on the peaceful souls
Who fare on their ocean way—
But pass me another paper pad!
I will give my quill more play.

Yet the children continue to drown
In spite of my utmost skill;
And their mothers weep for the wee vanished hands,
And the baby lips that are still!

Notes, Notes, Notes,
The end of my wits I see!
But the wasted days when I might have prepared
Will never come back to me.

THESE THINGS DO NOT COUNT.

Never let a day pass without doing something that you know will please God.

Never take a step over one duty to perform another. Take them as they come.

Never covet the possessions of others unless you want to lose your own.

Never ask the Lord for something you don't expect He will give you.

Never sleep with enmity in your heart against anybody.

Never have much to say about yourself to strangers.

Never put a stone in the way of the timid hearted.

Never take a step without asking God to lead you.

Never live where you would not be willing to die.

Never receive a favor without being thankful.

Never trifle about things of great importance.

Never say spiteful things about anybody.

Never look where you shouldn't walk.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVAN

WHEN THE MOTHER INSTINCT FAILS.

A mother who doesn't love her children is an unnatural woman, says Frances Frear in Leslie's. A lot of people don't care for children in general, but when a woman declares that she doesn't love her own children we need to prepare for the worst. In this particular instance, that of a divorce proceeding, in which the mother was denied the possession of her children, the worst was that there was no room in the mother's heart for her own offspring because all her affection was lavished on horses and dogs. True, she saw that her children were well cared for by servants, but while the children were left to sleep in an adjoining room in charge of a nurse, she kept two puppies cuddled in the cosy corner of her own room subject to her personal care. This is an extreme case. It is not often that a woman is so untrue to natural instinct as to love a dog or a horse, however intelligent or faithful either may be, more than her own child. When such a woman appears she should be outlawed from society and allowed to live with her dogs and horses.

There are women by the hundreds who show more enthusiasm and interest over horses and dogs and automobiles and cards and social functions than they do over children. There are a lot of women whose husbands have become suddenly rich, or who have been caught in the mad whirl of extravagant living that characterizes our day, who turn their children over to servants altogether. There are mothers who never had the joy of nursing their babies, who never bathe nor dress them, who never play with them, who utterly fail, as the children grow older ,to enter into their lives or to have any sympathetic relations with them. If there is anyone who needs to hear the call to simple living it is such mothers.

WHAT AMERICAN GIRLS LACK.

Hundreds of office girls out of work are making daily applications for positions at the free employment bureau of the Chicago Woman's Club, says the Chicago News. At the same time hundreds of housewives are asking that the bureaus supply them with girls to do housework. Neither demand is satised. There are few jobs for the girl stenographers and a girls for the women who want cooks or housemaids. Thi scondition does not result from the refusal of unemployed girls to take services in families. Their needs would cause them to welcome any opportunity to earn a respectable living. But many are reported to be lacking in knowledge or housemaids. This condition does some of them it is said would have to be taught how to make a bed properly.

This state of things is peculairly American. Girls in other countries are taught housewifely duties. But the American girl of to-day too seldom learns to cook, sweep, make beds or wait on the table. In well-to-do families theer are servants, and in families there are servants, and in mothers commonly perform the household duties. In all such cases the motive is the same—to give the daughters ease and pleasure and to advance their social positions. In working families daughters not infrequently think they do their share when they turn part of their wages into the family fund. The girl of to-day may put off learning domestic duties until she herself becomes a wife and mother. Consequently her work then is likely to be badly done. Domestic unhappiness and economic waste result.

The happy young wife of a poor young man finds nothing degrading or distasteful in housework. It is difficult to see why girls who hope to be happy wives should not be taught housework by their mothers. If housework is regarded as drudgery in any household there is something seriously wrong with the methods employed.

Revival of the art of housekeeping in American families is greatly to be desired.

If men would remember that women can't always be smiling, who have to cook the dinner, answer the bell half a dozen times, get rid of a neighbour who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the playthings of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old on skates, get an eight-year-old ready for school to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, etc. A woman with all this to contend with may claim it a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from a man, who during the honeymoon, wouldn't let carry as much as a sunshade.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sour water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A LOST PICTURE PLAY

It Turned Up Unexpectedly

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

I am the manager of a moving picture studio. What is a manager of a movie studio? Only he who has been such knows. Success or failure depends upon him.

If one desires to get an idea of the workings of the photographing of plays let him visit a studio while the work is going on. He sees men, women and children lounging about waiting their turn to enact their parts. Scenes are arranged before the camera. A court scene, a love part, a murder, anything, everything that pertains to civilized, even savage life, on land, on the water, in the air, is put on the films before the wondering beholder. A woman is gaping in abandon while waiting to be a princess before the camera. A peasant girl is complaining that she is "tired to death"—for the work is dreadfully wearying—and she must in a few minutes be skipping about as happy as a newly fledged bird. This is behind the scenes of the movies.

How different from the picture passing smoothly before the eyes of an audience seated in comfortable chairs in the theater!

It is this multiplication of matters needing attention that leads managers of studios to hedge themselves in behind closed doors and forbidden to any one until the name has been sent in on a slip of paper stating the nature of the caller's business. And if some unknown person desires to see him to submit a picture play he sends word to leave it and it will be examined. It then goes on to the file of hundreds of other plays to take its turn and (usually) be returned after weary waiting on the part of the author.

Having given, I trust, the reader some faint idea of my multifarious duties I will tell my story.

One morning when I sat down to my desk, feeling somewhat rested from the work of the day before, there came a call at the telephone. Taking up the receiver, I listened. The voice that came over the wire was that of a woman and was soft and sweet.

"Is this Mr. Collamore?"

"Yes; I'm Mr. Collamore."

"I've just finished a picture play, and I would like to have a few minutes' conversation with you about it."

"Leave it in the office, or send it by mail, and it will receive attention."

"Thank you very much. Goodby."

I was surprised at being able to throw the party off so easily and congratulated myself at having done so; then turned to my daily routine. The next morning there was another call at the phone.

"Mr. Collamore, I have some more information to give you about that matter of which we were talking yesterday and will call on you at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Goodby."

"Who are you, please?"

"Miss Weatherby."

Hearing a click I knew there was no use trying to find out who Miss Weatherby was. I did not remember any conversation with any such person, but I concluded that I had neglected to take down the name. Inasmuch as she had been admitted and had talked with me, what she had to communicate must be of some importance. At any rate, when she was announced in the afternoon I gave an order for her admittance. A very pretty young woman was ushered in, who seated herself in the chair beside my desk with as much sang froid as if she had a right to remain there as long as she chose.

"Let me see," I said to her. "What was the business we were discussing yesterday morning? I don't quite recall it."

"I told you that I had a picture play."

Now I knew who Miss Wetherby was. Unable to get at me in the regular way, she had resorted to the telephone to make an appointment—a very shrewd device. However, she had succeeded in passing my guard and there was nothing to do but listen to what she had to say. This was brief and to the point. She asked me to read her scenario myself. I told her that it was impossible for me to read all the plays that came into the studio, to which she replied that she did not wish me to read all the plays, she would be satisfied if I would read hers. She would not leave without the promise, and I was obliged to give it. Then she handed me her manuscript and departed without a word.

It was evident that the girl was not only bright, but had the good sense to understand that her play would stand by itself and she need not bore me by telling about its strong points. I am a man of my word and determined to keep my pledge to her. I put the scenario in my pocket, intending to glance over it on my way home. I live in a suburb and go home by rail. When on the train I would have abundant opportunity to do so.

That evening when I went home I was loaded down—a common condition of commuters—with parcels. On the train I took out the scenario and was about to begin its perusal when a boy came along with the evening papers. I bought one and, seeing a startling announcement of a victory in the great European war, laid the manuscript down beside me on the seat. Becoming absorbed in the news, I read the paper till we reached my station and, forgetting all about the scenario, left it in the seat. Not till after dinner did I remember it and my promise to read it.

There is a rule of the railroad that all articles left in trains should be turned in at the nearest terminal, and I hoped to recover the play the next day when I went into the city. It had not been left at the lost article office. I was worried. I called again to inquire for it the next day and was still disappointed. I gave up all hope of recovering it and began to consider devices by which I might best get out of the scrape with Miss Weatherby.

I had not promised to read the play within any given time, so there was no hurry in doing anything about the matter. I was in hope that an address was written on the manuscript and it would be sent back to the author, who would turn it in again to me. But when a week passed I gave up this hope.

I could now do nothing but confess the loss to Miss Weatherby and indemnify her. But I was very busy, as usual, and concluded to wait for her to put in an appearance, when I would be very sweet to her with a view to be let down as lightly as possible. I was ready to pay her a fair price for the time she would spend in making a duplicate copy of the manuscript.

It was about ten days after the loss that I was called up on the phone by Miss Weatherby, who asked in her sweet voice if I had passed upon her play. I responded that I had not. This was as far as I got when she interrupted me, saying that she was aware that I was a very busy man. Indeed, she wondered that I had not broken down long ago. Then, saying that it would be criminal for her to take up my time about her small matter, she hung up the receiver, and I was shut off.

I did not know whether to feel glad or sorry at this respite. I would have preferred to make my confession and have the suspense ended. And yet the delay might bring forth some development—the manuscript might turn up; something might happen either to me or the young lady to render an explanation unnecessary. I think that I would almost have been willing to break my leg if while I was laid up the difficulty could be removed.

I did not hear from Miss Weatherby for some time after she had called me up on the phone. A new play that had been hawked about among film manufacturers was meeting with great success, and I was interested in making the acquaintance of the author and getting some of his work. But the name of the writer was not given, and I failed to find out who he was. It was rumored that the play had been written for the actress who played the principal part, a lady who had made a reputation on the stage—Helen Markland, though this was her stage name. I had never seen Miss Markland, having been so busy that I had to work nights, and tried to get an evening to attend the theater when she was on the screen, but thus far had failed.

The next time Miss Weatherby called me up to inquire about her play she asked me if I had seen Helen Markland in her new play. I told her that I had not, but was trying to get an opportunity to do so, whereupon she went into ecstacies over the play and the actress. "I'm going tomorrow night to see her," she added. "I wish you would be my escort."

Here was an opportunity to treat the news of my carelessness under great advantage. I knew that for one in my position to condescend to escort one of the multitude of women ambitious to achieve a reputation as a play wright would be considered a great honor. I told Miss Weatherby that I would be delighted to escort her in good time for the first performance. She replied that she should expect me to criticise the play, giving her the benefit of my knowledge in such matters, that she might utilize it in improvements in the scenario in my possession. I winced at this, but said nothing.

The next evening I called for Miss Weatherby in a carriage. She introduced me to her mother, who was to go with us to the play. We were a little ahead of the main feature, during which interval I was delighted with my companion, who chatted charmingly. She seemed in the best of spirits and very proud of having secured the escort of a manager of a studio. When the main play came on she ceased to talk and sat with an expectancy upon her face such as she might have shown were she personally interested in the play about to be produced.

A few minutes after the opening the heroine came on the screen. I started. To my astonishment, she might have been Miss Weatherby's twin sister. A photograph has certain differences from its original, and I was not quite sure of the resemblance. I turned toward my companion and saw an amused smile on her lips.

Then I knew that Miss Weatherby and Helen Markland were the same person.

There is little more to my story. When Miss Weatherby left her scenario with me she was unknown to the picture field, though she had attained some reputation as an actress under the name of Helen Markland. The scenario that I had left in the train bore her address and was returned to her. She succeeded in getting it accepted by another manufacturer, with herself in the title role.

The play and the leading lady were delightful.

Miss Weatherby and I became fast friends, and I have since manufactured several of her plays.

HASTINGS, May 3.—A disastrous fire occurred here early Monday morning when the house belonging to Mr. Tim Crowley and which was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Scriven, was burned to the ground. It appears that the chimney had been on fire on Sunday evening and, no doubt, had never been entirely extinguished, for about 3:30 the occupants were aroused by the little child and found to their dismay, that all around them was a mass of flames. They escaped unhurt but almost all their effects had become a prey to the flames, practically nothing being saved. The foundation is not the most important thing

True, you can't have a good barn without a good foundation—but don't forget either that the roof has to stand most of the punishment. Upon it falls the burden of resisting the destructive influences of weather and changing seasons.

Now, the question is "Where am I going to find a roof which will meet these conditions?" Certainly not in wooden shingles which have rapidly deteriorated during the past few years. Not in anything so perishable as wood, nor yet iron, which lets in driving rain, but rather in a permanent mineral composition such as Brantford Roofing.

Now, let us look at a section of Brantford Roofing. First, you notice it has a pure, long-fibred felt base. This is thoroughly saturated with a filler coat of asphalt or mineral pitch. Then it is given another coat. Finally, the surface is thickly covered with crushed slate. You can imagine what a job rain, snow, fire or heat would have penetrating a roof like that. As for comparing with shingles on the score of permanency, or protection, or appearance, or even economy, there is no comparison. You put a Brantford Roof on once, and it will last as long as the building; it will always look well and it will never need repairing.

Brantford Roofing
Nature's Water-proofing

Why not let us send you samples, also a copy of our booklet which explains how Brantford Roofing is "always on the job." Or, if you will give us the dimensions of your barn or house roof we will gladly submit estimates without charge or obligation.

Back Was Lame and Ached; Could Do Very Little Work

Suffered Much From Kidney Disease for Years, But Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Doctors had tried to cure this man but failed to get at the cause of trouble probably because they relied on medicines which act on the kidneys only. The strong feature about Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is their combined action on liver, kidneys and bowels. In many of these cases the disease is so complicated that ordinary kidney medicines fail to be of much benefit. Under such conditions Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills usually touch the spot and effect a cure.

Had they been only moderately successful Dr. Chase would never have selected them for world wide distribution. As it was the demand for these pills resulted naturally from their superior merit and there was nothing else to do but supply them in large quantities.

Mr. Simeon Shiloff, Birchbrook Orchards, Birchbank, B.C., writes:

"For several years I suffered greatly from kidney disease. I was weak and could do very little work. My back was lame and ached and I sufferer much from headaches. Tried doctors and obtained no relief. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills were recommended by a friend and after taking four boxes I think that I can say that I am cured for I feel as well as I ever did."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Harry Anderson, J.P., who writes:

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Simeon Shiloff and believe his statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limiter, Toronto.

LIVE HOGS ARE SELLING AT $11.50 LOCALLY THIS WEEK

Market is Generally Quiet With But Few Outstanding Features—Opening of Cheese Board is Eagerly Awaited

MARKET FEATURES.

Interest is directed this week to the approaching resumption of the Cheese Board sales in this district. In other sections of the country there have been already a number of early sales with the top price 19 cents. The general price has, however, been somewhat under this figure. Naturally patrons are looking forward with keen expectation to the opening of the local market. It is unsafe to attempt a prediction of what the buyers will offer on the local Board, but the general opinion is that the entire season will bring prices at least similar to those of last year. The market may not be as strong, but the wish is father of thought that it will be a favourable season.

Hogs are up to $11.50 locally as compared with $11.25 last week. The advance indicates the continued strength of this market. Supplies from this district have been noticed a trifle larger than for some weeks past, but at that the local sales have not been heavy.

Groceries are comparatively quiet this week. Butter is steady at its former top price. Butter ranges from 29c to 30c, and eggs are selling about 22c.

The rest of the market is normal. The past two weeks have been interrupted by frequent rain which is interfering with farm work to a disturbing extent, has had a rather quieting effect on general business. Good seasonable weather, with farm activity, will brighten conditions considerably.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND SMALL WOMEN'S DRESS

By Anabel Worthington.

Now that we have colors in variations that are numerous and with fancy weaves, stripes and checks used in preference to plain stuffs, one can better afford to have one's dress of simple design like the model No. 7,749. The plainness of such dress may be tempered by introducing one or more of the details popularly used to give style note. This dress may be used for afternoon wear or general wear; it has smart, youthful lines to make it appeal, and consists of an overblouse, a separate gulmpe and a one-piece plaited skirt. The plain blouse is closed with snappers on the left shoulder and down the left side of the front. The gathers at the waistline give required fulness. A broad, flat collar is neat in contrasting goods and provides comfort, and a tie gives style note. The plaited skirt is dressy enough without any ornamentation; if trimmed with a crosswise band of the material, cut off the hem allowance and face with a band four inches wide.

The pattern of this dress is cut in sizes 14 to 18 years. To copy it in size 16 you will need 4½ yards of material 36 inches wide for the dress and 2 yards for the guimpe, with ½ yard bolting.

To obtain the pattern send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Doctors Say Phosphorus Cures Nervousness in Three to Five Days

People have been suffering untold agony for years doctoring for their nerves when there real trouble was, want of phosphorus in their systems.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorus is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weaken, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your backs, head and legs begin to ache through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking poisonous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Bonisol Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well, eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Simple good advice which millionaires and popular specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well, sleep well, work well digest well look well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong, vigor and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk of they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Bronsol Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like it grant.

Bronsol Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found as harmful as almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of T. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

HAVE YOU BEGUN

to think that your skin disease is incurable? You should not until you have tried Zam-Buk! This great balm has cured many cases of eczema and other skin diseases after everything else had failed. The case of Mr. G. J. Taylor, of Lower Napan, N.B., is an illustration. Mr. Taylor writes:

"For twenty years I suffered constantly with eczema. I consulted doctor after doctor, who gave me ointments and blood-tonics, but I got very little relief. I tried all the so-called "eczema cures" I had heard of, but without result. By this time my body was entirely covered with eczema, and the burning and irritation was intense. I was so badly disfigured that I was obliged to give up my work, and had despaired of ever finding a cure.

Then I heard of Zam-Buk and lost no time in trying it. The first few applications gave me sufficient relief to encourage me to continue. I did so, with the result that the skin stopped peeling, the burning and irritation entirely disappeared, and with perseverance the disease, after twenty years standing, is completely and permanently cured."

Zam-Buk is equally good for old sores, ulcers, abscesses, piles, blood-poisoning, boils, pimples, cuts, burns, and all skin injuries. All druggists, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, or direct from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

SERBIA'S STUBBORN HEROES IN ACTION

Brilliant Pen Picture of Proud Courage and Grand Rearguard Work of Little Allies

"There, Monsieur, with that you can go and see how Serbia is going to die," exclaimed Ljouba Jovanovitch, Minister of the Interior, handing a letter of recommendation to the General Staff to Albert Londres, special correspondent of the Petit Journal. Armed with this letter Londres made his way far beyond the Palanka, through long lines of retreating ox wagons and endless herds of sheep plodding through the mud of the Morava valley, without panic, escaping from the Teutons whose voices were heard in the distance.

"At a cross road," writes M. Londres, "a Serbian captain who was waiting for me, said, 'I was asked by Colonel Terzitch, commanding our division, to take you to our last position.' We walked side by side in silence and then came out on a plateau. 'That is our last position, Monsieur,' said the Serbian officer. 'We are on Ossietz plateau. The two others you see a hundred yards away over there are the plateaux Vaborats and Michavoltaz, which were just taken from us.'

Men of Thermopylæ

"I saw no soldiers and asked 'where is your line?' 'There it comes,' replied the officer. I saw debouching from a little wood, one by one, with a dignity that brought tears to my eyes, 150 men whom, on this great plateau, Serbia had opposed to embattled Germany.

"'On retiring from Vaborats an hour ago,' said the captain, 'those 150 hid in the wood. Now they are coming out to face the enemy.' The lieutenant in command took a few steps into a cornfield and shouted a command to his men. They lay down on the edge of a field without a word or a side-long glance and deliberately raised their rifles.

Artillery Too Strong

"For sixteen days with their three five, six and ten-inch guns and their rest, the Germans had been blazing away on this front. They never found on this line a larger number of men than those 150 brave fellows before our eyes but they had not yet succeeded in preventing the Serbians from seeing the blue line of their Danube when they raised their heads.

"'Two days ago it was quite different,' my guide informed me. 'So many shells have fallen upon it that its form is completely changed.' I watched those 150 Serbians who had moved for half an hour, but were gazing steadfastly at the iron curtain creeping up to them, with nothing to pierce it but their rifles. No, I am wrong. They had also a proud consciousness of their heroism. They despise these Germans who fight only from behind ramparts."

The French Troops Improve Their Position

SUDDEN CRISIS IN THE SHELL INQUIRY

FRENCH POSITIONS NEAR VERDUN ARE IMPROVED UNDER HEAVY FIRE

Official Communique Reports Progress---German Losses Heavy in Yesterday's Fighting on the Dead Man's Hill Sector---French Troops Repulse a Heavy Reconnaisance Aimed at a French Post in Apremont Forest.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 4.—The French positions were improved while a violent bombardment was going on in the whole region west of the Meuse, from Avocourt to Cumieres. The War Office reported that the German losses were heavy in yesterday's fighting on the Dead Man's Hill sector.

On the east bank of the Meuse bombardments occurred around Vaux, but there were no important infantry clashes. East of St. Mihiel, south of Verdun French troops repulsed a strong enemy reconnaissance aimed at a French post in Apremont Forest.

The French artillery not only is backing up the British front in Northern France, but is also active on that portion of the line held by the Belgians, to-day's official statement revealed. During last night's fighting the French gunners destroyed a German works at the Grand Dune along the Belgian seacoast, blowing up a German munitions depot.

Peace By Fall German Belief

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 26 (by mail), May 4.—Though there is unquestionably a strong undercurrent of peace talk in Berlin at present, officials resent the intimation carried in a recent Washington news despatch that Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg had asked Ambassador Gerard to cancel his vacation plans in order to transmit peace offers from Germany. There is a general feeling among all classes in Germany that the war ought to end by fall. Some persons declare peace should be made by November. The impression prevails here that all belligerents would like to avoid another winter campaign.

Lloyds Post New Insurance Rates

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 4.—Indicating very strong belief that the war is beginning to draw to a close, Lloyds to-day posted new insurance rates, wagering only 1 to 3 that the war will not end before December 31, 1916. For several weeks the rate of insurance to guarantee against loss if the war ends by the end of the year has been advancing steadily until it is now almost prohibitive. There has been much speculation as to whether brokers have any substantial reason for their action.

A DESPATCH FROM BERLIN

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, May 4.—Russian revolutionists have started a great fire in Moscow which spread to the Administrative Buildings and is still raging, according to Stockholm despatches to-day.

Three Rebel Leaders Executed

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, May 4.—It was confirmed from official sources to-day that only three rebel leaders were executed yesterday. They were, Pearce, Clark and MacDonough. James Connolly, reported to have been executed, is in prison badly wounded. Large sums of German money have been seized on the Irish rebel leaders.

BERLIN, May 4.—The War Office admitted that French troops gained a foothold in an advanced German post on the southwest slope of Dead Man's Hill.

Special Meeting of Smith Council

Contract Awarded For Grading —Township and City Compromise in Respect to Account for Roadwork

A special meeting of the council of Smith was held in the county council chamber, Peterboro, on Saturday, Apr. 29th at 1 o'clock. All the members were present with Reeve McKee presiding.

Three tenders were received for grading: John McManus at $6.90; Louis Fowler at $7; and M. F. Crough at $8 per day. Mr. John McManus' tender was accepted.

Mr. H. C. Stabler, Peterboro, addressed the council and requested that a quit claim deed be given to Mr. Jno. Sanderson, owner of V. L. W. plan 32, E.C.R. He said that this lot was sold by error in 1903 for non-payment of taxes. Reeve McKee promised to look into the matter and would report later.

Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Board of Works of the Peterboro City Council, and City Engineer Parsons, interviewed the council re the boundary roads, accounts. After considerable discussion it was decided that the township allow the city $40 for work done on Smith street during the season 1915.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

The treasurer was instructed to pay the following accounts:

W. A. Bell, work on roads	$ 8.75
H. Mitchell, care water trough	10.00

Robt. Freeburn, work on road	40.00

Fall of Show 10 Years Ago

Sleighs Were Out on May 4th, 1906 —Snow a Foot Deep

Just ten years ago to-day according to Mr. L. J. Picard there was a fall of snow, sufficient for sleighing and sleighs and cutters were running about during the day. He appears to be correct as two young men had arranged to run a special train to Toronto to see the opening International League game but an awakening up the morning of the 4th of May found a foot or more of snow on the ground where none had been the night before.

SIX MEN AND THREE WOMEN WERE KILLED IN ZEPPELIN RAID

Nineteen Men and Eight Women Were Injured—Damage Effected Was Mostly Broken Glass in a Store-house and a Few Cottages

ZEPP DESTROYED

LONDON, May 4.—The Zeppelin L-20 has been completely destroyed and driven ashore on the western side of Hafso Firth, Norway, according to advices from Stavanger. Some of the crew were rescued.

The Zeppelin L-20 passed north of Sandnaes about ten o'clock in the morning, says a Reuter despatch from Stavanger. She was flying at a low altitude and was in a damaged condition. Boats put out to her assistance and the commander and one seaman were rescued and taken to a hospital.

Broken in Two.

The Zeppelin was then driven over the hilltops and against a hillside. Its after-body broke in two and part of it fell to the ground. Some of the crew jumped or were hurled out.

The Zeppelin then rose a little and was driven westward, but the bag of the derigible collapsed in the centre and the airship descended rapidly.

A torpedo boat, which had been following along the coast, went to its assistance and rescued three men still in the cabin. A fourth man had jumped out shortly before.

Of the rescued men, three officers and two non-commissioned officers were brought ashore; the whereabouts of the rest of the crew is not known.

The Zeppelin was completely destroyed and driven ashore on the western side of the Firth, near its outlet to the sea.

The following official statement was issued on last night's raid:

"The Zeppelin raid last night covered a considerable extent of the eastern coast. At least 5 or 6 airships actually crossed the shore.

"Reports from reliable observers made at various times during the night at many points, some as far distant as Rattray Head, Scotland, and down to the north coast of Norfolk, would point to the possibility of a greater number of airships having been employed off our coasts. The enemy however made only two attempts to penetrate inland.

"About one hundred bombs were dropped, scattered over many localities.

"In only a single locality did the raiders cause any casualties or effect much damage. In this case the bombs amounted to twelve explosive and four incendiary, and eighteen houses were damaged.

Thirty-Six Casualties.

"The casualties totalled six men—one of them a soldier — and three women killed, and nineteen men, including three soldiers, and eight women injured—a total of thirty-six.

"The remaining seventy odd bombs caused only two casualties, one soldier and one child slightly injured.

"The damage effected—on a storehouse and a few cottages—was mostly broken glass.

"The raiders only twice came within range of any anti-aircraft artillery. On both occasions they retreated out of range without delay."

ELIZABETH SPENCER RECITAL

with a few additional numbers will be repeated on the Edison Diamond Disc to-morrow (Friday) evening, at 8 o'clock, in the recital room of the J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte Street. The complete programme will be given in Friday's papers.

Sartorial.

The village "Smart Alec" had interrupted the "orator of the day" several times too many.

That distinguished gentleman paused, and fixed his gaze upon the youth, with an expression of benevolence.

"Son," he said, "I don't believe Solomon's overcoat would make you a vest."

OUTSIDE PLATOONS ARE WELCOMED BY THE 93rd BATTALION

Norwood and Havelock Detachments Arrived Yesterday and Lakefield and Apsley Platoons Are Due To-day---Send-off at Norwood--To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The 93rd Battalion was augmented yesterday by the arrival of the Havelock and Norwood Platoons, D Company. To-day the Apsley and Lakefield platoons will be here and as all the men who are out on farming furlough have been ordered to report for duty on Monday, the first of next week will see the Battalion completely mobilized and hard at work preparing for their advent into camp. The Havelock and Norwood men in charge of Capts. Neilson and Thompson and Lieuts. Hatton and Worth, arrived on the afternoon C. P. R. train, yesterday, accompanied by the Bugle Band of the 93rd which had gone down to Havelock on Tuesday. They were met at the station by the Battalion and escorted to the Armouries, where the Peterborough members of the 93rd greeted their Norwood and Havelock comrades with a round of hearty cheering. Supper was ready when the parade was dismissed, and after the meal blankets were issued to the newcomers and their bunks were allocated. The detachment which arrived yesterday numbered eighty men, a number having been left behind in Havelock, suffering from mumps, while others are out on farm leave, and do not report until Monday. The newcomers are a good-looking lot of men and will fit into the Battalion nicely.

HAVELOCK'S GOOD-BYE.

The Havelock Standard says: Havelock's splendid platoon of soldiers left town on Tuesday en route for Norwood, to the accompaniment of the stirring strains of the 93rd Bugle Band from Peterborough, who came down on the noon train, and to the cheers and flag waving of our citizens and the singing of patriotic songs by the school children, who marched with the boys to the West End. Our soldier boys made a splendid showing as they marched cheerfully and gaily away, and "The Standard" joins in the prayer and hope of all their friends, that they may all come back to us safe and sound when their duty is done.

A FIELD KITCHEN.

The Norwood Register says: A few days ago the suggestion was made—and a very wise one, too, we think—that instead of making individual gifts to the departing soldiers that the municipalities from which the men have been enlisted cooperate in the purchase of a field-kitchen for the men of "D" Company, 93rd Battalion. The matter has already been brought before some of the members of the councils of adjoining municipalities and approved, and it is likely that action will be taken in the near future to secure the full co-operation of the municipalities concerned. At the meeting in the town hall on Tuesday evening mention of the suggestion was made by the chairman and a resolution was moved by Mr. E. P. Cuffe, seconded by Mr. G. A. Brethen, appointing Reeve Squire and Mr. J. B. Pearce a committee to take the matter up with the various municipalities and try and secure cooperation.

The cost of the complete outfit, when divided up among the five municipalities in proportion to assessment, will not be burdensome to any, and the gift will be one that will be appreciated and enjoyed by the men, and will add much to their comfort and convenience on the field.

FAREWELL AT NORWOOD

The Norwood Register says:

The town hall was filled to overflowing with people from all parts of the community, on Tuesday evening, to bid the officers and members of the local platoon of the 93rd battalion and their compatriots from Havelock adieu and wish them Godspeed on the eve of their departure for battalion headquarters at Peterborough. The Havelock platoon, headed by the bugle band of the 93rd battalion, marched over from our sister village during the afternoon, arriving about 4.20 o'clock. They are a fine looking body of men—nearly as good looking as the Norwood boys—and the two platoons make up a splendid company of soldiers.

Reeve R. W. Squire occupied the chair and a number of brief addresses were delivered by the local and visiting clergymen and prominent citizens. The speeches were interspersed with patriotic songs by Miss Flossie Nicol and Miss Una A. Duffield; violin selections by Mrs. (Dr.) Cameron Wilson with piano accompaniment by Miss Pearce, and a piano duet by Mrs. E. C. Squire and Miss Reba Squire, all of which were heartily appreciated. The speakers were Messrs. J. B. Pearce and E. P. Cuffe, Rev. A. M. Irwin, Rev. E. J. Holland, Rev W. Peer and Rev. C. Waddell of town, Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, Rev. Rural Dean Fenton of Colborne, Rev. E. W. Pickford of Brighton, Lt.-Col. R. E. Birdsall and Captain Thomson and Neilson. We shall not attempt to give even a succinct report of each address, suffice it to say that all expressed themselves as proud of the boys who had the courage to volunteer at this critical time to serve their King and Country. The farewells were spoken in the best of hope that the boys would not only fulfill our highest expectations as representatives from Canada—as their brothers in arms had already done—but that all would be spared to return to their native land and to the hearts and homes of the loved ones and friends they were not leaving. Numerous complimentary references were made to Capt. Thomson, who has been in charge of the local platoon, and to his character and work in enlisting. It was felt that in him the men had a good and efficient officer, whose example was good, and in whom the men had every confidence.

CAPT BIRDSALL.

Toward the close of the meeting the Chairman had a very pleasant duty to perform, in extending a hearty welcome to Captain Everett Birdsall, who recently returned from the front. As the Captain emerged from behind the curtains he was received with great enthusiasm by the audience who rose to their feet and cheered, while someone in the audience started the old familiar stanza "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." One after another caught up the strain and soon hundreds joined in the song. As the last notes died away Reeve Squire drew from his pocket an address of welcome which he proceeded to read to Capt. Birdsall on behalf of the citizens of Norwood and Mrs. E. P. Cuffe at the appointed time, presented to him a beautiful gold-headed cane, which was suitably inscribed.

The Havelock and Norwood members of the 93rd Battalion who arrived yesterday brought with them a foot ball and the reputation of having a good soccer team. They will have a speedy chance of making good on the latter as No. 2 Platoon is already looking for a game with the "D" Company men.

The Havelock boys report they were given a fine send-off when they left home on Tuesday afternoon. The Havelock platoon brought a quantity of games, books and other articles presented to them by the citizens of the railway village.

Sergt. Herb O'Hearn of the Machine Gun section of the 93rd Battalion who has been in attendance at the Machine Gun school at Kingston has completed the course and returned home.

The Quartermaster's Department of the 93rd Battalion was busy this morning in issuing equipment and rifles to the members of the Havelock and Norwood Platoons.

At the Fair store where a specially fine list of Values were given it is the intention to repeat the list for Friday Bargains and augment it with others just as important. The ladies who expected to be down town yesterday to shop at Fair's need not be disappointed as the same advantages will be offered them to-morrow.

COMPULSION BILL HAS PASSED ITS FIRST READING

Passage in the House of Commons Was Loudly Cheered—One Suggestion Made That Ireland Should Be Included

A SPECIAL RESERVE

military bill for immediate general compulsion passed its first reading in the House of Commons to-day. Its passage was loudly cheered.

The debate revealed no very deadly opposition to the compulsion bill. The only interesting point was the suggestion by Colonel Craig that Ireland should be included.

Walter Hume, president of the Local Government Board, who was the sponsor for the bill, replied to this suggestion that there was no objection if the Nationalist members approved the idea and it found an echo in Ireland. Mr. Long hoped that the bill would be passed next week.

Speaking with reference to the provisions of the bill Mr. Asquith said that youths reaching the age of eighteen would be given a month's grace to enlist voluntarily. The same exemptions would be given as under the original bill.

A special reserve will be formed of men continuing in civil employment, who will be immediately available for service in case of emergency.

George Nicoll Barnes, one of the labour leaders in the house, expressed strong approval of the measure. He said that if the country had known the task of the allies 18 months ago it would have accepted compulsory service then.

Sudden Crisis in Shell Inquiry —Sir William Meredith Suggests Parliament Be Asked to Extend the Scope of the Investigation.

JOHNSTON GIVES UP

OTTAWA, May 4.—There was a sudden crisis at the Shell Enquiry just before noon to-day, when E. F. B. Johnston, the counsel for the opposition refused to continue the cross-examination of Brigadier-General Bertram, chairman of the defunct shell committee, when the commissioners ruled that questions relative to other than the four contracts being investigated were not in the scope of the enquiry. Sir Wm. Meredith advises that representations be made to Parliament to extend the scope of the enquiry. General Bertram has left the witness box.

To-day began with Mr. Johnston's examination of General Bertram, commencing with his relationship to the Bertram Engineering Works at Dundas. He took the General over main facts, he volunteered yesterday his holding one of the five shares which merely keep alive the old Bertram Co., whose tangible assets were bought by the American Nile, Bement Pond Company.

The General said that so far as profits from the holdings in the Nile, Bement, Pond Company were concerned there had been no dividends for four years, and he hasn't had reports for two years.

The issue came through an attempted inquisition as to the prices and profits of the early contracts about which General Bertram gave the main facts yesterday. The familiar objection was taken that they are not within the order-in-council governing the inquiry which Sir William sustained.

Mr. Johnston consulted with Mr. Carvell. They announced that application would be made for a virtually wide open inquiry and practically asked for an adjournment until Parliament or the Government, or whoever has the say, decides.

After hearing Chairman Meredith's directions and limitations as to what questions he could ask General Bertram and how they should be asked, Mr. Johnston, counsel for the opposition said: "I resent this, I might just as well not be here." Then followed more argument among the lawyers. Mr. Hellmuth said he had intended calling Colonel Allison, Mr. Yoakum, Sir Sam Hughes, and many other prominent witnesses, after General Bertram was through. Mr. Johnston said it was no use unless the scope of the enquiry was widened, and it was finally decided that Parliament would be asked for this. In the meantime the Commission went on with the examination of a minor witness, Mr. Orde, who was legal adviser for the shell committee.

This afternoon F. B. Carvell, M.P., representing G. W. Kyte, M.P., who made the charges in the House, Mr. Kyte himself, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the leader of the Opposition, and Mr. Johnston, met to decide whether the matter of widening the probe's scope could be brought up in the House of Commons this afternoon or to-morrow.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, MAY 4, 1916

MIGHT BE WORSE.

It is a somewhat humiliating but not a discouraging thing that the British garrison at Kut-el-Amara had to surrender on account of lack of food supplies, before the relieving forces held back by flooded grounds, could get to them. If the ground had been fit to march on and transport guns there would have been a different story to tell. As it is, the disaster might have been worse. If the surrendering troops had fallen into the hands of the Germans it would have been worse for them; they would have received the brutal treatment the Huns give their prisoners—especially British—of war. As it is the Kut-el-Amara garrison has only fallen into the hands of the Turks, who in their conduct of war, are amiable Christian gentlemen, compared with the Germans. The prisoners, for the short time they will be in the hands of the Turks, will be as well treated as the Turkish capacity of materia treatment may permit. It is pretty certain that the Russians will continue their march onward, and the Turks may be soon compelled to surrender themselves as well as their British prisoners. The blunder of the administrators of the Mesopotamia expedition is nowhere comparable with the blunder of the Kaiser in his mad enterprise against Verdun. The colossal failure at Verdun is a cost of failure, both in a military and political sense. The failure at Kut el-Amara is a simple blunder of no great military or strategic importance.

HEALTH FIRST.

"Safety first," is a good slogan in its place; but if it is not very closely related to the motto "health first," it is less important. The report of the school nurse, Miss Kennedy, to the Board of Education on Tuesday night was to the regrettably large number of defectives—through ill-health—in our schools, should set everybody, except, perhaps, the authorities, thinking. This is a matter that should be investigated. We are spending a good deal of money in maintaining schools for the benefit of our city children. Should we not spend money to provide that all children should be in a condition to get the benefit of the money expended in giving educational facilities? The problem is a broad one, involving economical, social and sanitary considerations. What are the conditions in the homes from which are sent school children bearing in their bodies evidences of slow starvation—improper or insufficient nourishment—or evidences of unskilled care or lack of cleanliness, and of all round insanitary conditions? The remedy of all these things makes a big problem. But one of these conditions at least the city authorities have power to partially and largely solve, that is the sanitary. The Board of Health work is not enough—it is too general. What a wanted is individual work, and this is in part provided by the Health Association. The city might well co-operate, by financial assistance with the work of the Association, and help it carry its beneficent functions to every individual home where there is need for improvement. The Association in doing this splendid work, which is fundamental and thorough as far as it can go, with the means at its command could do more if it had the power that [illegible] funds would give. If the Health Association were equipped with means to extend its work where ever the need presented, we should have less work for a school nurse, who, necessarily, can only deal with results, not causes.

CITY TREE PLANTING.

Arbor Day, which is to be observed in the Eastern Townships to-morrow, usually passes almost without notice in Montreal. There is no reason, however, why the people should not join with it in spirit, and at any rate consider whether they cannot help the good work of tree planting and tree conservation in their own immediate neighborhood.

[illegible] charming [illegible] for all visitors to be found in the splendid avenues of elms and maples with which the city is so grandly [illegible]. Unfortunately of late years the city has been gradually losing its distinction in this respect. Particularly is this the case with the elms. Avenues of trees hundreds of years old have been wholly or partially destroyed. The innate love of Canadians for maples has to some extent atoned for this loss, for in all the suburbs the planting of maples has proceeded apace.

Now that the buds of the trees are just beginning to burst, let us all celebrate Labor Day by planting or caring for our trees, or where either is impossible, by walking about the city with an eye for the beauty that trees create. Let us try to think what Dominion Square, Victoria Square, Sherbrooke or Dorchester streets, or Mount Royal or St. Helen Island parks would be without trees. Study means appreciation, and widespread appreciation means greater care in tree culture and conservation.—Montreal Herald.

It appears from the above that in the minds of Montrealers the maple is the preferable street tree. This preference for the maple is, perhaps, only a matter of taste or sentiment. Minds of rectilinear consistency and obsession for the symmetrical and formal, prefer the evenly balanced and rotund form of the maple; and sentiment tends to create preference for the maple, for its leaf is the emblem of Canada. Those who prefer variety and picturesque irregularity in tree foliage forms will prefer the graceful spread and droop of the elm, which, under nearly all circumstances, earns the poetical definition of Oliver Wendell Holmes—"a forest waving on a single tree." Apart from these considerations it is impossible to dogmatize between the elm and maple as to which is the better tree to plant, say, in Peterborough. These are soils in Peterborough—thin coatings of earth underlaid by gravel, where the maple cannot thrive—only for a few years. Its roots grow downward and soon reach the gravel substance and soon starve, grow shabby and die. On the contrary, the elm, being a surface feeder, its fibrous roots extend into the rich surface soil in whatever direction tree food can be found. Elm will thrive in soils where the maple won't grow, and also on any soil suitable to the maple. It is a longer lived tree than the maple, as a rule and can more easily be trained to higher growth of foliage and permit sunshine to reach underlying lawns. In any event it seems to be a small matter in Peterborough as to what kind of tree to plant, for tree planting appears to have become obsolete in this city. There is room for and need of, upon all our streets of the planting of hundreds of trees. The city authorities utterly neglect and ignore the matter. They leave it to private individuals to plant whatever trees are available, no matter how unsuitable, and at unsuitable distances, and at irregular lines. War, or no war, not a year should pass without the city planting a few hundred trees. One hundred dollars would cover the cost of planting 200 street trees. Why does the city neglect such trifling expenditure, which would not only add to the beauty of the city and its popularity as a residence place, but would increase the taxable, as well as absolute value of the property of the citizens? This year the School Board is doing its bit, but not quite enough. Part of the northern and western sides of the Collegiate Institute grounds are sorely in need of trees. King George school, built on a high and bleak place, needs trees badly. What are the authorities thinking about? Haven't they an eye above the mud and grubbing of the muddy streets? Have they no thought about the future—no thought for posterity? Or do they take the attitude of the man who refused to consider the claims of posterity because posterity had done nothing for him? Let them take to heart the reflection of the Montreal Herald, as quoted above, and apply it to ourselves. What would Peterborough be if public-spirited citizens in the past had not planted the splendid stand of street trees in the city, which, inadequate, as they are, to our possibilities, are our glory? What would Peterborough be without the trees in our parks and streets?"

THE AGONY OF BELGIUM.

Three millions of the seven million people in Belgium never get more than one meal a day, and that meal only consists of the equivalent of three thick slices of bread, and one pint of soup, made chiefly from vegetables. The authority for this statement is Mr. F. C. Walcott, a well-known American, who went to Belgium at the request of the Rockefeller Institute to investigate the work of the Neutral Commission of Relief, of which Mr. Herbert Hoover is chairman. Mr. Walcott's account of the condition of the Belgians is enough to move a heart of stone. He tells of these millions of people waiting in line three or four hours every day for the mere pittance of food described, some of them so poor that they have no protection against the weather. He pictures the misery of the children and the mental condition of a people who, for over eighteen months, have been deprived of all industry. And he sums up by saying that but for supplies of food sent in by the Americans and the British, acting together under the Neutral Relief Commission, there would be wholesale starvation in Belgium within two or three weeks. Mr. Walcott's statement is published in connection with an appeal for contributions to carry on the work by the National Committee for Relief in Belgium. We heartily commend this work to our readers, who may send contributions to the Belgian Relief Committee, 58 St. Peter Street, Montreal.—Montreal Herald.

THE PROBLEM OF OUR NECESSITOUS CANADIAN RAILWAYS

Once more the Government proposes to lay measures before the House for the advance of money to the Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, and once more these important measures are being brought in at the end of the session, when the national business must be rushed through in order to permit prorogation on schedule time. According to the announcement, the proposal is to loan the Canadian Northern $15,000,000 and the Grand Trunk Pacific $8,000,000, and the smashing argument to back up this proposal is that unless such aid is granted, the railways will be unable to meet their obligations, and will go into bankruptcy.

Without entering at all into the political aspect of the question of responsibility for these continued demands upon the Treasury, or of the political expediency of acceding to them, Canadians may well ask themselves whether they will continue to submit to the choice of these two alternatives, namely, to provide out of their own pockets the deficits of privately-owned railways or accept the responsibility of forcing those railways into the hands of receivers. They might also well ask themselves whether the bankruptcy of these roads would be such a calamity as is pictured, seeing that most of the railways in the United States have been through such an experience at one time or other of their history.

Another question that will present itself is whether the time has not come for the taking over of such dependent railways by the State. State ownership of railways, for the State now owns in the Intercolonial and the National Transcontinental a railway running all the way from Winnipeg to the winter ports of the Maritime Provinces. In every other Dominion in the Empire the railways are owned by the State, and in Great Britain itself State operation of the railways since the war has proved so satisfactory that Mr. Lloyd George has announced it will undoubtedly be continued after the war.

Canada, possibly, is not prepared to tackle this question now, either one way or the other, especially as the Canadian Pacific is understood to be prepared to fight the nationalization of its competitors with all its power, on the ground that it would be subjected to unfair competition. Nevertheless, the people must begin to give serious thought to the whole problem, even if the C.P.R. itself has to be nationalized with the others. The Toronto Globe goes so far as to suggest that this may be the solution after all, and that Parliament might then adopt a self-denying ordinance providing for the operation of Canada's railway (or a ten-year period by a Board of Railway experts, with Lord Shaughnessy as Chairman. The Globe adds:—"There would be reasonable assurance under these conditions that the inevitable deficit would be kept down to the smallest possible figure, and that the system would be operated efficiently."—Montreal Herald.

These Latest Style Rods Will Make Your Windows More Beautiful

AFTER housecleaning, don't put your curtains back on the old rods that sag in the middle—that are black and tarnished. Don't put them on new rods that will soon be in the same unsightly condition.

OUR FLAT RODS

ARE GUARANTEED NOT TO SAG OR TARNISH

They fit any window—make possible any draping effect from the simplest to the most elaborate. The rods themselves are concealed—this is entirely as it should be—and the graceful curved ends permit draping clear to the casing.

Our Flat Rods are easier to put up and take down—but never come down accidently. They cost very little more than cheap, flimsy rods, yet they will stay like new for years. They hold the headings erect. You will be delighted with the beautiful draping effects that they make possible. Let us show them to you in the Home Furnishing Department.

Str. Hamonic's Hatches Too Small To Admit of Unloading at Goderich

GODERICH, May 4.—The steamer Hamonic arrived in the harbour and docked beside the big elevator to unload a cargo of wheat, but her hatches were found to be too small to admit the "leg" and she had to turn out and head up the lake again for Port Huron, where she will be unloaded.

The "leg" is an affair with buckets on it which scoops and carries the grain up into the elevator.

The Hamonic was to have made regular trips here this summer, but will now probably have to patronize another port.

MAN'S KNEE FOR HER SEAT

Dignified Old Lady Used It—Tale is Quite Proper, Too.

The dignified old lady with sharp, bright eyes and a fluffy ruff that reached so high around her neck it got lost in her white hair entered the well-filled Belt Line car and looked for a seat. With a bird-like hop she stood before a small strip of red velvet cushion showing between two passengers. She looked, they looked, and then everyone squeezed a bit and the little old lady sat down in the narrow space.

A block or so farther on the lady decided to buy a paper from the boy at the corner. When the car had stopped she touched a big, burly laboror who was standing in front of her and said. "Would you sit in my seat and hold it for me until I get a paper?"

The man had a pretty good idea of just how much of him could be put into that little space, and the other passengers laughed too, but the little lady hurried to the door, quite unconscious of the smiling carload of people and the embarrassed man who stood with knee at her place, lest anyone should sit there.

With a bright little smile and a "I am sorry to have you get up again," the little lady claimed her seat and began reading her newspaper, while the laborer's smile was reflected on every face in the car.

Some Secrets That Could Not Be Kept

There was a time when the Turkish government imposed the death penalty on persons caught trying to smuggle out of the empire the best breeds of Angora goats. In 1881 a Californian, Doctor Bailey, bought four goats in Turkey, carried them on mules, camels, and in a closed carriage for some hundreds of miles, sheared off their luxuriant wool, rolled them in coal dust to make them look common and disreputable, and escaped with the Sultan's goats and a whole skin. The descendants of these goats are found on ranches in the West and Southwest, crossed with Angoras from South Africa and other parts of the world.

Once the government of China and Japan guarded with similar jealousy the exportation of the tea plant. Someone escaped with some seed or cuttings, however, some forty years ago, and the original plantation of smuggled tea plants is still flourishing in South Carolina.

Fifty years ago Brazil was engaged in an effort to keep the rubber tree in confinement in that empire. The seed was smuggled to Ceylon however, and for half a century East Indian planters have been perfecting the rubber tree until now the best plantations are there rather than in Brazil, and the Brazilians who want the best varieties send to Ceylon, Java and other Asiatic countries for their trees for planting.

The Sultan lost his goat, the Mandarins their tea, and the Dons their rubber tree; and in return Brazil has given the Asiatics the plague of the water hyacinth, and the Mongolians have sent us the San Jose scale, the gypsy moth, and several other pests.

There are at least two sides to the matter of free exchange, but it is one of the most fascinating subjects connected with agriculture.—'Farm and Fireside.'

ROAD WAS DEDICATED.

Old Waterfront Cart Track must be Kept Open.

Half a century ago quite a quantity of barley used to be shipped from the dock at Northport, on the south shore of the Bay of Quinte. To-day, however, there is but little in the way of shipments from the dock and a cart track that ran along the water front is little used. The owner of the lots fronting on the bay started to build a shed across the track on property that he thought was his own. The township of Sophiesburg promptly passed a resolution for the removal of the obstruction.

Mr. Justice Middleton gave judgment at Osgoode Hall dismissing the action of the owner James Sanderson, for the quashing of the bylaw. It is held that there had been dedication of the route as a road.

SCANDAL FAST TRAVELLER.

Wisconsin Professor Finds Flattery Second, Truth the Slowest.

Scandal travels 1,000 yards per second, according to Prof. Benjamin Snow, head of the University of Wisconsin's physics department. Prof. Snow bases his calculations upon observations made at the university.

Flattery has the second greatest speed, the professor finds, travelling from 400 to 800 yards in the same time. Truth, however, he declares, is slowest of all, moving only about two and a half yards per second. The computations, he said, were based on the speed of the sound of an alarm clock, which is zero.

49 Divorced Persons Married Last Year

There were 739 fewer marriages in Ontario in 1915 than the year before, the figures being 23,506 and 24,245. Nineteen divorced men and 30 divorced women were among the number in 1915. Fourteen of the divorced men married spinsters, two married widows, and three married divorced women. Twenty-one divorced women married bachelors, six married widowers, and three married divorced men. The number of widowers who again married was 1,480, while 1,078 widows were included in the total.

Three Months in Jail For Returned Soldier

Default of $300 Fine — He Bought Bottle of Liquor for a Soldier.

BROCKVILLE, May 3.—George Glover, a returned member of the first contingent, was sentenced to serve three months in jail by Magistrate Deacon in default of a fine of $300 for selling liquor without a license. Glover denied the charge, saying all he did was to accept one dollar and purchase a bottle for one soldier, from which he had a drink.

First Postage Stamp Made By An Editor

The postage stamp, the little gummed stamp issued by the government for the carrying of the mail, was the means of popularizing the sending of articles beyond anything else in the way of contribution, and an Englishman, James Chalmers, is responsible for having first conceived the idea.

Chalmers was born at Arbroath in 1782, and at an early age became a bookseller in Dundee, and later was a printer and publisher of the Dundee 'Chronicle.' In the year 1835 he applied himself to the acceleration of the mails, and mainly through his efforts the time for a letter to travel between London and Dundee was lessened by a day each way.

Then Chalmers turned his attention to reforms in the post-office system. He first drew out a sample of an adhesive stamp, had it set up in type and then printed a few gummed copies. These he exhibited to several merchants in Dundee in August, 1834.

These merchants thought so well of the scheme that Chalmers laid his plan before Robert Wallace, a member of parliament who was interested in post-office reform, and also took up the subject with Rowland Hill, one of the leading pioneers of the movement.

England was quick to adopt the adhesive stamp, according to a decree of December 21, 1839, and issued the first stamp for public use on May 6, 1840. A year later they were introduced into the United States and Switzerland and soon afterwards in Bavaria, Belgium and France.

Chalmers' idea was so much appreciated at home that on January 1st, 1846, at a public meeting of the citizens of Dundee he was presented with a silver claret mug, a salver and a purse of fifty sovereigns for his efforts in reducing the time for the requirements of the transit of mails and for his plans of a uniform postage rate and an adhesive stamp.

Ban Love-making at Hall of Fame

New York, May 2nd.

There's a tale to be told to ye amorous youth,
'Tis filled with a grief that was ne'er so uncouth,
No more shall ye stride through yon long lovers' lane,
The time has arrived when your spooning must wane.
There's only one cause, and it's John who's too blame,
For lighting at night, New York's Hall of Fame.

Hearken, ye sweethearts, cooers and spooners, who reside in Upper New York City, especially ye, who on fine spring and sultry summer evenings, have been in the habit of giving vent to your feelings on the forty acre campus of the New York University at University Heights. Tread not, particularly in any of the secluded retreats of the world famous Hall of Fame, for you will encounter therein a sad fate at the hands of John, the watchman, burly son of the Emerald Isle.

Mr. Quigley, known to the students only as John, has been an omnipresent figure for more than two decades at all undergraduate festivities at New York University. His brawny arms have left telling impressions on pestiferous, scheming and night prowling students.

John, it seems, has been in secret communication with the men of renown—authors, teachers, scientists, jurists, statesmen—who hold reserved seats in the hall of fame, and from these celebrities has learned that they like he are weary of the many fickle tales told in rhyme, blank verse, verse libre and prose, in the black darkness of the night.

Hence, there will be no more black darkness. The Hall of Fame has lights to be sure, but these lights George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, Ralph Waldo Emerson, and all the rest, have seen only on several occasions. Henceforth and hereafter, however, they will glow every evening, and what is more, according to John himself, he is to have an assistant, also a Celt, whose specific duty it will be to guard the sacredness of the Hall of Fame.

"Bejabers," said John last night. "You can't keep those little rascals from McCracken's Hall of Shame by yerself. Chase them out, turn yer back, and they're in again. It's the cats, however, that seem to have more love for each other than the boys and lassies. They are the bothersome creatures."

THE NAVY HAS A SHORT WAY WITH THE SUN

A Grand Fleet chaplain gives a delightful account in the Westminster of the Navy's Short Way with the Sun. He thus describes the ritual of Sunset:

"To begin at the beginning, the correct time is made by wireless from Greenwich each day, and with this to aid him the navigator of the flagship works out the exact moment at which the sun is due to set. This is calculated at the mean solar time, not the apparent time, so that the ceremonies are frequently observed while a part of the sun is still able to watch what is being done in his honour. The idea is that if he hasn't set he ought to have—and it is by this inveterate habit of looking at things as they ought to be rather than as they are that (well, anybody that knows can complete this sentence; I personally, am not convinced that the world of it is quite good).

"Then, five minutes before the time, a flag is hoisted in the flagship and certain 'repeating ships' do the same for the benefit of such vessels as are not in sight of the flag. As soon as this is hoisted, there is intense agitation up on the signal bridge, every signalman having his eye glued on this 'preparative.' At the same time one of their number reports the matter to the Officer-of-the-Watch, who in turn reports to the Captain, with the formula 'five minutes to sunset, sir.' the captain replying 'Carry on, please'—thus giving the sun the official permission to set by order of the Admiralty.

"The five minutes pass. Suddenly the ships do likewise, and in every ship of the fleet an excited signalman bawls loudly to the Officer-of-the-Watch—'Sunset, sir!' The bugler sounds the 'Still.' Everyone on deck drops his work or his recreation, and stands directly to attention, facing the colours. All officers raise their hand to the salute. The assembled buglers sound a long call, weird and plaintive, a lament for the dying day, and the White Ensign comes slowly down. Then sound the two sharp notes of the 'Carry-on' — and sunset is over.

"And when during the summer in Northern latitudes the sun takes up the ridiculous altitude of refusing to set till midnight, if at all, the Navy has a short way with its recalcitrant god — like those West Africans who beat the image of their deity when he refuses to send rain; the order is issued. 'Sunset will be at such-and-such a time'—and if the sun will not fall in with the Navy's ideas, well, that is his lookout! Like many another servant of the Navy, he is told to retire at a time when he feels he has a lot more work in him. But he continues to shine on the ship all the same, just as many a man 'retired for age' is now digging out as hard as ever for the god of the Service.

Sunset is just about to sound off as I write; let me go on deck and once more see that sight which never loses its impressiveness, and pray while the bugle peals forth its sad notes that the sun may never set upon our Banner of the Cross — the White Ensign."

Re-creation of Elizabeth Spencer's Voice Dumfounds Big Audience

LAST NIGHT at Collegiate Hall over five hundred invited guests listened to the most remarkable concert ever presented in Peterborough.

Miss Elizabeth Spencer, the famous New York mezzo soprano, appeared before the hushed audience, and as her liquid notes poured forth the exquisite melody of Marshall's "I Hear You Calling Me", the crowd wondered.

Were there two Elizabeth Spencers on the stage? No! Then whence came this second voice—the actual voice of Elizabeth Spencer—with tones as true and pure as those coming from the throat of the real Miss Spencer? She was actually singing a duet with herself.

The wonder turned to amazing realization.

One of the two voices was coming from Thos. A. Edison's Laboratory Re-creation of Music—the New Edison Disc.

But which was the real voice and which the re-creation? To close your eyes made it absolutely impossible to detect the slightest difference. It seemed absurd. No mere instrument could do this. No lifeless object could thus reproduce a human voice. There must be some trick.

Elizabeth Spencer Singing a Duet With Herself

But wait! Again Miss Spencer appeared. Wallace's "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer", an encore number, caused the same wonderment. One selection after another thrilled the audience.

Which was Elizabeth Spencer? The audience listened intently to distinguish the "flesh and blood" voice from the voice in the

New Edison Diamond Disc

No longer any doubt or uncertainty. This was actual re-creation of music beyond all compare, and the audience voiced its enthusiastic approval in thunderous applause.

Nothing to compare with such a concert has ever been heard in Peterborough before. May never be again. It will live long in the memories of those who heard it.

But you can hear these same voices, these same selections—any day in our Edison store—and every day in your own home once you own an Edison.

A Free Concert

Hear it TO-DAY. The programme presented last night will be repeated in our recital hall on the Edison, Friday evening, May 5, at 8 o'clock. You are invited.

Boys Visited 93rd Headquarters

Y. M. C. A. Boys Learn Some of the Internal Mysteries of a Machine Gun

Yesterday afternoon over one hundred members of the Y.M.C.A. had the pleasure of observing the life of a soldier in barracks when they visited the headquarters of the 93rd Battalion.

By kind permission of Lieut.-Col. Johnston, the boys were shown the barracks, and under the guidance of Capt. Rollins, Lieut. Crisp and Lieut. Might, had the different places of interest in the barracks explained to them. The most interesting event was the demonstration of the working of the machine gun by Lieut. Crisp. The boys were taken to the recreation room, where Lieut. Crisp, who is an expert in talking to boys, and who has charge of the machine gun squad, explained the different ways in which the gun was operated. The gun was taken apart, and as each piece was taken from the gun it was handed to the boys for inspection. At the close of the demonstration a vote of thanks was tendered Lieut. Crisp for his splendid lecture.

Next Wednesday the boys will visit the Wm. Hamilton Co. to witness shell making.

The splendid programme which the young ladies and junior girls of the Y.W.C.A. presented to the public Tuesday night will be repeated this evening in the Y.M.C.A. Gymnasium. Very pleasant relations exist between these two institutions, and the Y.M.C.A. take great pleasure in placing at the disposal of the Y.W.C.A. their rooms and gymnasium for their exhibition.

Boys' cycle trip to Chemong Park on Saturday morning at 9.30.

RAN AMUCK, SHOT 18.

Four Victims of a Crazed Chinese Policeman were killed.

He fired upon Chas. Williams, the marshal of the American consulate, but missed him, the bullet slightly wounding a lady Williams was endeavouring to protect. An English sergeant shot and wounded the mad man who was taken to a hospital.

Miss Spencer's Audience Would Have Stayed Until Morning Under Her Spell

The magic of voice re-creation as perfected by Thomas A. Edison charmed and bewildered the large audience that attended by invitation the private recital given by Miss Elizabeth Spencer of New York in the Collegiate Institute hall last night. It is sufficient to say of her vocal gifts and attainments and of her achievements in the music world that she is one of the artists on the Edison staff. In short she has sung into the Edison talking machine, which has not only reproduced but re-created her voice. This was repeatedly demonstrated during last night's programme. She sang in unions with her voice from the machine so effectively that it sound as one voice. Occasionally she paused, suspending her notes, and it was only by the evidence of her lips that the vocal illusion was comprehended. Of course the variation of volume assisted the audience through this phase of Miss Spencer's programme but one incident amply proved that the vocal perfection of the Edison machine had completely deceived the audience. This was in the last, the familiar "Silver Threads Among the Gold". All the lights were turned off and the darkness nullified the sense of sight and hearing was left to its own limited resources. Just what part of the first verse and chorus Miss Spencer sang she alone knows. The incident mentioned above occurred at this point.

The opening notes of the second verse were continued. Apparently as one voice. Occasionally she passed both voices were singing together. The light suddenly flashes up revealing Miss Spencer returning to the stage. The "re-created voice" had sung those opening bars alone. Such is the baffling wizardry of Edison.

Miss Spencer's numbers with her recreated voice were the lullaby from Jocelyn, Victor Herbert's "Toyland" "My Heart at thy sweet voice" from Samson and Delila, "The Moon Drops Low", "I hear you calling me" "Silver Threads," "Happy Days".

Most of these Miss Spence sang in union with her recreated voice but in "Happy Days" she took the contralto part thus singing a duet with herself. She repeated this number as an encore and gave an extra "Sweet spirit hear my prayer" as a last encore. It was a beautiful number and the crowd appeared loth to go home.

That was one audience whose musical appetite had been merely whetted, and at that it was after ten o'clock when Mr. John Allan played "God Save the King".

There was no doubt but most of those present felt they owed Mr. J. M. Greene who arranged the concert a debt of gratitude for the splendid evening he provided. One could easily rhapsodize over Miss Spencer's voice and the art with which she uses it.

Mr. Abraham Bond, violinist of New York, demonstrated the success with which violin music has been recreated by Mr. Edison. His numbers were the "Ave Maria" of both Schubert and Gounod. In the former he played in union with Mr. Carl Flisch's re-creation and in the latter with Mr. Albert Spaulding's obligato to Marie Rappold's glorious soprano. Mr. Bond is himself an accomplished violinist. His performance was a complete illustration of the phonograph's effective recreation of string music. He also played Dvorak's "Humoresque" and a "Meditation" from "Thais".

Two other numbers demonstrated the recreation of a piano solo and an orchestral presentation of "The Carnival of Venice" in which solo variations were played by a flute, clarinet, clarinet duet, bassoon.

Altogether it was a most delightful concert, satisfying in every respect. Miss Spencer and Mr. Bond came directly to Peterborough from New York. They are in Haileybury to-night and in Ottawa on Friday. Next week they will play in Montreal and then proceed to the Maritime provinces.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine loosen the cough loosen, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. A. M. Morey, Montreal, P.Q., writes: "I wish to make my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured me when a friend said could help put me on the grave."

Judgment Has Been Reserved

Judgment has been reserved in the case of Drain versus the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association representing an appeal by defendants and cross-appeal by plaintiff from judgment of Middleton, J., of March 30, 1916. Argument of appeal was resumed yesterday in Osgoode Hall and concluded.

This is an action in which plaintiff seeks to restrain defendants from enforcing new regulations affecting members of many years standing, among which is an increase in fees.

TAKEN AS OMEN OF PEACE

Church Bell at Nay Fell, as on Two Previous Occasions.

A curious accident which has just happened at Nay, a little Pyrenecan village far from the noise of battle, about which superstitious people are talking, is narrated by Mr. John N. Raphael, the special correspondent of the London Daily Express in Paris.

Twice in the history of France, he says, the big church bell of Nay has fallen without being damaged. It fell from the belfry exactly three months before the Crimean War ended, and it fell from the belfry again three months before the end of the war of 1870. It has just fallen a third time, again, without damage, and the superstitious are wondering whether this time the fall of the church bell in Nay belfry is an omen of peace.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SAINT GEORGE OF ENGLAND

His Day, April 23rd.

Saint George he was a fighting man, as all the tales do tell;
He fought a battle long ago, and fought it wondrous well:
With his helmet and his hauberk and his good cross-hilted sword,
Oh, he rode a-slaying Dragon to the glory of the Lord.
And when his time on earth was done he found he could not rest
Where the year is always Summer in the Islands of the Blest,
So back he came to earth again to see what he could do,
And they cradled him in England—
In England, April England—
Or, they cradled him in England where the golden willows blew!

Saint George he was a fighting man and loved a fighting breed,
And whenever England wants him now he's ready to her need;
From Creey field to Neuve Chappelle, he's there with hand and sword,
And he sailed with Drake from Devon to the glory of the Lord.
His arm is strong to smite the wrong and break the tyrant's pride;
He was there when Nelson triumphed, he was there when Gordon died;
He sees his Red-Cross ensign float on all the winds that blow,
But ah! his heart's in England—
In England, April England—
His heart it dreams of England where the golden willows grow.

Saint George was a fighting man; he's here and fighting still,
While any wrong is yet to right or Dragon yet to kill;
And faith! he's finding work this day to rust his war-worn sword,
For he's strafing Huns in Flanders to the glory of the Lord!
Saint George he is a fighting man, but, when the fighting's past,
And dead amid the trampled fields the fiercest and the last
Of all the Dragons earth has known beneath his feet lies low,
Ah, his heart will turn to England—
In England, April England—
He'll come home to rest in England where the golden willows blow.

You Can Gain Weight and Strength

This Case Proves the Merit of FERROZONE

"I was in poor health nearly all last winter," writes Mrs. Cross of Wakefield, Ont. "My appetite was variable, I was weak and unfit for work. I suffered a good deal from nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart. My digestion was generally out of order. By springtime I had lost flesh, color, and had a bad cough. The doctor didn't help me very much, so I decided to try Ferrozone. It did me ever so much good in one week. I gained strength ,looked and felt a lot better. When I had used six boxes of Ferrozone I weighed myself and found a gain of fifteen pounds. Ferrozone rebuilt my constitution, and made me a new woman. TURNBULLS

Mr. J. Penrose Has Resigned After 28 Years' Service

After exactly twenty-eight years of service with the G. T. R., Mr. John Penrose has resigned his position at the "diamond," and in future will devote his entire time to the conduct of his flourishing grocery business at the corner of Sherbrooke Street and Penrose Avenue.

Born in Mariposa, Mr. Penrose entered the employ of the G.T.R. on May Day, twenty-eight years ago, beginning as a brakeman with Lindsay as headquarters. Within a year he had lost his left arm in an accident at Madoc Junction. He was coupling an engine to a freight car when he slipped on an icy place, severing his arm and cutting short the career he had hopefully entered upon. Some months later he resumed work with the railway company, but this time in charge of the swing bridge at the Locks. He spent a year there and was then sent to Stirling, where he remained eight years. Returning to Peterborough he has established a record to be proud of at the local "diamond" during the past eighteen years. At this intersection with the C. P. R. three or four wrecks have taken place, but none of them occurred while he was on duty. He merely regards this as the play of fortune in his favour, but it is significant that he has never been before the Superintendent either for a sin of commission or omission during his years of service. In other words, Mr. Penrose quits the Company with a clean sheet, and doubtless a host of friends on both the railways.

On Monday last, May 1st, he sent in his resignation, to give all his attention to his grocery customers.

With Russians To Crush Huns Is To Work For God

Wonderful Effects Seen Already and This Is Only Beginning.

"With the Russians this is God's war. In their scores of millions, they are united as one man and determined to fight and keep on fighting for twenty years, if needs, be, to bring the Hun to his knees."

So said R. L. Newman, expert naval construction and munitions engineer, who, since the outbreak of the war, has been retained in a consultative capacity by the naval and military authorities of the Russian Empire. Mr. Newman has just returned from Petrograd, where he was necessarily in a position to secure much inside information as to the progress made by the Russians in the matter of recruiting, equipping and munitioning of their forces both on land and sea. Much of this information cannot be made public in view of the confidential nature of Mr. Newman's work, but he declares that Russia is now in tip top shape to carry on the war indefinitely. Mr. Newman was for years naval construction expert with the American Navy, and was associated with the designing, construction and equipping of the squadron. He was also retained in an advisory capacity by the Canadian Government when the question of a Canadian navy was on the tapis. He has come to Canada on a business trip of brief duration, and contemplates returning forthwith to resume his work at Russian headquarters.

Arms Well Supplied.

"The Russians, like the British, are taking this war seriously," he said to The Star. "On the surface one does not perceive anything much out of the ordinary. In Petrograd, for instance, one does not see any great indication that the country is at war, except for the continuous marching and drilling of soldiers, and the arrival of the wounded. One notes, however, that throughout the Empire there has been a great awakening. The war undoubtedly caught the Russians unprepared just as it did the English. Lack of munitions and transportation facilities were at the bottom of the retreat in Galicia, Poland and other places on the eastern front. But the Russians have risen magnificently to the occasion, so that at the present time their own home factories are turning out ammunition for their field pieces at the rate of 2,000,000 a month, or $6,000,000 a year, this being sufficient to keep their armies well supplied. Apart from this, they have given out contracts for munitions, involving scores of millions of roubles, and are being continuously supplied with the requisite munitions by the United States and Canada.

"At the outbreak of the war, Russia was confronted by great difficulties, owing to the fact that practically all her experts in munitions, both naval and military matters were Germans, who soon abandoned their posts and fled to the Fatherland. Again, just at that time, there were several dreadnaughts which were nearing completion, but which were useless, as the guns and other equipment had been ordered in Germany and could not be delivered. These however, are now being completed, the needed equipment being ordered from Pittsburg and other American manufacturers.

"I cannot discuss the merits of the navy, my work being of a confidential nature, but I may say that I have been of service to the Government, in the matter of submarine construction, to cite one phase of the work.

A Great Awakening.

"As to the immediate consequence of the war, which every Russian is confident will eventually result in a crushing defeat of the Central Powers, I think that there will be a great awakening. It has already begun. One undoubted effect will be the restoration of the Constitution granted the people, but later withdrawn by the Czar. As matters are, it is simply marvellous to note the great spread of education throughout the Empire. In Petrograd, at one university alone, there are no less than 7,000 women who are following studies preparatory to their entry into one or other of the liberal professions, and the same condition prevails in all other centres. When one considers that the women, even in such great numbers, constitute but a small minority as compared with the men following similar studies, one may imagine what will be the widespread effect of this enlightenment. While in various parts of the Empire, I have on many occasions been ashamed of myself, in meeting Russians, young and old, men and women, of the highest culture, who could converse fluently in three or four languages, whilst I, in addition to my English, had but a poor smattering of French."

Mr. Newman had the pleasure of meeting the Czar, and also paid a visit, on business, to the headquarters of Grand Duke Nicholas. This was at the time of the retreat through Poland, which he attributes solely to the lack of munitions and supplies. The saddest sights he witnessed there were those of the flying refugees, and the wounded being brought back to the base hospitals.

"And yet, these poor fellows," said Mr. Newman, 'mangled as they were in numerous instances, did not lose spirit. One saw the hospital trains pulling through in scores, and at the windows the wounded greeted all comers with a smile, a song, or the waving of a handkerchief, an old shirt or any other thing available. That smile typifies the Russian of today. It is the smile of victory anticipated—the smile of a whole people determined to lay down their lives to the last man to crush a ruthless foe."

PLANTING A TREE

He who plants a tree,
Plants a hope.
Rootlets up through fibres blindly grope;
Leaves unfold into horizons free,
So man's life must climb
From the clods of time
Unto heavens sublime.
Canst thou prophesy, thou little tree,
What the glory of thy boughs shall be?

He who plants a tree,
Plants a joy;
Plants a comfort that will never cloy;
Every day a fresh reality,
Beautiful and strong,
To whose shelter throng
Creatures blithe with song.
If thou couldst but know, thou happy tree,
Of the bliss that shall inhabit thee!

He who plants a tree,
He plants peace.
Under its green curtain jargons cease;
Leaf and zephyrs murmur soothingly;
Shadows soft with sleep
Down tired eyelids creep,
Balm of slumber deep,
Never hast thou dreamed, thou blessed tree,
Of the benediction thou shalt be.

He who plants a tree,
He plants youth;
Vigor won for centuries, in sooth;
Life of time, that hints eternity.
Boughs their strength uprear,
New shoots every year
On old growths appear.
Thou shalt teach the ages, sturdy tree,
Youth of soul is immortality.

He who plants a tree,
He plants a love.
Tents of coolness spreading out above
Wayfarers he may not live to see.
Gifts that grow are best;
Hands that bless are best,
Plant: Life does the rest!
Heaven and earth help him who plants a tree,
And his work its own reward shall be.—Anonymous.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

A Representative Gathering — Ex-Soldier Was Discharged

A farmer, an ex-soldier and an Italian made up the list of delinquents in this morning's police court. All three pleaded guilty to a charge of being drunk in a public place and with the exception of the ex-soldier were fined two dollars. The ex-soldier has made more than one attempt to enlist in the Canadian Expeditionary Force but is over age. He has served between twenty and thirty years in the army and is prepared to rejoin the colours. He was discharged.

Magistrate Dumble made a futile attempt to pronounce the name of the Italian. "You have to stand on your head to say that" observed his worship.

GIRLS TOO BASHFUL

Make Inquiries Over 'Phone Regarding Man Wishing to Wed.

"Ambitious but bashful" is the characterization Joseph Mounts, secretary to Chief of Police John J. O'Connor, of St. Paul, Minn., made of a St. Paul young woman after a day of telephone calls regarding Elmer Johnson, rancher, of Sidney, Mon., who wrote to the Chief making an offer of matrimony to a suitable St. Paul girl.

"Many girls," said Mr. Mounts "called me asking about Johnson but none would give me her name. I think the girls are passing up a good thing, because I think the man is on the level."

Johnson has 320 acres of fertile Montana land two miles from a railroad, and says he is "well fixed."

"Some of the girls talked real fine, too," added Mr. Mounts, "and if Johnson had heard them maybe he would have flied to look them over. It's too bad they are so bashful."

It was pointed out that altogether they had had to recruit more than thirteen hundred men before they could complete the 119th Battalion.

VOICED "ETERNAL SOUL OF A FRIENDLY PEOPLE"

PARIS, May 4.—President Poincare sent a telegram to King George on the occasion of the Shakespeare tercentenary. PUT OFF JOB 50 TIMES

Instead of Grubbing Up Sprouts Kansan Cuts Down Trees.

When Charles Buck, of Okalosa, Kan., completed loading four cars of cottonwood logs for shipment this week, he finished a task that he had set out for himself about fifty years ago.

Buck cut the trees from a two-acre tract that he had plowed in the spring of 1859. As that was a wet year, there were no crops planted on the freshly plowed ground. The following year was also wet, and again no crops were planted, but a "mighty good stand of young cottonwoods had sprung up."

Year after year Buck had put it grubbing out these trees, until this spring, almost fifty years later, he finally decided to get rid of them.

THREE GENERATIONS ATTEND OHIO COLLEGE

Cleveland, O., May 3.—Three generations of the same family in school at once is thought to be a record, both for the college and for the family, but such is Oberlin College's distinction.

Edwin Martin, twenty, is the youngest of the family. He is a senior in Oberlin and managing editor of the college journal. Mr. Lelia A. Martin his mother, is pursuing studies in economic and sociology, and is a member of two of her son's classes. Her mother, Mrs. Hannah M. Moss, attends lecture courses in literature and religion.

A Big Part of the World Knows

Grape-Nuts

not alone for its delicious, nut-like flavour, but more for its wonderful nerve and brain making, bone and muscle building qualities.

Grape-Nuts supplies certain essential elements, abundantly stored in the field grains, but which are lacking in many foods. Especially is this true of foods made from white flour, because in making flour white the larger part of the energizing mineral elements are thrown out in the milling process.

Made of whole wheat and malted barley, Grape-Nuts supplies all the rich nourishment of the grains, is long baked and rendered quickly digestible, and yields a big return of brain, nerve and muscle energy.

Wherever you go you'll find Grape-Nuts.

Many Canadian League Players Have Secured Jobs

King, Last Year With Hamilton, is Now With the Wheeling Club

The decision of the Canadian League to suspend business this year threw nearly 100 players on the market, and boys have been doing some tall hustling for jobs since they were notified that there was nothing doing here. Many of the players are already placed, Shaughnessy having arranged to take Armstrong, Dolan and probably some others of the Hamilton team to Warren with him. King, the star outfielder who came to Hamilton last year after the South Michigan League disbanded, is with the Wheeling Club in the Central League. Gus Zelmer is living in Buffalo, but expects to sign some of the Hamilton players up with the New York State teams for the coming season.

Frank (Cozy) Dolan, the former Ottawa first baseman, has been recommended as manager of the Erie Club, which with Warren, will also play in the Interstate League. Joe Stanley, outfielder with Erie last year, is also an applicant for the job but Muskegon, Mich., has a claim on him.

Smithson, Artie Schwind and Rygearson are with Beaumont in the Texas League. Rynearson lost his first start, while Smithson won his last game, allowing San Antonio four hits.

An International.

Archie Yelle is with Providence Ross with Richmond, Eddie Wright and Trout with Toronto, all in the International, as well as Kopp, who is at Buffalo.

Shocker is with the New York Americans, McAvoy with Baltimore and Oakes Neale with the Cincinnati Reds.

Powers and Shrival were also connected until last week and will now be a free agent.

Probably land with Shag at Warren.

Letty Dillinger is with New Orleans, where he is making a good showing.

Patsy Dougherty is with some club in the New York State League, while George Needham has a lot of the players signed up to play with an independent team in Buffalo.

By the time several more minor leagues get under way more players will come to light.

Louis Bierbauer is playing semi-pro ball in Detroit. Reilly has not signed up with any club as yet, and Ike Howick, has had several offers.

Manny had a contract to hop over barrels on skates for the New York hippodrome until yesterday, and nothing has been heard of him of late. Shag wanted to secure him for the Montreal Internationals earlier this spring.

Bradshaw and Kading are both playing semi-pro ball in Chicago, as is Eddie Fried. Bobby Heck wanted to come back to London this season but has not been heard of since he learned that the league had suspended.

Some Old-Timers.

Gus Champeau is playing first for Moline, in the Three I. League. Andy Kyle is with Bloomington, of the same league. Harry Brant is with Grand Rapids, and Billy Wright, formerly of Guelph, is with the same club in the Central League.

Gygli, Mitchell, Schettler and Isaacs are with Terre Haute. Bashang is with South Bend. Harris is with Springfield. Chuck Turner, at one time with St. Thomas, is with Evansville.

Hammond, Barry, Molina, Whitcraft, Perry and Eckstein have disappeared like a lot of others. Jim Gilhooley is advertising himself as a free agent.

Markle Has Great Record As Major League Pitcher

Only Two Earned Runs Made Off Waco Youngster in Four and One-Half Games, While He Is Still Unbeaten as Yankee Twirler

When John McGraw led his Giant eligibles into Waco, Texas in the spring of 1914 for an exhibition game he was advised that a pitcher of great ability would perform for the home guard. McGraw had heard that story so often from so many self-appointed "ivory hunters" he paid little attention to the advice. But at the end of nine innings, with the Giants still runless and the Waco team steaming into triumph with two runs, McGraw began asking questions.

"Who is that little boy who worked against us?" queried McGraw.

"Oh, that's Cliff Markel, a Pittsburg sandlotter, whom we are trying out this season," cautiously answered the Waco manager, who had visions of much gold in the sale of Markel to a big league club at some future date.

"He seems to have the making of a good pitcher, but is a trifle too small, I think," offered McGraw.

"Cincinnati tried him for a week, but he could not lose a balk motion and he was turned adrift," discouraged the Waco manager.

"Let me hear about him during the season, suggested McGraw.

"Sure I will not," whispered the Waco manager as McGraw hurried to a train.

18 LOST TO GIANTS

Thus John McGraw lost sight of Markle, who is now threatening to conquer Manhattan, to leap upon the pitching pedestal of fame recently abandoned by the one and only one Christopher Mathewson. Markle is the young sensation of the American League right now, proud possessor of Yankee livery and still unbeaten as a major league hurler.

Since joining the Yankees last September Markle has taken part in five games, four and one-half to be correct, and during that time he has allowed only two earned runs, or an average of only .44 for each nine inning game, a record in itself that stands above anything achieved by a young pitcher in the history of the national pastime. During forty-one innings against Yankee enemies only four runs have been made while Markle was pitching and two of these followed errors by his teammates.

Already critics are asking about Markle. They are seeking information about his age, height, weight and home. They are conceding that a new star is sighted in the heavens, one that bids fair to dazzle with a radiance as great as any ever seen. To those still unacquainted with the new Yankee hope it can be said that Markle was born in Pittsburg just twenty-one years ago. That he still makes his home in Pittsburg during the off season. That he is just five feet nine inches tall and weighs in condition about 160 pounds.

BAFFLES RED SOX

His latest and possibly greatest achievement, the one that stamped him worthy of a regular pitching berth came last Wednesday when he shut out the Boston Red Sox, a team travelling under the name of world's champions, earned through the conquest of 1915. In this affair only four hits were allowed by Markle, two of them being scratchy infield rollers, and at no time during the contest did the youngster appear in any danger.

His first assignment for the Yankees came on September 18, 1915, in the fifth inning of a game between Chicago and New York. Chicago had helped itself to six runs in the first four innings of this game at the expense of "Dazzle" Vance and "Cy" Pieh, two pitchers now in minor circuits. Markle pitched the last five innings of the contest and held Chicago to two hits, one of them being a home run by "Eddie" Collins which by the way is one of the two earned runs allowed by Markle since coming to New York.

Markle began his first major league game against St. Louis September 24, 1915, and this lay he triumphed 5 to 1. In this game he held St. Louis to seven hits and struck out five opposing batters. The one run made against him came in the ninth inning and was chased over the plate on a wild throw by Roger Peckinpaugh, who was trying to retire the side with a runner on second base.

The Red Sox, tuning up for the world's series and expecting little opposition from the Yankees, came to New York October 4 last season for a double header, and Markle was sent in to convince the sach from the Hub that baseball games must be won on the diamond. He succeeded so well that the Yankees won the opening game 4 to 1, and the Red Sox had to be content with six widely scattered hits.

That lone tally gained by Boston was carried across the plate by 'Jack Barry', who got to first in the fourth inning on an error of 'Frits' Maisel and consequently the tally cannot be charged against Markle. Hubert B Leonard opposed Markle in this affair. Ray Caldwell, by the way, won the second game of that double header 3 to 2, but exhibited no such pitching as did Markle.

During the training period this spring little was heard of Markle. Donovan did not fancy any too well the work of the youngster, and at one time there was a story of his release being told. But Markle persisted and remained with the club, principally upon the recommendation of Ray Fisher, who told Donovan that never in his life had he seen a young pitcher of so much promise. "He has the greatest overhand curve I ever saw," said Fisher. And Markle was retained.

His 1916 acid test came April 19, and the Athletics were selected as his only three hits, two of which were bunched in the first inning, for the only run made by the opposition, and he won his game, 2 to 1. This run was the second earned off Markle in two seasons as a Yankee.

HAS WONDERFUL RECORD.

Statistically his major league record shows that he has pitched in five games, won four and lost none. He has worked forty-one innings, during which time his opponents have made twenty-two hits and four runs, only two of whier were earned off him. He has issued twelve bases on balls, struck out sixteen men and made two wild pitches and no balks. As records go the above is as near perfect as any club manager or owner can hope for from a pitcher, and especially from one of tender years and such inexperience in fast company.

Speaking of Markle, Lee Magee said recently that he gave greater promise than any youngster he has seen in years. "He is cool, he has wonderful speed and an assortment of curves I don't know of a weakness that can be charged against him," judged Magee.

PAT POWERS' TEAM OF ONE PLAYER IS WANTED BY THE TORONTO CLUB

NEWARK, N.J., May 4.—One lone ball player now constitutes the almost defunct North Federal League of New Jersey.

His name is Rupert Mills, and he is a clever high school graduate, with whom Patrick T. Powers, the magnate of the league, made a two-year contract last summer. After the failure of his league, Powers farmed out all his other contract players to various leagues, but Mills refused to be farmed out. Lawyers told him that his contract would hold good. He had an offer from the Toronto club, but the terms did not suit him.

Hence the strange daily spectacle at Harrison, N.J., of a young man repairing to the National League Park reporting for duty to the sparrows, putting on a uniform and chasing himself all over the field with a bat from 9 to noon and from 2 to 6.

This afternoon the field was used for a football game, Mills then resumed his solitary practice, which earns him $3,000 a year.

Powers, who is rich and lives here does not pretent to enjoy the experience of being the only ex-magnate in the country with a private team of one player.

GALLANTRY WINS $200,000

Bequeathed by Woman He Defended in a Street Car Fight.

NEW YORK, May 4.—A despatch to the Herald from Philadelphia says: As a result of a bit of gallantry to a woman more than three years ago, Frank H. Canaing, formerly of this city and later of Clarksboro, N.J., is to receive $200,000 as soon as he can be located. He is supposed to be working in an eastern powder Mill. Mrs. T. J. Elkins, of Detroit widow of a wealthy ranch owner died several weeks ago, leaving an estate of 400,000. Half of the money goes to Canning, the remainder to a charitable institution in Detroit.

Mrs. Elkins was formerly Miss Irene Chadley, of this city. Miss Chadley was returning to her home on a trolley car late one night. She was the only woman on the car, the other passengers being half a dozen intoxicated men and Canning. A fight started and one of the men brushed against Miss Cradley and threatened her. Canning placed himself in front of her and with the aid of the conductor managed to overcome the roudies. Miss Chadley was so upset that Canning called a cab and rode with her to her home in West Philadelphia.

PRINTING IN EARLY AGES

Exhibition of Most Ancient Records Extant — Books Printed on Palm Leaves.

An instructive exhibition of printing was given recently at the National Arts Club in New York, by the American Institute of Graphic Arts. Technically the exhibition is one of American printing, but actually it is a collection of rare specimens of printing that date as far back as 5000 B.C.

The most ancient specimen is a document with archaic writing cut in stone, which is supposed to date back to 5000 B.C. On the other hand there is an exhibit showing the earliest method of printing by impression which is said to have been made in 3000 B.C. This particular piece is the name and title of King Ur-Ningirsu impressed in clay with an engraved wood stamp.

The earliest forms of alphabetic writing are shown in Babylonian clay tablets in cuneiform characters. There are a number of these specimens. One is a votive tablet of King Gudea, date 2300 B.C. Another is a receipt for grain in 1-2 an addressed clay envelope, a document which probably would not find favour with the modern postman, date 550 B.C. Then there is a payroll, date 1500 B.C. which shows that day labour cost about one mill an hour in those days and a legal contract, date 1500 B.C.

At the exhibition one learns that the civilizations of the Sumerians and their sucessors, the Assyrians the Babylonians, the Persians, were built upon experience and knowledge transmitted on clay tablets. The civilizations of India were nurtured by books inscribed on palm leaves.

The civilizations of the Semitic race were developed by books written on skins and the discovery of papyrus as a writing medium by the Egyptians was an event of the first importance, because not only their own civilisation, but also those of the Grecians and, the Romans, were created by the use of books written on papyrus, relatively as low priced as modern books and extensively circulated.

One of the ancient exhibits is a book on palm leaves. It is part of the Tripitaka or Buddhist scriptures. The leaves are contained in their original teakwood box, which dates about 1750. The writing is incised in the leaves with a stylus and the incisions filled with pigment. Books of this kind are still made in India. There is a facsimile of the earliest known European book, dated 1436 which is entitled "Ars Moriendi" ("The Art of Dying Well"). There is an illuminated manuscript book dated 1460, of French or Flemish origin, and many others of as ancient date.

One is able to learn that the first printing on this continent was in the city of Mexico in 1539, and in Lima in 1584. Printing was established in Cambridge, Mass., in 1638. But in general American printing was poorly done until the end of the eighteenth century. One of the earliest specimens of American printing is "A Seasonable Discourse" by the president of Harvard College in 1642. The printing was done by Samuel Green, who was the first American to be taught to print.

SAYS HER AGE IS 118.

Mrs. Mary Talbot who lives in Riverview, a suburb of Ottawa, Ia. lays claim to the record of being the oldest colored woman in the United States. She says she is 118 years old and that she was born in Garret County, Kentucky, in 1797, on Christmas Day.

Mrs. Talbot is able to back up her assertion of great age by relating many experiences of her youth which history bears out. She is living with her great-grandson here, and although somewhat feeble, is remarkably clear of mind.

Spinster Kills Five Bandits Then Faints

Marcella Welton, spinster, was one at least not taken unaware on the border when the Villistas attacked Columbus on March 9.

After 25 years of wielding the rod in the school rooms of the "effete east," Marcella determined four years ago "to escape and be free in the joy of the open air."

The best inducement offered her small savings was the purchase of 160 acres of state land at $5 an acre in Luna county, N. M., a few hours' ride from the Mexican border, and not many miles from Columbus.

"Aren't you afraid?" cried her friends, alarmed at her nearness to a warring country and the loneliness of a whole big county with only some 4,000 people in it. With the fortitude that had withstood a quarter century of the schoolroom, Marcella said:

"I'll be ready for the Mexicans, and motors and movies don't count when it comes to a soil fertility and an irrigation system that double my harvests."

The schoolma'am, her sister, and father started operations with a tomato crop and have since been busy getting a peach orchard on the road to success.

A little over four months ago a neighbor south of the Weltons, 12 miles nearer the border, Mr. Jury, his sons, and workmen, were attacked on their claim one day by a band of lawless Mexicans. Mr. Jury was badly wounded. Military aid could not be summoned quickly. The posse of neighbours that pursued the marauders without avail was gathered with difficulty.

A few days after this alarming occurrence Marcella went to Deming, with determination. She returned with four rifles and a supply of cartridges. In the pedagogical tone that had dominated 2 successful school years she announced:

"We are all going to learn to shoot—straight!"

"Preparedness in earnest!" said her father."

"Personal preparedness," she replied.

"Congress takes care of national preparedness. Each one owes himself as well as his country the duty of preparedness according to his own personal or local needs."

Marcella set about regular practice, and insisted on clean guns. She improvised targets with a range of 100 to 500 yards. The three took turns bidding by the target and signaling the others how near they hit the mark.

With March came vague whisperings of trouble near the border.

The Welton ranch was fortunately not in the path of the Villistras attacking Columbus. But a blood-drunken band of them fleeing from American wrath that terrible morning separated presumably from the main band and late that day raced over the hill and across the ranchwoman's peach orchard.

Marcella divined no good in the defiance of their approach. She called her family to the house, and with them a neighbor woman who had often shared the target practice. Quickly the three women snatched rifles and bullets. The old man was too slow. A shot from the band a quarter of a mile off wounded his arm.

As Marcella bolted the door bullets popped through the walls of the frame house.

"To the attic!" she ordered.

From the upper windows the women took careful aim and fired. Two horses dropped under the bandits. An answering volley broke through the roof above them. They ran to another window and shot, then back again to avoid concentration of the Mexican guns. Two desperadoes then spurred forward as if to charge the house. Those militant ranchwomen, surer of aim than any "greaser," kept the assailants writing to the ground. The rest of the band wheeled and fled back over the hill.

In the dusk an hour later Marcella and the neighbor, armed and watchful, left the sister with the wounded father and crept warily out to summon a surgeon and neighbors. Past the ground where the Mexicans had halted they went quickly, till suddenly Marcella crumpled in a heap.

"There are five of them!" she gasped, "Dead-"

BASEBALL

Jack Mitchell, Ottawa's $1000 shortstop in 1914 is travelling in rather select company down in Terre Haute, Indiana, where he is short stopping for the Central League of that town. Included in the same line up with Jack with Paul Cobb, a brother of the famous Tyrus, who plays right field. Second base is held down by no less a personage than Joe Evers, a younger brother of Johnnie of the Boston Braves. Both of these members of a famous baseball strain have had minor league trials, but neither has yet shown the class of his illustrious brother. It might also be mentioned that Louie Schettler, the demon speed pitcher of the Canadian League in 1914, is also with Terre Haute.

SPURNED PRODIGAL WIFE.

She found no welcome upon Return to old Home.

Mrs. Adeline Bezinque a prodigal wife, found no welcome awaiting her when she returned to the old home near Frontenac, Kansas. Neighbors discovered her sobbing in a cornfield near the house where she had presided as wife and mother for many years.

Last August Mrs. Bezinque disappeared. At the same time family savings amounting to $1500, disappeared. A man of the neighborhood also was missing. An investigation by the husband, Arthur Bezinque, developed that his wife and another man had gone to California on his hard earned money and were living there. Bezinque brought action for divorce.

Penniless Mrs. Bezinque returned, but there was no feasting and forgiveness. Relatives have taken pity on her and given her a home. The divorce suit has not yet been tried.

It is the aggressors who ought to make the first proposals for peace. Why should we make overtures to a country which has broken every convention and committed every atrocity?—Mr. Walsh, Labour M.P.

HEAVY FIGHTING REPORTED ALONG THE BRITISH FRONT

NOTHING SERIOUS IN SEEDING SITUATION

Wet Weather, Prof. Zavitz Says, May Cause Light Yield of Straw.

GUELPH, May 4.—Prof. Zavitz, head of the Field Husbandry Department at the Ontario Agricultural College, is not of the opinion that anything that could be termed a "serious" situation has yet been created by the wet weather interfering with the seeding operations.

"Reports show that there has been little seeding done yet. In the college plots we have not yet put in spring wheat, barley or mixed grains, although a start has been made. In the last twenty years I can remember only one season like this," stated Mr. Zavitz, "and I suppose we can look for similar results this year. We shall probaly have a light yield of straw, although there should be an average crop of grain of good quality."

Prof. Zavitz added that fall wheat hay and clover were in splendid condition and growing very rapidly.

Will Adopt Methods of Submarine Warfare To Interests of Neutrals

Germany's Reply to Washington Has Been Received---Has Imposed Far-reaching Restraints Upon Use of Submarine Weapon.

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, May 5.—Part of the text of the German reply to President Wilson's submarining demands, as transmitted to Ambassador Gerard last night by Foreign Secretary Von Jagow follows:

"The German Government is alive to the possibility that the ship mentioned in the United States note of April 10th, as torpedoed by a German submarine is actually identical with the Sussex. The German Government begs to reserve further communications on the matter until certain points are ascertained which are of decisive importance for establishing the facts of the case.

"Should it turn out that the commander was wrong in assuming the vessel to be a man of war, the German Government will not fail to draw the consequences resulting therefrom."

The German Government will only state that it has imposed far-reaching restraints upon the use of submarine weapon solely in consideration of neutrals' interests in spite of the fact that these restrictions necessarily were of advantage to Germany's enemies. No such consideration has ever been shown neutrals by Great Britain and her Allies. The German Government, however, has now decided to make further concessions adapting methods of submarine warfare to interests of neutrals. In reaching this decision the German Government is actuated by conditions which are above the level of the disputed question.

In answer to the appeal by the Government of the United States on behalf of the sacred principles of humanity and international law, the German Government must repeat once more with all emphasis that it was not the German Government, but the British Government which, by ignoring all accepted rules of International law, extended this terrible war to lives and property of non-combatants.

Then follows about five hundred words of abuse of Great Britain for its blockading policy.

KNOWLTON IS BRAVEST TOWN

LONDON, May 4.—The bravest village in the British Isles is Knowlton, a tiny hamlet in Kent, not over fifty miles from London.

By reason of the fact that Knowlton has sent more men to the colours, in relation to population, than any other village, a memorial cross soon will be erected in the village square. No one remains in Knowlton to-day but women, children, and old men. Husbands and fathers from every household have gone.

The next bravest village, according to a London newspaper which instituted an investigation, is Mennock, Dumfriesshire, Scotland. Mennock sent all its eligible men to the war but one, and since compulsory military service has been enacted by parliament he also will have to go. Mennock will receive a bronze tablet to commemorate its bravery.

386 Villages in Competition.

Three hundred and eighty-six British villages figured in the competition. A record of more than 10 per cent. of the male population sent to the fighting ranks was shown by 204.

In addition to being the bravest, Knowklton is one of the prettiest and oldest villages in England. Located not far from the east coast, between Deal and Canterbury, its picturesque old church forms the most conspicuous part of the community. Inside the edifice, among other ancient markings, is a memorial to Lieut. D'Aeth, whose family owned Knowlton for two centuries. The memorial is to the memory of the officer, but it connects a story which every Knowltonite deems it his privilege to tell to strangers.

Village Won in Card Game.

In the early part of the seventeenth century the D'Aeth family found their village heavily mortgaged. A game of cards decided the issue. The D'Aeths lost the village with a single hand. In Canterbury museum there is a card table with the hands that decided Knowlton's ownership inlaid on the top.

Knowlton became famous immediately after the reign of Charles I., when 7,000 royalists from the countryside marched toward Westminster demanding a hearing. Government troops met them before they arrived and killed them almost to a man. In strange contrast, not a single soldier of Knowlton so far has been killed in the present war.

Mennock, the second bravest village, has not fared so well. At the outbreak of hostilities nearly every man joined the King's Own Scottish Borderers or the Cameron Highlanders. To-day's records show that many have been killed and nearly every one has been wounded.

Allies Occupy Florina And Have Begun a New Campaign in the Balkans

Serious Riots and Anti-War Demonstrations Are Reported in Hungarian Cities--Lord Derby Likely to Succeed Birrell in Ireland.

LONDON, May 5.—The second reading of the Compulsion Bill passed the Commons by a vote of 326 to 34.

ATHENS, May 5.—The Allies have occupied Florina and have begun a new campaign in the Balkans.

TORONTO, May 5.—Proceeds of Kitchener Tag Day for recruiting here yesterday were $22,460.

LONDON, May 5.—There has been heavy fighting at many points along the British lines in Flanders.

LONDON, May 5.—Lord Derby is likely to succeed Birrell as Secretary for Ireland.

LONDON, May 5.—Serious riots and anti-war demonstrations are reported in Hungarian cities.

NEW YORK (8:45 a.m.), May 5.—The text of the German reply, as so far received via wireless from Berlin, indicates a temporizing answer to President Wilson's demands that Germany's "present methods" of submarine warfare be discontinued.

DUBLIN, Ireland, May 5.—James Mark Sullivan, a prominent New York lawyer and diplomat, was arrested here in connection with the Irish rebellion.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—An advance summary of the German note was received last night indicated no reason for pessimism.

PARIS, May 5.—Germans are massing heavy divisions of troops near the British front. Further assaults near Verdun on German trenches brought small gains to the French.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 5.—Liberals will to-morrow make a demand in the Commons for an enlarged scope to the shell inquiry.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

CZAR'S SUCCESS IN TURKEY A JOY TO SCANDINAVIA

COPENHAGEN, May 4.—Scandinavia is greeting every report of further Russian advances in Asiatic Turkey with rejoicing.

This satisfaction is due to the growing prospects that the czar will get a Mediterranean port. If he should secure an ice free harbor in that quarter, Scandinavians take it for granted he will be less ambitious that he is supposed hitherto to have been to acquire the same thing on the Norwegian coast.

The Swedes and Norwegians have long believed he had his eye on an outlet at Narvik, Norway, which though, close to the arctic circle has an unfrozen harbor, the year round by virtue of an offshoot from the gulf stream.

FEAR POWER OF RUSSIA

To have acquired this port it would have been necessary for the Russians to have seized a good sized slice of northern Sweden and Norway.

If Stockholm and Christiania can be relieved of this source of anxiety, the principal reason for Sweden's bitter hostility toward Russia and for a somewhat less acute anti-Russian feeling among the Norwegians will have been removed.

Denmark's chief interest in the matter is that the way would be cleared for a rapprochement between herself, Sweden and Norway. This has been much desired in Copenhagen, but the fact that Denmark is violently anti-German, while Sweden, by reason of her fear of Russia, inclined to pro-Germanism, has been difficult to accomplish.

SCANDINAVIANS HOPE FOR UNITY

Strong hopes are entertained now that the three Scandinavian countries can be closely united and that an actual federation may yet be affected.

Suggestions that Russia might take Constantinople went not optimistically received here, because it was believed the czar's allies would object to giving him sole control of the Bosporus. Latest accounts are, however, that his forces are aiming to Iscanderoon (also known as Alexandretta,) on the western Mediterranean coast, 100 miles northeast of Cyprus.

It is deemed unlikely here that there will be any objections to leaving this port in Nicholas' hands if he takes it from the Turks.

MUST ACCEPT.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Some people are born rich, others acquire riches and a few have riches thrust upon them.

To the last named class belongs Miss Edith H. Kitching, of No. 24 Hank street. Miss Kitching must take a legacy of $196,860 left to her by Frank F. Ripley, an uncle who died she would not accept it because the money was "tainted" and "coined from the life-blood of the people."

Had her uncle left her the entire estate she might have accepted it, she said, as "reparation for wrongs he had committed against his martyred family."

An appraisal of the estate yesterday in Brooklyn showed that Miss Kitching received virtually the entire fortune. She must accept the riches, lawyers assert, because no one has a right to abandon title of property. Claims of $78,000 for hospitals were denied by the appraisers.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. The Hard-Headed Business Man

Insists on a high degree of "fitness" in his employees

That means proper coordination between brain and body, and for its best realization there must be care in the matter of food.

A well-balanced diet is essential—one easily digestible and rich in nerve-building material. Very often the result of improper food is seen in indigestion, "brain-fag," nervousness and general inefficiency.

Grape-Nuts

a delicious food made of whole wheat and malted barley, is admirably adapted for brain workers; for included in its rich nutriment, are the vital mineral elements—phosphate of potash, etc., grown by Nature in the grains.

These mineral elements are absolutely essential to well-balanced bodies, brains and nerves, but are often lacking in much of the food that goes to make up the usual dietary.

A daily ration of Grape-Nuts along with other food is just the thing to put one in fine fettle.

DOCTOR SAYS

Take Iron For Your Blood, Phosphorous For Your Nerves

People have been suffering needed agony for years doctoring for their nerves when there real trouble was, want of phosphorus in their system.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorus is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphorus the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking poisonous spring tonics, some one's sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame your but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Bonisol Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well, sleep well, work well, digest well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong, vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with pure ordinary Bonisol Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Bonisol Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is when up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of F. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

CHAPTER VI.

THE ISLAND DECIDES.

In Freakirk Head, next morning, painted signs nailed to telegraph-poles at intervals along the King's Road as far as Castalla read:

MASS-MEETING TO-NIGHT
ODD FELLOWS' HALL
8 O'CLOCK ALL COME

Who had issued this pronunciamento, what it signified, and what was the reason for a town meeting nobody knew; and as the men trudged down to their dories drawn up on the stony beach near the burned wharfs discussion was intense.

Finally the fact became known that a half-dozen of the wealthiest and best-educated men in the village, including Squire Hardy and the Rev. Adelbert Bysshe, rector of the Church of England chapel, had held a secret conclave the night before at the squire's house.

It was believed that the signs were the result, and intimated in certain obscure quarters that Pete Ellinwood, who had always claimed literary aspirations, had printed them.

Odd Fellows' Hall was the biggest and most pretentious building in Freakirk Head. It was of two stories height, and on its gray-painted front bore the three great gilt links of the society. To one side of it stood a wreck of a former factory, and behind it was the tiny village "lock-up."

It marked the spot where the highway turned south at right angles on its wild journey southwest, a journey that ended in a leap into space from the three-hundred foot cliffs of gull-haunted, perpendicular Southern Head.

The interior of the hall was in its gala attire. Two rows of huge oil-lamps extended down the middle from back to front; others were in brackets down the side walls, and three more above the low rostrum at the far end. The chairs were in place, the windows open, and the two young fishermen who acted as janitors of the hall stood at the rear, greeting those that arrived with familiar jocularity.

Into the hall, meant to accommodate two hundred, three hundred people were packed. The men in their rusty black, the women in their simple white or flowered dresses, the children brushed and pigtailed, had all brought their Sunday manners and serious, attentive faces.

On the low platform presently appeared the Rev. Adelbert Bysshe and Squire Hardy. The rector was a young man with a thin, ascetic face. His mouth was pursued into a small line, and he wore large, round spectacles to aid his faded blue eyes. His clerical garb could not conceal the hesitating awkwardness of his manner, and the embarrassment his hands and feet caused him seemed to be his special cross in life.

When the audience had become quiet he rose and took his stand before them, lowering his head and peering over his glasses.

"Friends," he said, "we have gathered here to-night to discuss the welfare of Grande Mignon Island and the village of Freakirk Head."

A look of startled uncertainty swept over the simple, weather-beaten faces in front of him.

"You know that I am not exaggerating," he continued, "when I say that we are face to face with the gravest problem that has ever confronted us. It has pleased God in His infinite Providence so to direct the finny tribes that the denizens of the deep have altered the location of their usual fishing-grounds.

"Day after day men have gone forth with nets and lines like the fishers of old; day after day, also like some of the fishers of old, you have returned empty-handed. The salting-bins are not filled, the drying-frames are bare, the shipments to St. John's have practically ceased.

"I do not need to tell you that this spells destitution. This island depends on its fish, and, since cod and hake and pollock have left us, we must cast about for other means of support.

"This meeting, then, after due deliberation last night and earnest supplication of the Almighty for guidance, has been called to determine what course we shall pursue."

Mr. Bysshe, warm now and perspiring freely, retired to his seat and mopped his face. Across the audience, which has listened intently, there swept a murmur of low speech.

It is not given to most fisherfolk to know any more than the bare comforts of life. There is an existence of ceaseless toiling, ceaseless danger, and very poor reward. Hardship is their daily lot, and it requires a great incentive to bring them to a full stop in consideration of their future.

Here, then, in Freakirk Head were three hundred fishermen with their backs against the wall—mutely brave because it is bred in the bone—quietly preparing for a final stand against their hereditary enemies, hunger and poverty.

The low murmur, of awestruck conversation suddenly stopped, for Squire Hardy with his fringe of white whiskers violently mussed, had risen to speak.

"Mr. Bysshe has just about got the lobster in the pot," he declared, "but I want to say one thing more. Things were bad enough up to a week ago but since the fire they have been a great deal worse. Mr. Nailor and Mr. Thomas, who owned the fish stand that burned, have been cleaned out. They gave employment to about twenty of you men.

"Those men are now without any work at all because the owners of the other fish stands have all the trawlers and dorymen they need. Even if they didn't have there are hardly enough fish to feed all hands on the island.

"More than that—and now I hope that won't mind what I am going to say, for we've all been in the same boat one time or another—Mr Boughton can't be our last hope much longer. You and I and all of us have got long-standing credit at his store for supplies we paid for later from our fishing. The fire of the other night cost Mr. Boughton a lot, and, as most of his money is represented in outstanding credit, he cannot advance any more goods.

"Mr. Boughton is not here himself, for he told me he would never say that word to people he has always trusted and lived with all his life. But I am saying it for him because I think I ought to, and you can see for yourselves how fair it is.

"Now, that's about all I've got to add to what Mr. Bysshe has said to you. Yes, there's one thing more. Great Harbor and Seal Cove below us here are as bad if not worse off than we are. We cannot look for help in that direction, and I will be a lot thinner man than I am now before I ever appeal to the Government.

"We're not paupers, and we don't want city newspapers starting subscription-lists for us. So, as Mr. Bysshe has said, the only thing for us to do is to get our eyes out of the heavens and see what we can do for ourselves."

The squire sat down, pulling at his whiskers and looking apprehensively at the rector, of whose polished periods he stood in some awe.

The audience was silent now. The squire had brought home to these men and women some hard, hard facts that they had scarcely as yet admitted even to themselves. There are scarcely one among them whose account with Bill Boughton was fully satisfied, and now that this mainstay was gone the situation took on an entirely different aspect.

For some minutes no one spoke. Then an old man, bearded to the waist got upon his feet.

"I've seen some pretty hard times on this Island," he said, "but none like this here. I've thought it over some, and I'd like to make a suggestion. My son Will is over on the back of the island pickin' duke, The market for that is good—he's even got ten cents a pound this summer. This is the month of August and winter is consid'able ways off. How about all hands turnin' to an' pickin' dulce?

This idea was received in courteous silence. There were men there who had spent their summers reaping the harvest of salty, brown kelp from the rocks at low tide, and they know how impractical the scheme was. Although the island exported yearly fifteen thousand dollars' worth of the strange stuff, it was plain that should all the men devote themselves to it the return would by no means measure up to the labour.

One after another, then, the fishermen got to their feet and discussed this project. In this cause of common existence embarrassment was forgotten and tongues were loosed that had never before addressed a public gathering.

A proposition was put forward that the islanders should dispute the porpoise-spearing monopoly of the Quoddy Indians that were already sailing across the channel for their annual summer's sport, but this likewise met with defeat.

A CHAMPION SPELLER.

Horace Greeley Was a Wonder When Only Six Years of Age.

No champion of the old time spelling matches, perhaps, ever excelled Horace Greeley. He was, in fact, a spelling prodigy. What would the boys and girls of today, who grumble over their daily stint of twenty words, think of a child not yet six years old who could actually spell every word in the language! That is what the young Horace is said to have been able to do.

His schooling began in his fourth year, and the art of spelling at once became a passion with him. In school and out he kept incessantly at its study. Hour after hour he would lie on the floor, spelling over all the difficult words he could find in the few books that the family owned.

The fame of his prowess spread. Naturally Horace was the first one chosen at spelling matches. He had a lisping, whining voice and spelled his words with the utmost confidence. Sometimes in winter, when the snowdrifts were so deep that one of the big boys had to take him to the schoolhouse on his back, the little white haired fellow would drop asleep between turns. When his word came round his neighbor would nudge him anxiously. He would wake, spell his word and drop asleep again at once.

So great was the boy's reputation as a student of unusual powers that the selectmen of a neighboring town, in passing a rule forbidding the attendance at the local school of any pupil from outside the township, honored him by adding the clause, "Excepting only Horace Greeley."—Youth's Companion.

Sarcastic.

This incident is related of a Scotch doctor, new to the gun, who adventured upon a day's rabbit shooting.

Chased by the ferrets, bunny was a rather quick moving target, and the medico was not meeting with the success he anticipated.

"Hang it all, man," he exclaimed impatiently to the keeper who accompanied him; "these beasts are too quick for me!"

"Aye, doctor," the newly keeper replied, "but ye surely didna expect them tae be still like yer patients till ye kill them?"

The Three Londons.

Roman London lies buried about 18 feet below the level of Cheapside. In nearly all parts of the city there have been discovered tessellated pavements. Roman tombs, lamps, vases, sandals, keys, ornaments, weapons, coins, and statues of the Roman gods.

When, a little over a century ago, deep sections were made for the sewers in Lombard street the lowest stratum was found to consist of tessellated pavements. Many colored dice were found lying scattered about, and above this stratum was a thick layer of wood ashes, suggesting the debris of charred wooden buildings.

While building the exchange workmen came upon a gravel pit full of oyster shells, bones of cattle, old sandals and shattered pottery. Two pavements were dug up, under the French church in Threadneedle street, and other pavements have been cut through in several parts of the city. The soil seems to have risen over Roman London at nearly a foot a century. Still further must the searcher dig to find the third London, the earlier London of the Britons.—London Chronicle.

THAT WEAK BACK

Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—maybe faint spells, chills or nausea—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 40 years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. A Romance of the Sahara Desert

Hendricks was cut out for a globe trotter and was furnished by inheritance with the wherewithal to be a world traveler. By the time he was twenty-five he had traveled in every civilized land on the face of the earth, and with many of them was quite familiar.

Then came the semicivilized countries. He determined to begin with north Africa. He had read much of the great Sahara desert, its ocean of sand spread out with all the infinite vastness as the waters of the deep, the glare of day, the splendor of the starry dome above it at night. But it was the danger of traveling among the treacherous, cutthroat people who inhabit it that made Hendricks long to travel there. As soon as he had become familiar with peoples similar to his own countrymen he went to Morocco, intending to plunge down into the desert.

Leaving Paris he made for Gibraltar, crossed the strait and found himself in Tangier. The transition across this narrow water was like going to sleep in England and waking up in Bagdad. On the one hand were officers of the English army surrounded by the people of Spain. On the other were Arabs dressed in the white bananca universally worn, a swarthy people of diabolical countenance; snake charmers, with their snakes; indeed, such a people as one would meet in any Mohammedan country. It seamed to Hendricks that he had suddenly left the protection of civilized law to be subject to uncivilized plunder.

The first thing to procure for a trip into the desert was camels, which must be bought outright. Hendricks purchased several of these beasts and hired a couple of dozen natives, including a man to manage them who had a number of names, among which was Ali, and Hendricks at once seized upon it to designate the man. Ali attended to the purchase of the rest of the outfit, including tents, arms, ammunition, eatables, drinkables, etc. The arms and ammunition were about the most important articles, for the principal occupation of the denizens of the desert was robbery. The large through caravans were so well protected that little plunder was to be gained from them. The little force supporting a rich American having many tempting articles was a different matter. Ali informed the master that they would be subject to all sorts of strategems, for stealing purposes, but would not be likely to any open attack. To be robbed at wholesale they would doubtless be led into an ambush, in which case they would all be murdered.

All this lent zest to the expedition. Among the American's reasons for plunging into such an unattractive country one was to outwit the Bedouins.

He had not got well into the desert before the performance commenced. Of course a guard was established at night. The third night after leaving Moroccan territory a sentinel was shot.

"Why did they do that?" asked Hendricks of Ali. "It seems to me murder for nothing."

"Don't deceive yourself, master," said the black. "Tonight another watcher will fall, and the next night another, and so on until our force is reduced to so small a number that they may overpower us."

Hendricks thought much during the day as to how this prospective killing might be eliminated. Before time for posting the guard for the night he said to Ali that the men were too stupid to be trusted on a watch; he would do guard duty himself that night. Taking his rifle he stationed himself behind a heap of sand and kept a sharp lookout for an enemy. The party had traveled all day without seeing a human or an inhuman being. It seemed impossible that some one should rise up out of the sand at dead of night to kill a guard. Nevertheless Hendricks kept awake and, what was equally important, kept his eyes open.

Just before dawn he spied some sort of an animal in the distance wandering about as though searching for food. Hendricks watched the beast for awhile and made up his mind that there was a man under its skin. Going into his tent, he brought out a rifle, stuck the muzzle into the sand and hung a barance over the butt. Having done this, he again took position behind his sand hill. It was not long before he saw a flash from where the animal stood, and a ball passed through the barance. Hendricks fired at the beast, and it made off, apparently mingling with the sand.

That was the end of picking off sentries. The party traveled for some days without further molestation to an oasis, where they passed from the sand ocean to earth, trees, flowers, houses, and, above all, to water, for this article, so common elsewhere and therefore regarded of so little importance, is a chief necessity on the desert.

Hendricks, leaving his outfit and his men in care of Ali, put up at a hotel to enjoy the comfort of living in a house surrounded by tropical shrubbery. Directly opposite lived an Arab, a trader, and when Hendricks was sitting by his window a woman, young and somewhat comely in appearance, was to be seen in a room on the same floor as the American. She saw him looking at her and smiled at him.

Hendricks, though in the heyday of life, was averse to interfering with a woman belonging to a Mohammedan and went away from the window. The next morning a caravan started from the trader's house, and since Hendricks was prepared to move his own outfit, he left an hour later. When he went into camp in the evening the trader's more pretentious encampment was not a mile away. During the evening the Arab called on the American, apparently desirous of making his acquaintance. Indeed, before he left he seemed to have taken a great liking to Hendricks.

He had no sooner departed than Ali came to his master and warned him, declaring that the man might be a trader, but if he could overpower a smaller caravan than his own in the desert, kill every one connected with it and possess himself of the loot he would not scruple to do so. Hendricks assured his man that he would be very careful what he did, but said nothing of the woman who had smiled at him through her window.

Hendricks had promised the trader, or robber, or both, that he would return his call in the morning, breakfasting with him. Had he been warned by Ali earlier he would possibly have declined the invitation on the ground that he intended to move early. He did not fear a complication with the woman, for an Arab does not usually introduce his women to his men friends. In this case Hendricks was mistaken. The trader had three wives and they were all at breakfast with him and his guest. One of them was the woman who had smiled at Hendricks from a window, and she was the most attractive in appearance of them all.

She behaved decorously at table, but when Ali arose with his other wives to go into the living tent this woman, whom he called Fatima, kept her seat. When Hendricks started to rise she gave him a look that indicated she wished him to remain. After a moment's hesitation he decided to accept her invitation. She spoke Spanish indifferently and Hendricks spoke a little of all the romance languages. Consequently with a mixture of French, Spanish and Italian they managed to make themselves understood.

Though the trader did not appear to object to his wife's tete-a-tete with the American, Hendricks felt uneasy. The woman seemed desirous of keeping him with her; but, seeing that he desired to get away, she at last arose, and they joined the others. Before he took his departure, while unobserved, she thrust a bit of paper into his hand. On reaching his camp he read it.

Remain in your present camp. Meet me after dark midway between your tents and ours.

No one but a fool or one ready for a desperate adventure would have accepted this invitation. Hendricks was not a fool, but he was ready to take any risk to gratify his curiosity, and he liked adventure. However, since he knew he would be risking his life and did not wish to leave the world without some provision therefor he took Ali into his confidence.

Ali said at once that the woman was acting under the orders of her husband; that Hendricks would meet a bullet instead of a woman, after which the trader would swoop down on the others, murder them all and take possession of the effects. He begged his master not to keep the appointment.

His pleadings were of no avail. Then Ali asked him to permit him to go in advance. He would make it known that he was not the American, but an Arab, which he knew well how to do, and would thus discover the plot without being killed. Hendricks was tempted by this plan, but could not bring himself to permit any of his men to take a risk that he would not take himself.

"No, Ali," he said, "I will keep this appointment, but I will go with a rifle at my shoulder and cocked."

"Your figure will be seen against the sky," replied Ali, "while one who meets you cannot be distinguished from the sand."

Hendricks profited by this advice and wore a light gray suit with a handkerchief tied over his head instead of a hat. Half an hour after dark he sallied forth, taking care not to expose his silhouette against the sky. Presently he saw a figure thus revealed. The Arab dress is such that he could not distinguish whether it was man or woman. He watched it advance toward him, Hendricks taking care not to present a mark for a bullet. But no bullet came, and presently he heard a woman's voice say:

"Follow me; I will guide you to my mistress."

Hendricks decided to take the risk. He followed the woman to a point a few hundred yards from the women's quarters in the trader's camp, and there stood the woman he was to meet.

"I am a white woman," she said. "My complexion is stained. I was captured with a caravan that was attacked and looted, the women being sold as slaves. Save me!"

"How?"

"Take me to your camp. Move on at once in a direction that will avoid this caravan."

"Why did your husband permit you to talk with me alone?"

"I offered to decoy you, agreeing to get you in my toils tomorrow."

Hendricks thought a few moments, then said:

"Come with me."

The next morning when the trader arose the Americans' camp was seen faintly on the horizon and but a short distance from an oasis. Fatima was missing.

Was Troubled With BOILS
ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Golden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Then Patti Laughed.

It is difficult to realize that that wonderful woman Madame Patti will celebrate her seventy-third birthday this month, but such is the fact, and in spite of her age, her voice still retains its remarkable powers.

Madame Patti has told a good story about a little girl who was learning music. The famous singer had explained to her the meaning of the musical signs F and FF.

"Now," said Madame Patti, "if F means forte, what does FF mean?"

The little girl thought seriously for a moment, and then her face brightened.

"I know," she said at last, "eighty!"

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

SALONIKI'S FINEST

Famous is Floca's Cafe, Rendezvous of All Officers

Floca's has become the social focus of the entente allies in the Balkans. Some such rendezvous comes to be associated with almost every expeditionary war. The bar of Shepherd's Hotel in Cairo was the place through which everyone passed sooner or later in the time of the Sudan campaigns; the Rand Club at Johannesburg fulfilled a similar function in South Africa. Here the same unexpected greatness has been thrust upon Floca's, so that its name will always remain in the memory of those told off to spend a tedious winter at Saloniki.

Floca's in peace times was just a commonplace cafe, with no more than the modest distinction of being the best of such establishments in Saloniki. Here on an ordinary week day were to be found a sprinkling of Levantine gentlemen drinking Turkish coffee while they discussed with fluent gesture the latest political rumors from Athens. Its fortunate proprietor, who like so many others here is making a small fortune, has to thank two of the most cherished allied institutions—the Englishman's tea and the Frenchman's afternoon apertif or appetiser.

From four o'clock in the afternoon until eight, Floca's is more densely populated than any spot in Saloniki. It has been filled with officers of the allied armies—base officers, camp officers, embarkation officers, staff officers, flying officers, French, British, Serbian, Greek—such a varied collection of officers of every rank and corps that Floca's might be the animated fashion book of a military tailor of international clientele.

But Floca's would hardly be a success in fashionable London. Its interior is gloomy and often foggy. Its patronage is beset by an importunate horde of ragged urchins. Its Greek waiters, of sinister aspect, only condescend to serve when their attention is attracted by a series of sharp handclaps. But in Saloniki men count themselves lucky to find a table free, and for those who have lived for months on a barren mountain side it is a shadowy and distant reproduction of the institutions of home.

"The Devils!"

One likes the King all the better for that, after one of his friends who knew the facts had told him of the ill-treatment in a German camp of English prisoners, he sprang up and with crimson face, shouted, "The devils!" and "Oh! my brave men!"

Forced To Leave School, Had St. Vitus' Dance

Astonishing Cure of This Nervous Trouble Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Here is a case where life-long gratitude will be felt for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As a school girl and in later life Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to the rescue when the nerves gave out. Now a healthy, robust woman happily gives the credit to this great food cure for restoring her to health and strength.

Miss Sadie M. White, 36 Waterloo street, Fredericton, N.B. writes:—

"When ten years of age a friend of mine had St. Vitus' Dance and she had to leave school and go under a doctor's care. Instead of benefiting by the treatment she appeared to get worse. Her tonsils and tongue became so swollen that she could scarcely take any nourishment. For two weeks she was this way and then took convulsions and nearly choked to death. She was ordered to the hospital, but soon got worse again. I recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to her and she used nine boxes, steadily growing better. Three years later a severe fright brought on the nervous trouble again, and she suffered everything a human being could endure. Her mother bought a dozen boxes of Nerve Food, and with this treatment she was fully restored. I wish you could see her now, a strong, healthy, robust woman with two lovely babies. She still uses the Nerve Food when she feels out of sorts, but has had no return of the old nervous trouble."

For weak, puny, nervous children there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to enrich the blood, restore the starved nerves and start them on the way to health. When they fail to get proper nourishment from the food they eat, this food cure presents the necessary ingredients in condensed and easily assimilated form, and strength and vigor is restored. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

C.P.R. TO MOBILIZE SCIENTISTS FOR RESEARCH WORK

Arranges With Arthur D. Little to Establish Central Organization at Montreal

CO. LOOKING FORWARD

Dominion-Wide Organization for the Scientific Research of the Country's Vast Resources

Although the potential wealth of Canada's natural resources is known to be marvellous, only a small portion of these have been exploited, and apart from the work done by the Government Geological Survey, the scientific investigation of Canada's resources with a view to practical development has been fragmentary and almost immaterial.

The lesson of the titanic conflict now raging in Europe has brought home how much the Dominion has to learn from some of the European countries with which she is at war, as for instance, the pre-eminence of Germany in manufacturing, metallurgical and electrical development, due pre-eminently to the thoroughness with which chemical research was pursued in that country, a pre-eminence which resulted in a large and profitable market for her manufacturers, not only at home but all over the world.

The wealth and prosperity of the nations and empires of the future will be gauged in their mineral and chemical activities and production.

When peace is restored there will be a strong effort to provide the requirements of the British Empire and her Allies from friendly sources, and if the war were, unhappily, to be long drawn out, the production of Canadian resources might become more essential to success in peace had war thus armies of heroes.

The Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. has technical schools attached to its great shops, and at Trail the company has developed a great chemical and metallugrical laboratory and hydro-electric equipment equal to anything on the continent. These are, however, local activities, and the time has come, in the opinion of Lord Shaughnessy, when a Dominion-wide organization should be formed for the scientific research of Canada's vast mineral, metal, hydro-electric and chemical resources, which will result in the practical application to industry of many minerals heretofore neglected or exported for manufacture in other countries, of by-products in existing industries and of other natural resources which were neglected or insufficiently exploited. The waste of straw, for instance, in our wheat fields, of flax fibre, of lumber, seventy-five per cent. of the product of which has been wasted in the forest or at the mill, while in tungsten, molybdenite, graphite, oil shale, mica, manganese, magnetite, talc, felspar and other minerals there is a field for the profitable investment of much larger capital than at present.

The Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. aims to secure the mobilization of the ablest and most scientific and chemical brains of the Dominion, and to associate them with a central organization to direct the activities of all the scientists and experts engaged in research work in all parts of the Dominion. The discoveries and information gleaned by the central organization, while supplies for the special information of the Canadian Pacific, will be disseminated from time to time by bulletins which should be of great value to merchants and manufacturers as well as to students and prospectors.

To carry out these views arrangements have been made with Mr. Arthur D. Little for the establishment of a central organization at Montreal for research work. Mr. Little has been President of the American Chemical Society and is a member of the Institute of Chemical Engineers, and, a director of the Chemical and Engineer Department of the Institute of Technology. Indeed, Mr. Little's fame as a chemist and a chemical engineer is world-wide, and, as an organizer and investigator he has no superior. His activities have extended to every branch of industrial and chemical research work, having seventy practical chemists associated with him. Lord Shaughnessy is confident that Mr. Little will build up an organization in Canada which will confer immense benefits on the Dominion.

A Dominion charter has been obtained and the Canadian Research Bureau will begin operations in Montreal on May 1st, when they will be in a position to co-operate with science professors and others of the Dominion already engaged in research work.

Golden Text.—Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations.—Matt. 28:19.

2. When the world has persecuted the church what has generally been the result?

3. Why did they not at first preach to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews?

4. If all preachers now were filled with the Holy Spirit would the same results follow their ministry as in those days? Give your reasons.

5. Verses 22-26. What is the most glorious news which the church can receive?

6. If all the churches to-day were filled with the same burning zeal and spirit of evangelism as these early Christians manifested what would be the result upon the evangelization of the world?

7. Which is more essential in teaching Christianity and getting the world converted, a high education or the burning zeal which comes from being filled with the Holy Spirit? Why?

8. Verses 27-30. What have generally been the spiritual results of 'death' war, and other world calamities, and why is it so?

9. Why is it impossible for a church or an individual to have a burning zeal for the souls of men and not also be equally zealous for their temporal welfare?

10. Chap. 12:25. Barnabas and Paul carried from the church at Antioch a liberal contribution to the poor Christians at Jerusalem, and returned to Antioch; what effect did this diversion to social service work have upon their efficiency in their spiritual work?

11. Chap. 13:1. Where was the city of Antioch situated?

12. What constituted a Christian church then and now?

13. Verse 2. What constitutes a fast, and of what benefit is it?

14. What connection was there between their ministering and fasting and the Holy Spirit speaking to them?

15. Verse 3. If it is the duty of the church to send out missionaries why is it also the duty of every member of the church to gladly support them?

16. What would be the effect if every local church were to fast and pray before each missionary meeting?

17. Verse 4. Why would you say it is possible for us to have the conscious guidance of the Holy Spirit in every journey we take, and in all things we do? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

18. Verse 5. Should men and women in the ordinary walks of life, be as faithful in preaching the gospel, or in testifying for Jesus, wherever they may be, as Paul and Barnabas were? Why?

19. Verse 6. What motives has probably induced this man Elymas, to claim to be a prophet?

20. Verses 7-12. Are good men justified in rebuking bad men with vehemence when they would stop a work of love and mercy? Why?

8. Verses 27-30. What have generally been the spiritual results of 'death' war, and other world calamities, and why is it so?

Lesson for Sunday, May 14, 1916, "Lo, we turn to the Gentiles." Acts 13:13-52.

BE CAREFUL IN USING SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure, and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid and poisoned. If the kidneys fail also. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

The Reason Why.—There had been a very forlorn appearance about Mary Ann of late, and Mrs. Pokernose fancied she knew the reason why. At least, if she didn't she meant to. "Mary," she said, "what has become of that nice young butcher who used to come round, and was so attentive toward you?" Mary produced a pocket-handkerchief. "He got married," she wailed. "And since he got married he don't come round any more." "Married!" exclaimed Mrs. Pokernose. "But I always thought he would marry you?" "Well," answered Mary, bursting into uncontrollable sobs, "he did."

Betraying the Sex.

Mrs. Tylor's little daughter Susie is very precocious. She learned to talk at an early age, rapidly added to her stock of words, and has used them with a diligence and constancy at times rather alarming.

One day, as Mrs. Tylor was crossing the front hall, the door was flung open, and Susie, eyes dancing and face beaming, rushed up to her mother, clasped her around the waist, and exclaimed with ecstasy:

"Oh, mother, my head is full of words."

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

To remove onion or apple stains from the fingers squeeze the juice of a lemon into the palm of the hand and rub into the fingers very thoroughly. The stain will immediately disappear.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S PRINCESS SLIP.

By Anabel Worthington.

Since the style in dresses and skirts is "increased circumference" there can be no doubt that the petticoat or princess slip with a ruffle or flounce has its place in the present vogue of flaring skirts. Its use—not as a beautifier of our dress, as well as its service in other directions, may be better understood when we look at the design, No. 7,708. The summer promises to be one of ruffles and flounces on dresses, and having a slip of the correct design is one way of attaining the picturesque effect that has come into grace again and that will speak style in dresses for later on. Silk, lawn, nainsook or batiste will be chosen according to the individual taste for this princess slip, which may have a gathered ruffle or circular flounce of embroidery; one that is unusually attractive with edging and insertion at the neck and armholes. A high neck may be made and sleeves added, with the result shown in the smaller view of the model. The closing may be made at either front or back.

The pattern is cut in sizes 34 to 42 inches bust measure. To copy the design in size 36 you will need 5½ yards 36 inch material, 3 yards of 14 inch flouncing, 3¼ yards edging, 1 yard insertion, 1¼ yards beading and 1¾ yards ribbon. Or for a plainer style of this model use 6⅝ yards 36 inch goods.

By sending just 10 cents to the office of this publication you may obtain the pattern.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

The HOME CIRCLE COLVIN

UNPRETENDING OBSEQUIES

While Easter reminds us of the resurrection it may benefit us to call fresh to memory a few facts regarding the burial of the Son of God.

Joseph that day was the mourner, sexton, liveryman—had the entire charge of all the occasion. Four people only at the burial of the King of the Universe. Let this be consolatory to those who through small means or lack of large acquaintance have but little demonstration of grief at the grave of their dead, it is not necessary. Long lines of glittering equipages, two rows of silver handles, casket of costly wood, pallbearers scarfed and gloved, are not necessary.

Christ looks down from heaven at a burial where there are six in attendance and remembers there are two more than he had at his obsequies. Not recognizing this idea, how many small properties are scattered in the funeral rites, and widowhood and orphanage go out to the cold charity of the world. The departed left enough property to have kept the family together until they could take care of themselves, but it is all absorbed in the funeral rites. That went for crape which ought to have gone for bread. A man of small means can hardly afford to die in one of our large cities. Funeral pageantry is not necessary. No one was ever more lovingly and tenderly put into the grave than Christ, but there were only four persons in the procession.

If you have any doubt in your mind as to the good that can come to you by living in the sunshine way, we ask you to try for one day and prove by personal experience whether or not it is worth your while to scatter sunshine. Begin at once by trying to make those about you in your home happier. Keep a sharp look out for little opportunities of helpfulness. Be courteous and kind whenever you speak or are spoken to. Be pleasant to everyone everywhere. Be willing to sacrifice your own personal enjoyment if by doing so you can make another person happier. Do all this and see when night comes if your own heart is not full to overflowing with peace and joy unspeakable.

* * *

We are often very much impressed by the woman who is doing a great and grand work for humanity but the one who retains our respect is the true wife and mother who presides over her home and children with a heart and head, demonstrating kindness and ability, which puts the blush on the public life.

* * *

A pure man is better than a brilliant man any day and truth and honor make a better crown than cleverness and wit. Set your aim in this world toward the making of happy hearts and homes as the woman spoken of in the play of "Clito" who "made the grass a little greener for her foot passing over it." Strive not so much to be admired as to be loved, and seek to awaken that love in the little ones, whom the Master especially commended to our care.

* * *

A home where the golden rule is lived is the nearest possible approach to heaven. The day comes all too soon when the household is scattered—the boys and girls, alas! girls no longer—are gone to make homes for themselves elsewhere; when some, perhaps, are laid away from our sight, out of reach of kind words or helpful deeds. Happy are we if no sorrowful thoughts haunt us, or hasty words and unkind deeds, if any pleasant memories remain. We may, if our means allow, make our homes beautiful and attractive, and it is well to do so. But without the true spirit of home it will be but a cheerless and desolate mockery—while the humblest cottage where love dwells and kindness reigns, may most beautifully exemplify the sweetness and blessedness of home.

* * *

Put home first and foremost; for there will come a time when the home circle will be broken, when you long "for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still" and when your greatest pleasure will be in remembering that you did all in your power to put a song under every burden, to make each other happy.

* * *

One may be very happy when away from home, but he is very glad to return to it. The plainest old familiar dish is better than the daintiest epicurean bill of fare abroad. One's own little room, with its handy compact belongings, is preferable to all the marble halls, swept through by silken clad dames.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let your sore, swollen, aching feet spread out in a bath of "Tiz."

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead — all tired out — just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture.

Get a 25 cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel! You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

Sorry He Had Been Born

A youth appeared before the Ilford Tribunal and asked for exemption because his nerves were bad and his mother in such a state of health that if he had to be a soldier, she would never see him again. He said he wished for his own as well as for his mother's sake that he had never been born. He was told to call again in June, when he would be nineteen, and the hope was expressed that by that time his nerves would be better.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FRESH GERMAN ATTACKS ON VERDUN

THE GERMANS RENEW ATTACKS ON THE VERDUN KEYSTONE POSITIONS

Enemy Succeeded in Entering French Advanced Trenches at a Few Points War Office Announces But Elsewhere Were Repulsed--United States Break With Germany is Considered Inevitable on First Reading of the German Reply

FOUR MORE IRISH LEADERS SHOT

PARIS (French Official Communique), May 5.—German troops made a violent attack last night against the French positions north of Hill 304, the keystone of the French defense northwest of Verdun, the attack being preceded by violent artillery firing.

The Germans entered the French advanced trenches at a few points, the War Office announced, but elsewhere were repulsed.

East of th Meuse, and in the Woevre, intermittent bombardment occurred. South of the Somme a German attack failed.

Four More Irish Leaders Are Shot

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, May 5.—Four more Irish leaders of last week's rebellion have been convicted and shot; it was officially announced to-day.

They were Joseph Plunkett, one of the men who signed the proclamation establishing an Irish Republic, Edward Daly, Michael O'Hannahan and William Pearse.

Fifteen other rebel leaders were sentenced to death, but sentences were commuted in each case to ten years' imprisonment.

One other rebel was sentenced to eight years', and others to ten years' imprisonment.

Further trials are proceeding.

Death Sentences of Fifteen Commuted

Special to the Examiner:

The fifteen whose death sentence was commuted to ten years are: Thomas Walsh, Finian Lynch, Thomas Bevan, John Williams, J. J. Reed, Michael Mervin, Dennis O'Collaghan, Patrick Sweeney, Patrick McNeety, William Tobin, Peter Clancy, George Irvine, James McClinn, J. W. Walsh and John Doherty.

Francis Fahey and Richard Davis were sentenced to ten years each, and John McCarry to eight years' imprisonment.

Break With U. S. Seems Inevitable

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 5.—As Germany's reply to President Wilson's latest note on submarine warfare began arriving in sections at the State Department early to-day, there was an unmistakeable feeling in high official circles that a break with Germany was inevitable.

The early sections of the note caused the feeling that Germany was beclouding the issue with an avalanche of words, arguments and conditions.

Owing to the length of the German reply, it will demand the most careful digest by the President and Secretary Lansing, it was said this morning, before this Government determined upon a definite course of action.

This action, it is declared, will take one of two turns, either prompt acceptance of the reply as satisfactory, or prompt refusal as absolutely unsatisfactory.

A Reminder To Citizens Who Desire To Join The Horticultural Society

Have you renewed your membership in the Horticultural Society. The time is approaching when the options will be delivered and planted and those citizens who intend to take advantage of this splendid offer should do so at once.

The Horticultural Society has extended its list of options this year to the decided advance of the members. The fee is only one dollar which entitles him to the spring option, fall distribution of bulbs, year's subscription to the Horticulturist Magazine. This is practically the second week in May and there is likely a large number of citizens who desire to join the society and others to renew their membership. This should be done at once, and it is hoped that this reminder will be sufficient notice to them.

21ST BATTALION PLUNGED INTO A FIERY FURNACE

Wounded Soldier Tells of the Experience of Eastern Ontario Battalion in Recent Hard Fighting at St. Eloi

BLACKEN THEIR FACES

LONDON, May 18 (Correspondence)—"It was like a fiery furnace. The bursting hand grenades from our bombers made flashes of red, blue, and green against the blackness, as we dashed forward to attack." Lying back on his comfortable cot in a spacious hospital near London, a Toronto boy, Private C. F. Reid, thus picturesquely tried to convey some idea of the terrific fight in which the 21st Battalion of Ontario and other Canadian regiments met the Germans at St. Eloi.

After blackening their faces, the Canadians who had been some mile and a half to two miles back hurried swiftly up to the assault. Reid, like others, was carrying sandbags to make parapets. Preceded by the bombers, they assailed the German position and soon had the Huns driven out of the crater. But the enemy came back with a deluge of shells, and our men had to retire from the crater temporarily.

Grenades Like Peas.

"The hand grenades just fell like peas and the machine gun fire from the enemy was terrific," declared the soldier. "The enemy must have known we were coming for, though the advance was quickly made, just as we got fairly close up went several bright green flares of unusual brilliancy. Before that there had not been much fire, but then the fun began."

Describing the mining of some German trenches by the British a fortnight before the Canadians' big fight Private Reid said: "There came a burst of flame, a tremendous cloud of earth and debris, and then a roar that shook the ground where we were eight or nine hundred yards away. Then the Huns tried to retaliate and it was fierce to see big trees going down under the cannonade.

Scared Hun Prisoners.

"We took some prisoners about that time, and it was funny to see one German we had jump when he saw one of our chaps draw his bayonet and come for him in the trenches afterwards. He thought the Canadian was going to kill him, but our man only wanted to hack off a Hun button or two from his tunic as a souvenir. This German had a big grey button with "3" on it.

"I really think the Canadians showed the enemy what they were made of in the attack," continued Private Reid. "I am glad I was in it. It was an acceptable change after routine trench life, but I am thankful I got off so easily. Bertha Krupp handed me a souvenir. I had a small chunk of Hun shrapnel in my anatomy, but I am feeling fine. Our boys behaved splendidly. There was not a quitter among them. I got mine on the 30th of April."

LITTLE FELLOWS DO THEIR BIT

An interesting contribution was received to-day by the George street Methodist Red Cross Society. A number of little boys on Dalhousie street, by a series of "shows," raised the sum of 52 cents, which they handed over to the Society with the request that it should be used for Red Cross work.

NORTHERN PLATOONS OF 93rd BATTALION ARRIVED YESTERDAY

Lakefield, Indian Village and Apsley Men Met on the Road By the Battalion and Escorted to the City---Muster Roll Call of the 93rd This Morning---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The arrival of the Apsley and Lakefield platoons, C company, 93rd Battalion, the latter augmented by the detachment from Chemong Indian Village, yesterday was the big feature of the day in military circles. The Apsley platoon, in charge of Lieut. Hughes, had reached Lakefield last week, and yesterday the Indian detachment, in charge of Pte. Samson Taylor, marched over to Lakefield, headed by the Chemong Band. A spartan mother, Mrs. Taylor, of Chemong, who has given five sons to the 93rd, marched with the detachment as far as Lakefield.

Shortly after noon the Lakefield, Apsley and Indian Village detachments fell in in front of the town hall, Lakefield, where farewell addresses were given by Reeve H. Fitzgerald and Revs. Barrett and Slimon. Then headed by the Lakefield and Chemong bands the platoons in charge of Capt. Bygott, O. C., C company, and Lieuts. Hughes and Milburn, left on their ten mile march to Peterborough. The Lakefield band played the soldiers out of the village, and the Chemong Band headed the column until Nassau was reached.

In the meantime the headquarters staff and A, B and D companies had marched out from the armouries and halted near Nassau, while the brass and bugle bands of the battalion were sent on to meet the gallant lads from the north. As the Lakefield and Apsley men came in sight they were greeted with hearty cheers from their comrades in the other companies. The return to the city was made in good time, with C company marching in rear of the bands, followed by A, B, and D companies. When the city was reached the battalion marched south on George street as far as Charlotte street, circled the market square block and returned to the armouries via George street, giving the citizens a good opportunity to view the new comers and also the battalion as a whole.

"A, B and D companies, three cheers for C company," called Col. Johnston when the battalion had reached the parade ground, and the response rattled the windows for blocks around. C company returned the compliment by cheering for the rest of the battalion.

Then the parade was dismissed, and after drawing their blankets and being assigned to their bunks, the new members of C company were soon discussing the incidents of the march over the supper table.

The boys from the north are a well set up, sturdy looking bunch and will make the best of soldiers They were busy this morning in drawing their kit.

Pte. Sam Taylor rises to remark that if any platoon in the battalion is looking for a football game, the boys from Chemong Indian Village, who arrived yesterday are ready to take them on any time. The Indian boys are also ready for a baseball game.

HIS LAST LETTER.

Following is the last letter received by his mother, Mrs. Wm. Carveth, Hall's Glen, from Pte. Gordon Carveth, who left Peterborough with the 8th C. M. R., last spring, and who was killed in action on April 24th. The letter was received on April 8th and three days after Mrs. Carveth was notified that her son was killed:

Belgium, April 8th.

Dear Mother,—I recived your letter to-day dated March 16; will try and answer it this afternoon, as it is a half-holiday. The Y.M.C.A. is about a mile from where we are camped, and I came over here to bring your letters over so don't know bring your leter over, so don't know exactly when it was written. I got a letter to-day from Ida, and also one from Walter; so got lots of news all at once.

You said that you were leaving for Saskatoon in a few days. You will have some great experiences to tell them about when you get home. I got a nice letter from Carrie McCracken in Toronto. Stanley and Lieut. Johnson have gone to Havre for about two months or perhaps more. They left about a week ago. Stanley was well then. He is still Orderly for Lieut. Johnson. He has a good job there as long as he stays with it. He goes with him where ever he goes. I never got the parcel that Ida sent from Oshawa Christmas. You spoke of us not getting enough to eat. Well, we get enough to eat, such as it is. We get bully beef and hard-tack twice a week, and that is two meals that I don't each much of, for we have got so much of it that we are getting tired of it. But we get bread and jam besides, so we get all we want to eat. If any of you are sending me another parcel any time, some of that home-made candy (that Ida sent), and cakes, cakes, is what I would like to see most. The safest way to send it is in a tin box tied with a strong string or a cloth sewed around it.

I got a parcel of four pairs of socks from Mrs. Chas. McConnell at Norwood, a few days ago, so I am well supplied with socks. I must write her a few lines to-day to let her know that I got her parcel. We have been out from the trenches about a week; we were in sixteen days the last time, and have had very few casualties. We have been very luck so far. I think we are in a lucky regiment. We weren't shelled at all the last time we were in. The trenches were quite close together, and they used rifle grenades and trench mortars more than anything else. Some places the trenches were so close together we used to throw bombs over and, sometimes, for to make Fritz mad, we would throw over stones, bricks, etc. When we came back to the reserve trench they shelled us a little one afternoon. One fellow was walking along the road. He had his pay-book in his left upper pocket of his coat, a shell hit near him and a piece of shrapnel hit the book straight for his heart; it went through his coat and pay-book, and stopped at his shirt. It was a piece about an inch square. About a year ago now there were big doings around here, but it is quiet here now, except for the artillery; it keeps pounding away day and night. I have got used to them now and don't mind it. It is about six months since we landed here, although it doesn't seem like more than two months; time goes fast over here, at least it does for me.

Our passes were stopped for a few weeks, but have started again. I wouldn't mind spending a week in civilization now. It would be a change to what I have been used to. I was to Church on Sunday, and go to a moving picture show occasionally. You would wonder how they could have shows like that so near the firing line; but they have all kinds of places of amusement when we are in rest billets.

I don't think it will be necessary for you to send me any more socks as we have been getting all the socks we want. I got a pair of those that came from Warsaw and I could have had more if I'd wanted them. I have seven or eight pairs now.

I just got a letter from Stanley. He is well and likes it fine there. I am sending his mail to him from here.

They don't like us to send our address in a letter any more than we can help, but I will send it again so that you will be sure to have it right.

Well, I must draw this epistle to a close, with love to all.

Your loving son,

Private Gordon Carveth, 111845, B Company, 7th Platoon, 5 C.M.R. Battalion, 9th Brigade, 3rd Division, Canadian Army Corps, B. E. F., France.

The Examiner has received a copy of a recruiting bill that is being used in the city of Quebec. It is printed in French and English and asks the very pertinent question. "Have you a reason or an excuse for not enlisting?"

Mr. Wm. Saxby is delighted at having received yesterday a letter written by his son, Pte. W. A. Saxby, who was reported wounded a short while ago. It was written in France, but he expects to be in England by this time. He states that his right arm was broken below the elbow by shrapnel, and he has also a shrapnel

A FINE TRIBUTE TO CANUCKS FROM BRITISH OFFICER

"No Man's Land" Between Them and Germans is Called "Canada" Now Writes Capt. Carden, of the Royal Artillery

A CANADIAN TRICK

Following is an extract from a letter received by Mrs. R. N. Stuart from her cousin, Capt. J. H. Cardew of the Royal Artillery, Imperial forces:

"The Canadians are first-rate and have fairly put the fear of the Lord into the Germans, so much so that "no man's land" between them is called "Canada", the Boshes never daring to get out of their parapet for a breath of fresh air and an insect hunt as they may sometimes do in other places. One of the Canadian tricks was to crawl out into "Canada" in the dark put a bomb in the can hang on the wire defenses, tie a string to them and crawl back. When they were all back they retired to their dug-outs and pulled the strings, which of course called up a hurricane of fire. As soon as the Boches took it for granted that they had all been wiped out of existence, the Canucks went over to their trenches and bombed them into everlasting silence.

Only a short time ago a Hun aeroplane came down in our lines on purpose. The man said he was "fed-up" and wanted some rest. Before he was marched off, he particularly requested to be allowed to see a Canadian as he had heard what frightful savages they were but had never seen one. He seemed very disappointed at the specimen we exhibited. I believe he expected tar and feathers"

LIVELY TIMES AT REID CO'S TO-MORROW

Ladies who have kept some spare cash for the wind-up day of Reid's "Turn-Over" Sale will have a chance to make it go a long way to-morrow. Beginning early in the morning and continuing up until the hour of closing, all suits, coats, skirts and waists, will be offered at sacrificing prices. The store staff will be strengthened, so that customers may be waited on promptly. Some of the prices will be a cause for wonderment. Pretty summer suits and waists, unusually smart and graceful coats and skirts, will prove to be big economies to buyers. Some of the garments are stirring models of the spring's vogue. The ladies can have a lively time to-morrow on a little cold cash, which the Reid Co. prefer, just now, to the garments, handsome as they are.

Special Attraction At Empire Theatre

For to-day and to-morrow we are giving as an extra attraction to our regular programme, four reels of a good Charlie Chaplin Comedy. Don't forget we are showing for the balance of the week Blanche Ring in "The Yankee Girl." We have a fine programme.

DUKE IS NOT TO LEAVE.

Denial at Rideau Hall of Intended Departure From Canada.

OTTAWA, May 5.—A rumour that the Duke of Connaught is to return to England this summer and be succeeded by a new Governor-General had considerable currency in Ottawa yesterday.

At Rideau Hall, however, the report was characterized as unfounded. "It was all news to us," asserted one of the staff of the Duke, "and it was quite as much so to His Royal Highness."

Berlin Promises to Modify Submarine Warfare But Asks United States to Demand That Great Britain and Her Allies Give Up Their Blockading Operations.

NOTE IS RECEIVED

BERLIN, May 5. — Germany has yielded most of the demands by President Wilson in his note to Germany demanding a complete change in German methods of submarine warware is conceded in German reply made public here to-day. One of the concluding paragraphs of the German reply is as follows:

The German Government notifies the Government of the United States that the German naval forces have received the following orders in accordance with general principles of visit, search and destruction of merchant vessels recognized by international law. Such vessels both within and without the area declared to be a naval war zone, shall not be sunk without warning, and without the saving of human lives unless the ships attempt to escape or offer resistance.

In another paragraph which follows, however, the German Government intimates that in consideration of this concession the United States should immediately demand that Great Britain and her allies cease the blockading operations which made Germany's submarine policy necessary.

Should the steps taken by the government of the United States to force Britain to alter the conduct of the war, not obtain the object it desires, to have laws of humanity followed by all belligerent nations, the German Government would then be facing a new situation in which it must reserve to itself complete liberty of decision, said the concluding paragraph of the reply.

NEW YORK CITY, May 5.—Officials of the American line stated today that there would be no interruption in service of their vessels to Britain if there was a break between the United States and Germany. One official said: "If there is war between the United States and Germany, the British navy will doubtless furnish all necessary protection for our ships."

WASHINGTON, May 5.—1 P.M. — High Government officials in intimate touch with the German-American negotiations said, after a careful perusal of the Germany reply:

Germany appears to have made great concessions. I cannot see where there is anything that would at present justify a break. Germany has gone much farther than the earlier reports which reached us indicate. There was unanimity of opinion among those who called at the White House, that the President should accept the offer of the German Government as given in good faith.

JOHN BULL IN EARNEST.

Great Britain has her whole heart in winning this war, and will not hesitate at any sacrifice needed to help insure success. One evidence of this is the fact that fifteen hundred Canadian lumbermen are now on the seas bound for the old country where they will be employed in cutting timber, for domestic purposes—for railway sleepers, pit props, etc., to supply the deficiency which proceeds from shortage of transport tonnage. This shows that John Bull is in deadly earnest. In the land where trees are held sacred, cutting down one of England's "tall ancestral trees" is, as a Britisher, like sawing at his heartstrings.

SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE.

The Toronto News, is performing the apotheosis of Dr. Michael Clarke because he protested against intemperate criticism of the government by the Opposition, as do we all. Yet the News is daily hounding Mr. Asquith and the Asquith government and defends the same practice by the "wasplish" Northcliffe press, which is justified in the declaration of the News that in respect of the Northcliffe press attacks, "it has developed that the press was right." Admitting this, the conclusion follows that in the vast majority of the Ottawa opposition's "attacks" upon graft in war contracts, "it has developed that the Opposition was right"— enough has been disclosed, revealed, uncovered to amply justify the investigations that have proceeded from the "attacks" of the Opposition. The News does not take kindly to the idea that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

SHELL INVESTIGATION "JAMMED."

The shells investigation machine gun at Ottawa, "jammed" yesterday and wouldn't work. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, counsel for the Opposition, was brought to an impasse when the commissioners, ruled, with technical propriety, no doubt, that questions, in cross-examination, could not be put referring to matters outside the four shell contracts mentioned in the Commission's commission. Sir William Meredith virtually sustained Mr. Johnston's motion and admitted the smallness of it, when he suggested that application should be made to Parliament to extend the scope of the inquiry. Without pronouncing upon the importance of what the investigation has so far revealed, if we regard it as a "preliminary hearing," it is not perhaps contempt of court to suggest that a prima facie case has been made out strongly enough to justify the sending of the whole shell matter for trial. That is, the powers of the Commission should be so far enlarged as to permit of an effort to get at the bottom of the business, to get "the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," which it is very reasonable to think, has not been done so far.

CANADA FOR CANADIANS.

The London Times calls attention to the fact that Great Britain had been blindly dealing before the war with a mineral product, very important in the manufacture of warship equipments. Tungsten, an ingredient of wolfram ore, is used as an alloy for high speed steel for machine tools. It is used in tungsten steels, that have self hardening properties and are also largely used in producing heavy gun and armour plate. It is stated on good authority that a single province in Burma, a British possession, can supply half the world's present annual requirements of tungsten. Thus Great Britain had almost a monopoly of one of the important elements of war [illegible] gun construction. Yet [illegible] present war began, Britain [illegible] very partially developed the [illegible] of tungsten in Burma and [illegible] blindly handing over the entire [illegible] produced to German agents, [illegible] this spot or in London.

[illegible] follows: Stupid to be understood, [illegible] only matched by the folly of the [illegible] that has permitted the manufacture of nickel outside Canada, which has the greatest nickel deposits in the world; and there is no doubt that the very submarines that are destroying so many British merchant ships owe their construction very largely to Canadian nickel.

Thus we have Britain and Canada possessing, and able, if willing, to control the output and destination of a virtual monopoly of two of the most important economic metals, and the two most important ingredients in the making of steel for armour plate and large guns, and foolishly failing to get the fullest advantage. It is safe to say that hereafter Great Britin will not allow her tungsten deposits in Burmah to be diverted into the hands of her bitterest enemy; and one would think that our own Canadian government would take immediate measures to secure to Canada the fullest benefits of our monopoly of nickel. Nature has given us a monopoly of nickel, but we are sharing, what should be, primarily, solely for the benefit of Canadians, with the enemy that is using it with disgusting efficiency against us.

We talk of, and are anxious for, economic and industrial reconstruction after the war. We have tremendous natural resources, and we should strive for symmetrical and not one-sided development of them. Everybody seems to put particular stress upon agricultural production. That is, of course, a capital interest, but with the fullest exploitation of that should go, hand in hand, industrial development, the two involving, of course, commercial development. When the war ends Europe will be prostrated in every way. Her agricultural and industrial recovery will be slow and here is presented a chance for Canada to get a profitable footing in both commercial and industrial fields in Europe and elsewhere in the world. We must develop, not only our agricultural, but our mineral and forest wealth. The basic idea of this development should be the home manufacture of everything of our natural resources to the ultimate commercial condition. In this way we can keep at home the profits of the labour and attendant profits of home production and manufacture, and give double value to our wealth of natural resources. Canada for the Canadians is a patriotic ambition and one that confronts no insuperable obstacles to full realization. By building up a robust Canada in every way we shall as part of the Empire be helping to build up the Empire; and help maintain it in peace as we are helping to preserve it in war, as the highest agency in the spread of civilization and the boon of British freedom.

Women's Place in "Production and Thrift"

Upon the women of the land will rest the greatest burden of success in the campaign for thrift that has been inaugurated. As heads of the household they are the chancellors of domestic exchequers. It is for them to bear in mind that expenditure upon articles that are not actually needed is not alone lessening their own resources, but also depriving the country of something that might be more profitably applied. The majority of men will agree that so far as the household is concerned their women are pretty thrifty. But stinginess, parsimoniousness, or miserliness is not thrift. The thrifty woman combines with a natural aptitude for economy the wisdom of selection and utilization. She knows when to save and when to spend. She knows what is necessary and what can be done without, and she makes the best use of everything. Neither does she do all things herself. When help is at hand she utilizes it with discretion.

The great aid to thrift is thoughtfulness. In fact without that element thrift is utterly out of the question. The thrifty woman, too, not only exercises wisdom herself, but sees that her children do the same thing—not by indulging them, but by delegating to them sundry offices of which they are capable, by making them self-reliant. But the woman cannot do all these things by herself. She must enjoy the support, countenance and influence of her menkind. The greatest enemy to thrift is the promiscuous doling out of the money. It is not to boys and girls a sign of good nature; it is death to the recipient. It poisons their disposition and sows seeds of weeds that can never be eradicated. For that sort of thing women are but little responsible, but where their efforts shine is in allowing nothing to go to waste, in making use of everything, and in exercising ingenuity in food, dress, household labour and the bringing up of children. An incentive to the accomplishment of these things is a reflection upon the times, upon the needs and experience of their male relatives at the front, and upon the fact that every ounce saved is a contribution to the welfare of the country and perhaps to winning the war.

THE RELATION OF RAILWAYS TO CANADIAN IMMIGRATION

The railway problem in Canada today is largely a matter of developing that part of the Dominion which lies west of the Great Lakes. Or, in other words, colonization is the question of primary importance to be considered in any discussion of the future economic status of the country's railway system. Whether the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern lines are nationalized or not, the rural population of the middle western Provinces in particular must be increased before these railways will be in a position to be operated profitably. Under existing conditions there is one mile of railway in the four western Provinces to every 153 persons, and taking only the producing class of the population into consideration, there is one mile of railway to every sixty-nine persons. No other country in the world has such a disproportioned railway equipment as that.

When the second and third transcontinental railway lines, with their numerous tributary branches, were under construction, the supposition was that Canada's immigration would continue to increase in volume from year to year until the vacant spaces of the West were occupied and the future of the new routes of transportation was assured.

But the inflow of immigration has not continued without interruption. The high mark of the incoming tide of new citizens was reached in the fiscal year 1913 — 1914, when over forty thousand people were received into Canada. In 1915 the volume has decreased to less than 150,000, of whom Western Canada received a bare half. During the last fiscal year ended March 31, the western Provinces, according to the statement of the Chief Immigration Inspector of Western Canada was 7,686, and all of them were from the United States. But that number does little to offset the exodus of 120,000 soldiers from the West since the outbreak of war. For the time being the [illegible] western areas of Canada, in which hundreds of millions of dollars have been invested in the form of railway and municipal development, are at a standstill, and about 1,500,000 people are called upon to operate and support a great plant which is better suited to rest upon the shoulders of ten million people.

The Canadian Pacific, through its Department of Natural Resources, is the most active colonization agency in the West at the present time. A very large proportion of the 7,686 settlers who came across the line to Western Canada in the past twelve months were brought into the country and ushered to new homes on the land by agents of the C. P. R. The heads of that company appreciate the fundamental importance of colonization at this time, and their increased land sales during 1915 and in the first four months of this year bear testimony to the eagerness with which that business corporation is endeavouring to extend its sources of traffic.

After the war Canda expects to receive a large number of returned soldiers. It is doubtful if any great number of those men will seek a living on the unbroken prairie lands of the West. If they do not other people must do so. In this interval in Canda's national growth the time is ripe for the planning of a new Governmental system of immigration and colonization. The Dominion Economic Commission, which was organized last autumn, has recommended to Sir Robert Borden the creation of a special Department of Immigration and Colonization, to be conducted in a non-political way by the ablest man for the work it is possible to find in Canada. Such a department cannot be organized too soon, because the country's great need is an increased body of producers in the fertile and unpeopled districts of Western Canada. The problems of colonization and transportation are inseparable.—The Globe.

Must Have Been "Short O' Breath."—An Englishman who fulfilled the duties of land steward in connection with a large estate in Scotland was one day treating a farm servant to a glass of whisky by way of compensating him for doing some extra work. The servant put on an air of unmistakable disappointment at the unwelcome smallness of the glass. The Englishman, thinking to divert the workman's attention from his critical examination, jauntily asked, "I say, Sandy, do you happen to know how glasses like the one you are holding in your hand are made?" "Nae, maister, I dinna ken onything aboot the matter," answered Sandy. "I wonder you haven't heard that they are blown," said the steward. "Aweel," replied the servant, as with a judicial look he held up the glass, "the man surely has been nigist awfu' short o' breath that blew this ane."—W. W. R.

The following lines, which are dedicated to the Army Service Corps, are sent to the Examiner by Driver George Gauthier, 4th Divisional Train, C.A.S.C., South Barracks Headquarters Camp, Halifax, N.S.:

"The Army Service Corps."

There's a handful of men in the army,
Who seldom shoulder a gun,
And it's little that's known about them
When everything's said and done;
And they try to escape any notice
As they quietly slip off to war,
For they never expect a send-off
In the Army Service Corps.

They don't aim at capturing prisoners
Or at taking the enemy's flag,
But they serve in an humble vocation
For the sake of the grand old rag.
Amid the inferno of battle
And in spite of the cannon's roar
They keep on quietly working,
In the Army Service Corps.

When the foeman's heavy gun fire
Has scattered and smashed their supplies,
They take good grips on their upper lips
And with never-say-die in their eyes,
They bustle around and check things up
And put them in order once more.
For they don't know the meaning of quitting
In the Army Service Corps.

When their fellow soldiers are resting,
Awaiting a new day's dawn
They are desperately heaving and straining
With muscle and sinew and brawn.
For they must deliver the rations
Although they are weary and sore,
They are stacking good men that stick it
In the Army Service Corps.

And when the war is over
And peace again doth reign
This handful of men silently turn
Back to their homes again.
And they try to escape any notice
As they silently slip ashore,
For it's a way they have of doing things
In the Army Service Corps.

There were 780 recruits secured in Military District No. 5 during the last two weeks of April. The nationalities should be of interest, as the official report shows the following division. Canadian, 341; English, 186; Scotch, 80; Irish, 8; others, 34.

Officer of the Guard—You say you found a man bleeding and groaning from a wound in the head, and that you cured him with a tourniquet.

Private Muldoon—Yis, sorr. Oi put th' tourniquet around his neck, an' afterr twistin' it a couple av minutes, be jabbers, there wasn't another groan out av him.

It is expected that contractors will begin their work at Barriefield camp on Monday next, and the work given will be rushed to completion. The Engineers are very busy with the water supply, and the extension of the system so as to reach all parts of the large camp. New wells will be driven, and the pumping station at the bay will be installed at once.

The 3rd Military district has contributed 32,115 recruits to the Canadian Expeditionary Force since war began.

The Kingston Standard says: Some of the battalions arriving at Barriefield have applied for permission to remain in their quarters until after the celebration of Victoria Day. This is being arranged as far as possible, but not to alter the first made plan of having two battalions a day coming to camp from May 22nd until all are in camp.

The Kingston Standard says: It will be necessary for Canada to maintain for purpose of detail alone fully 75 battalions in a complete state of training throughout the balance of the war. With 68 battalions in France and Flanders, a first line of reserves in England, will have to be at least 75 battalions, with a second line in Canada of an equal number.

Just as soon as the summer camps open and units are brought to Barriefield from the various training centres, other battalions will at once be recruited to take their places. It is said that Major Carew of the 109th, Lindsay, will be given command of one of these battalions.

None of the battalions coming to Barriefield camp will return to the places where they were organized. All will go overseas from the camp.

Recruiting will have to be maintained by all the battalions in camp, during the entire period of training at Barriefield.

Although base companies have been abolished, battalions will be allowed during camp to carry 100 men over strength to compensate for the loss of men on drafts.

Because of the arrival in the city of Lieut. McKinnon of the headquarters Staff, Kingston there was a monster parade of the 83rd Battalion this morning. The roll-call was smartly carried out and Lieut. McKinnon was enabled to get away at noon apparently well satisfied with local conditions.

Considerable interest was aroused on George street last evening by the spectacle of a huge alarm clock suspended by a blanket from a window of one of the dormitories at the Y.M.C.A. Naturally the unusual position of said clock caused much speculation but the puzzle was solved when it was discovered that the time piece was the property of a certain officer of the 93rd Battalion who is fond of taking exercise on a gasoline-propelled bicycle. It is stated that the clock was hung outside so that he could time his motor cycle and keep inside the speed limit.

The recruit who had a strong desire to escape service, was being examined in the eyesight test. The size of the type was increased continually, but it was no use. He couldn't see the words. Then a seasoned campaigner entered, and held up his mess-tin.

"Can you see that?" he shouted to the recruit.

"Of course I can," he replied, disdainfully, "but I'm not quite sure whether it's a fifty-cent piece or a dime!" Despair of examiner!

Nothing definite is known of the date of the departure of the 93rd Battalion from the city but it is hoped that the unit will not leave until after Victoria Day, May 24th when it is planned to have a big demonstration in which the battalion will play the centre part. The visit of Creatore's Famous Band the proceeds of which will go to the Battalion is another reason why it is desired to keep the 93rd here until after the 19th at least. At present all battalions in the division have been advised that they are expected to be ready to go to Barriefield at any time from May 15th on, but unless there comes some warm, dry weather Barriefield will not be ready by that date.

The officers and non-coms of the 93rd Battalion who have been attending a course of instruction in bayonet fighting and physical training at Montreal are expected home to-morrow.

All members of the 93rd who are not on farm leave will be back on duty Monday and the citizens will then be able to see the Battalion at full strength as far as recruited.

WALKERTON, May 4.—The 106th Bruce Battalion, which to date holds the record as the fastest recruited rural battalion in Ontario, is now being mobilized at Walkerton. As the Bruce force which is 1,208 strong, or 50 over strength, contains no less than 548 men from the farm, and as 538 of these have gone back to the land for a few weeks to assist in the seeding operations, the whole of the battalion will not likely be under cover in Walkerton before May 20. The Bruce Battalion which is under the command of Col. Weir and Major Moffat, is practically a body of giants, and when drilled and rounded into shape promises to be one of the best fighting units in the Dominion.

Mr. Charlie Stenson, returned soldier, has obtained a position in the office of the C.G.E. works and will commence duties on Monday.

DOG POISONERS ARE AT WORK

Collie Dog Owned By Magistrate Dumble Succumbed to a Dose of Strychnine Obtained in the Vicinity of Downie St.

For the second time within a week or ten days, "Sailor," the collie dog owned by Police Magistrate Dumble, has been the victim of dog poisoners. This morning when the animal reached the police station he was in a state of collapse. Patrol Sergeant Kidd administered first aid in the form of a bottle of castor oil which seemed to afford relief. The oil is said to absorb the poison.

This is one of a number of cases that have been reported within the past few weeks. It will go harder with the culprits if they are caught.

Dog Succumbed.

Later Bulletin—"Sailor" has since passed to the higher dog life. An hour after the poison began to take effect, Dr. Johnston, veterinary surgeon, was called in. He arrived in time to administer a dose of chloroform and speed the parting canine. The poison, it is believed, was obtained in the vicinity of Downie street.

Two Problems Before the Church

Rev. Canon Cornish Gives Address Before Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary

At yesterday afternoon's session of the annual meeting of the Toronto Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary, Rev. Canon Cornish of Peterborough, who has spent thirty-two years in Northwestern Canada, said the two chief problems of the church there are on the one hand the influx of the non-English speaking immigrants, and, on the other, the small numbers of Canadians who are in training for the ministry. Hearty applause followed the Canon's statement that in a western town of 4,000 every available man had gone to the front, and out of twenty-five postulants for holy orders in one college twenty are overseas or in training to go.

ANSWER "CALL TO ARMS"

One Berlin Mother Has 20 Children; 15 Not Uncommon.

BERLIN, May 5.—That some German mothers have not gone on strike against providing the fatherland with future defenders, or refuse to furnish the nation with what the Socialists have called 'cannon food,' is evident from the vital statistics just issued.

In February five mothers in Berlin, ranging in age between forty and forty-five, gave birth to their sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth child, respectively, two girls and three boys, all living. Three other women in Berlin gave birth to their fourteenth eleven their thirteenth, eight to their twelfth, five to their eleventh, and seven to their tenth child.

When boiled and unboiled eggs get mixed spin them. The boiled ones will spin round quite fast while those which have not been cooked will hardly spin round once.

Only the yellow rind and juice of lemons should be used. The white pith under the yellow is bitter, and care should be taken not to use it at all, especially in cookery.

Gallant French Soldiers Do Great Work With Bayonet at Dead Man's Hill

PARIS, May 4.—News from Verdun to-day shows that Gen. Petain's gains at Le Morte Homme this week are the most important French successes of the entire Verdun battle.

There was great enthusiasm at 7 o'clock yesterday evening when word came from the Meuse battlefield that the French had captured valuable positions northwest of the hill.

The attack was delivered by part of an army corps that has several times covered itself with glory in this battle. The men were about to be given a week's leave, but when they learned that an operation was impending begged to be allowed to carry it out. Gen. Petain yielded.

"And," said a wounded officer "the men fought like lions. We carried the whole position at the point of the bayonet without firing a single shot."

"We dashed at them, laughing aloud," said a wounded corporal. "The Germans were petrified with surprise."

The paucity of prisoners is explained by the fact that the trenches were packed with dead after the terrific French bombardment.

The Temps to-night says: "The Germans are claiming that they have smashed our reserves. If the Government would let us publish the total of our losses at Verdun it would be seen that they were less than those of our offensives in May and September last, although those engagements did not last half as long as Verdun."

The newspaper adds that the strength of the French artillery has been greatly increased since the Verdun battle began.—General De La Croix, former President of the War Council, writes:

"Our losses have not impaired our powers of offensive. I do not believe the Germans can say the same.

"We can expect a gradual decline in their strength, which to-day consists largely of their quick-firing navy guns and machine guns. I have positive information, however, that their batteries have suffered greatly from our gunfire. I do not pretend that our guns have not suffered, but we can always replace them.

"The allies can now smash any German offensive, wherever it may be delivered."

H.R.H. DUKE OF CONNAUGHT ATTENDS SHAM BATTLE.—The Duke of Connaught with General W. A. Logie and other members of the Headquarters Staff, are seen attending a sham fight in Toronto recently.

The Sergeant Major Scored Easily.—The sergeant-major had the reputation of never being at a loss for an answer. A young officer made a bet with a brother officer that he would in less than twenty-four hours ask the sergeant-major a question that would baffle him. The sergeant-major accompanied the young officer on his rounds, in the course of which the cook house was inspected. Pointing to a large copper of water, just commencing to boil, the officer said, "Why does that water only boil around the edges of the copper and not in the centre?" "The water around the edge, sir," replied the veteran, "is for the men on guard; they have their breakfast half an hour before the remainder of the company.

Kitchener Pays Fine Tribute To Gen. Townshend

LONDON, May 5.—In the House of Lords to-day Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, the Secretary for War, warmly eulogized General Townshend and the defenders of Kut-el-Amara, and read General Townshend's last despatch, which is as follows:

"We are pleased to know that we have done our duty and recognise that our situation is one of the fortunes of war. We thank you, General Gorringe (Commander of the British relief army) and all the ranks of the Tigris force for the great efforts you have made to save us."

Imminent starvation compelled the surrender of Kut-el-Amara, added Lord Kitchener, and adverse elements alone denied success to the relief force.

KUT SPLENDIDLY DEFENDED.

Lord Kitchener said he was glad of the opportunity to pay tribute to General Townshend and his troops, "whose dogged determination and splendid courage had earned for them so honourable a record."

After a series of brilliantly fought engagements, continued Lord Kitchener, General Townshend decided to hold the strategically important position of Kut-el-Amara, and it would not be forgotten that his dispositions for the defence of the place were so excellent that the Turks, notwithstanding their numerical superiority, were not able to penetrate his lines. The House would not fail to realise, the War Minister believed, how tense was the strain upon these troops, which for more than twenty weeks held their positions under conditions of abnormal climatic difficulties and on rations calculated for protraction to the farthest period until, as it proved, imminent starvation compelled their capitulation.

EVERY EFFORT MADE.

General Townshend and his troops in their honourable captivity, added Lord Kitchener, would have the satisfaction of knowing that in the opinion of their comrades, which was shared by the House and the Country, they did all that was humanly possible to resist to the last, and their surrender reflected no discredit on the record of the British and Indian armies.

Every effort had been made, said Lord Kitchener, to relieve the beleaguered garrison, and adverse elements alone were responsible for the lack of success. Constant rain and the consequent floods had not only impeded the advance, but had compelled, in place of a turning movement, direct attack upon an impossibly narrow front. No praise would appear extravagant for the troops under General Lake and Gorringe, and that they did not reap the fruit of their courage and devotion was solely due to circumstances which fought against them.

Real Estate Movement Mostly in Trades Now

Real estate men report considerable activity since Spring re-opened. Most of the business is being transacted in trades. The actual purchases of lots and buildings have not been numerous, although there have been quite a few inquiries. But the trading itself is offering a fair amount of business. Property values are said to be quite favourable to the purchaser in view of the sustained conditions in Peterborough, but as one man expressed it most people delay buying until they are in the midst of the boom.

New Porta Rica Pines Are Arriving Freely

CANADA WON'T SEARCH

U. S. Secretary of State So Assures Lake Carriers' Association.

DETROIT, Mich., May 5.—Secretary of State Lansing has assured William Livingston, president of the Lake Carriers' Association, that the Canadian Government does not plan to exercise the right of search on vessels visiting Canadian lake ports. A report recently was published to this effect, which said that Canada intended to remove sailors of belligerent nations from Great Lakes steamers touching at Canadian ports.

Secretary Lansing's telegram to Livingston quotes a message from the American Consul-General at Ottawa, as follows:

"I am informed by the Canadian Department of External Affairs that these regulations are not applicable to river and harbour ports, and that any instructions that may have been issued in that behalf have been cancelled. The Department states, however, rule for such removal from neutral vessels will be enforced at all sea ports."

Men's destiny is towards progress. He cannot progress if he does not cultivate his mind. That has to be watered and cared for just as a plant. —Peter Keary.

Jimmy—"What is a retainer, pa?" "A retainer, my son, is the money people pay to us lawyers before we can do any work." "Oh, I see. It's like those slot meters. The people have to pay their money before they get any gas."

BLANCHE RING AT THE EMPIRE

The Photo Play of 'the Yankee Girl is a Great Hit

Blanche Ring, the actress, is every bit as gifted as her only rival, Blanche Bates, the singing comedienne. This fact is ably demonstrated in her filmization of "The Yankee Girl" her most notable musical comedy hit of a season or so ago. Figuring in an entirely new field and derived of the usual resources whereby she has been accustomed to get her effects, Miss Ring in her fine acting makes the spectator lose her just as much as of old. "The Yankee Girl" has been taken from the painted scenery of the stage and placed in natural settings featuring a real yacht on a real ocean and real Spanish surroundings in keeping with the plot.

Empire Theatre to-day and to-morrow. Continuous performance.

Prices will remain firm and steady all winter if air-slaked lime is sprinkled in barrels of hides to absorb the moisture.

Foresee Fierce Trade War in South America

LONDON, May 4 — The United States may look for fierce German commercial competition in South America after the war.

This warning is sounded by English traders, shipping experts, and diplomats. It is based on what these individuals know of England's post-bellum plans toward Germany and what they have observed of Germany's preparations for saving as much as possible from the war wreck age.

The English programme has not been worked out officially, but it is the general understanding that such restrictions will be placed on German vessels touching at the allied ports as to make such visits unprofitable. Unquestionably this will be done unless the allies should be completely exhausted.

Embargo on German Trade.

An embargo [illegible] will be placed thus on German trade with most European countries, with all of Africa but Liberia, with most of Asia and with Australia, and nearly all of the world's insular settlements.

Even China will be closed to the fatherland's traders, since the way ports at which German craft have touched on voyages to the eastward are, with few exceptions, English, French, or Portuguese; and the voyage to the westward, across the Atlantic and the Pacific, is too long to be made profitable.

Only by the cultivation of this way station business, experts say, have the Germans been able to carry on their trade with the far east without enormous losses.

This will leave the South American countries as the only trading field within a comparatively short ocean run from German ports; and plans for developing them to the utmost, it is declared, already are fully matured, ready for the launching of a formidable campaign as soon as German ships again can sail the seas.

The German purpose is to reach the east coast direct and the west coast by way of the Panama canal, and to carry on operations all over the continent on a tremendous scale.

Exhaustive information concerning the German scheme has been gathered ready for England's benefit in nearly [illegible] applicable to the United States.

However, Germany probably will not be financially strong enough after the war to extend such tremendously long credits as in the past, and this may react to the advantage of the United States.

CONTINUE SPLENDID CO-OPERATION.

London Daily News: The ideal, of course, would be for the allies to adopt the policy of free trade among themselves, leaving the rest of the world to follow the example at its leisure. That would mark the greatest advance ever made in world relationships and would be the noblest fruit of the war. We hope that heroic experiment will be discussed at the conference. But in the absence of such an achievement, there are many things to be done. The allies at the present time are poling their resources in an unprecedented measure. We are working together as one firm. France concentrating on this form of production, England on that, Russia on the other—all by arrangement, all for the common benefit. We have founded great trusts, not for private advantage, but for the general advantage, and have excluded the exploitation of the middleman from great areas of trade. Let us organize the continuance of this splendid co-operation. It is saving us in war. It will bless us in peace.

CASEMENT WAS PELTED OUT OF GERMAN PRISON CAMP

German Journalist Describes Traitor's Attempt to Induce Captured British to Join His Irish Brigade

NEW YORK, May 5.—An account of the efforts of Sir Roger Casement in Germany to persuade Irish prisoners to take up arms against Great Britain and form an Irish brigade of the German army, as told by a Socialist journalist of Berlin, has just reached this country.

The account as sent by way of Greece follows:

During the last six months or so I have received many communications from America, and even from friends in Ireland, earnestly inquiring as to the progress of the formation of the "Irish brigade" in Germany.

For two weeks every attempt on my part to obtain an interview with Mr. Casement failed.

Finally Mr. Casement had an engagement to address the British prisoners held at the Ruhleben camp near Berlin. I learned that everything was arranged in the camp for his address on the "Iniquities of the British Foreign Policies." With eight other newspaper correspondents I arrived in the Ruhleben camp grounds nearly two hours earlier than Mr. Casement's anticipated visit.

PLANT FOR CASEMENT.

When the time approached for Mr. Casement's address I could not help myself noticing that several men who spoke the English of England were active going about and urging on the various groups of prisoners to attend the "meeting "in force." I suspected something was about to happen. I could not believe that these men were capable of becoming traitors to their country in such a wholesale fashion as they pretended.

Next we saw Mr. Casement coming toward the entrance of the huge shed. He was surrounded by a group of men, only two of whom were in uniform.

Out of the entire habitants of the Ruhleben camp nearly 4,000 prisoners had gathered inside the shed. They were men of all climes, colors shades, sizes and mental calibres.

Mr. Casement had spoken about five minutes and the crowd of prisoners had listened to him in tense silence, when suddenly a West Indian colored soldier cried out with a shrill voice that Mr. Casement was "a cheap traitor."

"CHEAP TRAITOR"

Others about him took up the cry and in another instant there was a confusion of loud voices and strong remarks.

During the next three or four minutes not one word of Mr. Casement's utterance could be heard. The men of his party were appealing for a hearing, while the officer accompanying the party was yelling loud commands; but it was all useless.

I saw distinctly a young prisoner who looked like a Negro Indian let go a mud ball, undoubtedly aimed at Mr. Casement's head. It missed him by the width of four or five heads.

No doubt the visitors were thoroughly convinced that they were facing a hostile audience. They turned toward the entrance, but to their misfortune they found themselves at some distance from it. During the commotion they had been carried off toward the centre of the shed.

FOUGHT FOR CHANCE AT HIM

While this was going on my attention was called to a real fist fight, an indiscriminate fist fight it at first appeared, between two groups of British prisoners. I made for this spot.

On getting near enough to hear their excited talk I learned that they were two groups of Irishmen who were disputing among themselves as to who should be given the privilege of "going for" the speaker. The controversy had become so exciting that they had come to a fistic encounter.

MUD BALLS SPEED CASEMENT

In the meantime Mr. Casement had already made his escape followed every now and then with mud balls. Unfortunately the visit of Mr. Casement brought forth no recruits for the Irish Brigade.

As the Casement party neared the boiler house building it became apparent that the road leading to it through the swamps was blocked by an angry mob, yelling and cursing. There was another road, a broad road, leading to the sick room which also ran through the swamps and crossed five or six drainage trenches.

My companions had forgotten that these prisoners were being guarded by our Landstrum and that these men were not professional soldiers. The guard had already formed strong friendships with their prisoners and many of the officers and long ago fraternized with their prisoners.

DEADFALL FOR CASEMENT

Just as I had suspected. Right in the middle of the road leading toward the sick house Mr. Casement and his party—not all of it—fell into a trap dug by five Sierra Leone men. They had dug a trench across the road about six feet wide and covered it with poles. Over these they had spread old newspapers. Then they sprinkled dirt over the papers.

The men who were walking near Casement innocently walked into this trap, and in another instant the atmosphere was thick with the satisfaction of the British prisoners, expressed in loud and throat-piercing yells.

Mr. Casement and five of his party were in that trap down to their waists. They were immediately extricated from the humiliating position.

THE IRISH BRIGADE.

In short, from subsequent investigations and detailed inquiries, I have positively learned that the so-called "Irish Brigade" is composed of 240 Irishmen (two-thirds of whom are from the south and one-third from the north), twenty-six Englishmen, five Moslem Indians and four West Indian colored soldiers.

In addition to these, I am also informed, there are a few Irishmen who have succeeded in making their way to German ports from America and Canada.

I have also learned that the men who joined the "Irish Brigade" were mostly men who wished to escape prison camp conditions. They are being treated with the utmost consideration and knowing well that no one seriously expects military service from them, they are taking advantage of the life of leisure.

Since the Ruhleben incident I heard that Casement made several trips to other war prisoners' camps. I also heard from fellow journalists, who were assigned to accompany him, that he received nearly the same treatment in these camps as at the Ruhleben camp.

HOW TO GET STRONG

A Simple Remedy

Whatever the cause, we want to say to every person who needs strength, you need Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, as it is the most efficient strength creator we have in our store. Here is proof from Dorchester, Mass.:

"I don't know what we would do without Vinol in our family. I was weak, nervous and run-down as the result of an operation, and Vinol restored my strength. Then Grandmother had a nervous breakdown and Vinol built her up and restored her health and strength after everything else had failed. We have used Vinol for 13 years in our family, and would not be without it in the house." Myrtle L. Healy, Dorchester Mass.

We believe in Vinol because we know it is a great strength creator,—due to the extractive medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined with peptonate of iron and beef peptone, all dissolved in a pure medicinal wine, so we always return the purchase money if Vinol fails to benefit those who buy it.

PARENT CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary school held a very largely attended social and business meeting, at the school, yesterday afternoon.

As this was the last meeting of the kind for this season, a splendid programme was given.

Dr. Jessie Bernie gave a most interesting talk on "The Care and Training of Children."

Mrs. Connley's recitation, "The Preacher Down at Cole's," met with hearty applause, which it richly deserved.

A most enjoyable afternoon was brought to a close by Miss Etta Kemp's beautiful rendering of the song "A Melody of Home."

Children's Aid And Juvenile Criminals

Magistrates and Judges are being asked by the Government to hesitate about committing children to Reform Institutions until the Children's Aid Society has shown its inability to handle such cases.

The following letter is being sent out by Mr. J. J. Kelso, Inspector of Industrial Schools:

"In view of the unusual conditions prevailing at the present time, and the need for the strictest economy, I have been instructed to write and request that except in extreme cases you should avoid committing children to the Industrial School, placing them instead in the care of the Children's Aid Society so that they may be given an opportunity under probation or in foster homes to redeem their character. Your co-operation in this respect will be much appreciated."

It costs $4.20 per week for each child committed to an Industrial School, and the total cost to the Province last year for maintaining the children at these institutions was $196,282. It is believed that this amount could be considerably reduced without unduly neglecting the children who need to be cared for.

THOMAS A. EDISON

Sending music by wireless has recently been accomplished by Harold J. Power, of the American Radio and Research Corporation, who is in charge of the wireless station at Tufts College in this city. Already music transmitted by Mr. Powers has been picked up by steamers more than two hundred miles out at sea from this city.

For some time Mr. Powers has been experimenting with this problem of wireless music, but not until during the past fortnight did he meet with any promising success. The delicate mechanism whereby music is transmitted is closely guarded at the station and none of the numerous newspaper men around have been able to induce Mr. Power to reveal the secrets of his work.

In these experiments Mr. Power is using an Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph, the latest invention of the great inventor. Mr. Power reports that the purity of the music reproduced by Edison's invention led to its selection in his experiments.

Operators at various stations along Cape Cod and any number of amateur wireless operators around Boston have reported that they heard quite clearly the music in the air.

Speaking of his invention Mr. Power declared that he believed the time was not far distant when the experiment station at Tufts College would be able to play "The Star Spangled Banner" to the Kaiser's radio operators at Berlin. He said that soon he would try playing grand opera to wireless operators at sea and would make use of such voices as those of Emmy Destinn, Marie Rappold, Jacques Urlus, Anna Case and others of Metropolitan fame.

GERMAN OFFICERS FAT BRUSSELS IS STARVING

Working Classes in Belgian City Suffer Terribly—Food Scarce.

Paris, May 4.—"The Brussels population is almost starving that the German officers may feed abundantly," says Le Journal des Debats, Brussels correspondent. "Elaborately uniformed, monocled officers stroll the streets and flood the restaurants from noon to late in the evening, where their gastronomic feats are an insult to the miser yaround. The establishments they prefer commandeer for their benefit thousands of kilos of flour, meat, fruit and vegetables, which causes a yet more abnormal rise in prices for the public. The small bourgeoisie and working classes suffer terribly. Potatoes cannot be bought and meat, butter and fats are far too dear for them. The worst sufferers are women and children, who fill the hospitals, exhausted by privations."

DOG BANK MESSENGER MAKES DAILY DEPOSITS

Shippensburg, Pa., May 4.— J. C. McGraw, a local hotel proprietor, has the sole canine bank messenger in this section, and in daily deposits, so far, no attempt to misappropriate funds has occurred. The messenger is "Bill," a white bulldog.

Recently McGraw started for the bank and saw "Bill" following him. He placed his bank book with a sheaf of checks and bills in the dog's mouth and "Bill" trotted to the bank. Climbing on a chair to reach the teller's window, the dog presented the book, and after the entry was made again, took it in his jaws and returned to the hotel. Since that time "Bill" has been making daily trips. He is also the mascot of the Cumberland Valley Fire Company and carries a fire ax in every parade.

WET WEATHER RETARDS SEEDING

Peterborough County Farmers Beginning to Suffer From Effects of Late Season

Farmers in Peterborough County are beginning to suffer from the effects of the late season. Frequent rains and an absence of warm weather has done much to retard farming operations throughout the county. This combined with the help problem adds to the difficulties of the Peterborough County farmer. It is estimated that not more than fifty per cent of the spring seeding has been accounted for. As a general thing farmers figure on completing the spring seeding not later than the fifteenth or twentieth of this month. Unless the weather takes a turn for the better the last of the spring seeding will not be done before the twenty-fourth of May.

THE POTATO CROP.

A late spring not only affects the grain crops but also the root crops. Farmers as a rule do not commence to plant potatoes until after the grain is in. Why this should be is a mystery that none but the farmers themselves can account for. Some will say they haven't time. That may be but when it is known that the early potatoes are invariably the best, the farmers could well afford to take a day or two off during the spring seeding and put in the potatoes.

Early potatoes not only have a fighting chance of weathering a potential drought but are in a better position to resist the ravages of the bugs. The latter do not come out until the weather is warm and danger from frost is assured. As it is many of the farmers do everything that is to be done on the farm before the potato crop is even thought of.

HEART DISEASE INCREASING IN CITIES OF U. S.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Apparently while we have been fighting one enemy face to face, another has stolen upon us from behind. New York has reduced its deaths from tuberculosis from 421 per hundred thousand in 1870 to 169 in 1914; but during this time its deaths from heart disease have increased from 74 to 169.

The experience of New York is repeated in other cities. In Worcester, Mass., 21.5 per cent. of all deaths in the industrial population are caused by organic heart disease; 15.2 per cent. is the proportion for the whole population of that city.

Several articles recently written for medical journals show how similar are the methods needed in the prevention and cure of heart disease, to those we are familiar with in the case of tuberculosis.

Fight Disease at Beginning.

In both, it is in childhood that preventive work is most needed; in both the symptoms are slight and latent and the treatment must be prolonged and persisted in after all signs of real trouble have disappeared. Both depend greatly upon environment for cure; and in both, home care is beginning to take the place of institutional care.

The Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, has been making an interesting experiment in the home care of children with heart disease and with diseases which threaten the heart, such as chorea and rheumatism. At first these children were kept in the hospital for weeks or even months, but the results were discouraging. When they went home not only improved but usually looking in the best of health, it was impossible to make the parents believe that the greatest care was still necessary. So relapses came, and the children returned to the clinic sometimes in a worse condition than before.

Sufferers Must Be Educated.

The physicians realized that "heart disease is a social disease, and must be treated socially; the child and his family must be educated, his environment must be altered and adapted to his limitations, and he must be kept under supervision for a long period, not merely until he has recovered from the acute symptoms.

So in 1911 a social worker was obtained to supervise the home treatment of these children. The results have been so gratifying that home care has been substituted for hospital care for all but the acutely sick.

There is not nearly so much danger of relapse if the child has been in his own home from the beginning and his parents have had the care of him during his sickness and have gone through the long, tedious process of nursing him back to health.

There is no need then of readjusting him to his old environment, and there is much less difficulty in adjusting the environment to him when he is really ill than when he comes home apparently well.

The hospital chose a visiting teacher rather than a nurse, for though there are a few medical facts which she must be able to note, they are easily learned.

THE GARBAGE COLLECTING SYSTEM

Measures Enough For Neglecting to Clean Up the Back Yards

Some enquiries have been made regarding the prospects of a clean-up campaign being inaugurated in this city. As a matter of fact such a campaign is something to be associated with medieval age as present day ideas as enacted and carried out in Peterborough make such a campaign altogether unnecessary. This city is favoured with a satisfactory garbage collecting system and many other improvements of a similar nature. These together with a vigilant Sanitary Inspectator are all that is necessary to effect what is usually accomplished by means of a clean-up campaign. There may be a few isolated cases where back yards have been neglected but it is only necessary to notify Inspector Spence and steps will be taken to see that the nuisance is abated.

Much of Inspector Spence's time is devoted to the inspection of dairy farms, supplying milk for local consumption. This is a work that has been productive of excellent results as the high quality of the milk supplied, will prove.

Local Inspection of yards and premises is something that is going on the year round without regard to season.

WILL COME INTO FORCE MAY 15TH

Tax On All Tickets Into Places of Amusement

The Amusement's Tax Act comes into force on Monday, May 15th and local theatre owners have received copies of the same. The tax is graduated as follows:

Where the price paid for admission is not more than ten cents the tax will be one cent.

If more than ten cents and not more than fifty cents the tax will be two cents.

If more than fifty cents and not more than one dollar the tax will be five cents.

Over one dollar it will be ten cents.

FARMLETS FOR THE HEROES OF AUSTRALIA

It is being proved in Australia that returned soldiers, no matter how "cityfied" they were before they went to the front, would far sooner have employment out of doors in roomy places than within the walls of offices or business places. It is also being discovered that there are extensive possibilities in the matter of providing at small cost opportunities for soldiers to become occupiers of agricultural holdings near the market offered by the larger cities and holding out possibilities of good returns for steady intelligent work.

A very promising beginning has been made with a scheme for making available for returned soldiers farmlets of about five acres each, suitable for growing supplies of Sydney's needs only partially satisfied at present as regards poultry, eggs, fresh vegetables, and fruits. A start has been made with the getting ready of installment of thirty-seven of such farmlets handy to Sydney. It is proposed to place these farmlets, at the disposal of returned heroes of a rental of about $10 a year.

Patriotic Co-operation.

Private citizens are enthusiastically co-operating with the government in the matter. All strata of society are represented in "working bees" that have been putting in spare time in the clearing, fencing and building. Timber merchants and others are generously giving material, and there is no lack at all of enthusiastic and capable workers. In a fine spirit of rivalry sectional "bees" are coming forward. Thus the school teachers, at present enjoying a spell from the task of teaching children, are organising contingents of clearers and builders, who mean to show that they can teach grown-ups a lot, too. A party of three dozen bushworkers is going to spend the greater portion of a "holiday" visit to Sydney by working on soldiers' farmlets, and they will bring with them all their own tools and implements and provide their own "lumber" and sleeping accommodation. They reckon they will by their seasoned strength and skill do things that will make the soft-handed city men gasp with admiration and hopeless envy.

HAVE OLD PAPERS AND MAGAZINES

Ready For Collection on Thursday Next—Ashburnham Ladies Will Call

On Thursday next the ladies of Ashburnham will make a complete canvas of the city for old papers and magazines. Citizens are asked to bear this day in mind, and the ladies will greatly appreciate it if people will have the papers tied in bundles and conveniently laid out so as to accelerate the collecting of the same.

If you would have your rose bushes flourish, water them with the suds from the tubs on washday. This method will apply to most any growing thing.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Suggests Abolition of Football Because of Its British Origin

They are strafing football in Germany now because it is an importation from England! The semi-official "Cologne Gazette" has been giving space to a number of super-patriotic communications, advocating that football, which has come to enjoy enormous popularity, should be banned henceforth on account of its origin, and schlagball—a game in which a ball of the dimensions of a medicine ball is thrown, punched, and passed about instead of kicked—substituted for the game invented in these hated isles. "The "Cologne Gazette" reasonably disapproves the suggestion. It points out that while football came to Germany, as it did to the rest of the world, from Britain, "it is essentially a Germanic sport," and "we have every reason to be satisfied with the physical benefits it has conferred on German youth." It was, the journal remarks, "in this exceptional case, no fatal gift like those the Greeks were wont to present, and when the war statistics of the German Football League are some day published they will constitute a very unpleasant message of gratitude to the English schoolmaster." It was stated early in the war that 150,000 members of the German Football League were with the colours.

TAX ON SPORT.

In a summary of the provisions of the British Finance Act it is stated that a tax will be payable by the public on admission to all entertainments, such as theatres, music halls, cinema theatres, concerts, exhibitions, shows, races, football matches, cricket matches, athletic festivals, and the like.

The tax will vary according to the price of admission. If 6d. is the charge the tax will be one penny, if one shilling it will be two pence, and so on.

The tax will be levied by means either of Government stamped tickets (which will be obtainable at the face value of the stamp impressed on them) or of adhesive stamps to be affixed to the proprietors' own tickets of admission. The argument is still going on as to whether the clubs or the public should pay the tax.

PUBLIC SHOULD

If it be decided that the public pay I don't think they will grudge it. Last season, when the war was in progress, a man in Sheffield wished to take his bull-dog, a bitch, to the matches on The Wednesday ground. In order to be sure of accommodation for his female canine companion he absolutely bought a season's ticket for "her" so that his faithful, if not comely, friend could sit side by side with him on the grandstand. This may be a most peculiar illustration of the grip of the game, but if we can find an enthusiast prepared to go to such lengths for his dog, is anybody going to be deterred by a modest tax which in the course of time will prove the power of a penny and will make the followers of football realise that they are helping the country even more than they have done in the past?

At a meeting of the executive of St. Peter's Patriotic Society, yesterday, the ladies decided to hold a patriotic At Home in the Lyceum on Monday night next. The proceeds will be used for the purchase of soldiers' comforts.

A vote of thanks was extended to Miss Mamie McCarthy for the beautiful sepia water colour picture she recently executed as a donation for patriotic purposes. BORN WITHOUT HANDS, BECOMES FINE PENMAN

Carlisle, Pa., May 4—Born without hands, Luther Cranford, president of West Fairview Borough Council, is able to write a fine style of penmanship and shorthand, run a typewriter, shoot pool or do anything that a man with the full complement of fingers can do. He is forty-two years old. The only assistance which he has in holding a pen is a small piece of [illegible] which could scarcely be termed a finger.

He has been a bookkeeper for ten years, can write twenty-five words per minute on a typewriter and one hundred words per minute in shorthand. He is a noted gunner, canoeist and boatman and is one of the best pool shots in the county.

NOT FIRST ESCAPADE.

James M. Sullivan Had to Quit U. S. Diplomatic Service.

NEW YORK, May 5.—James M. Sullivan, arrested in Dublin as a rebel, sailed from New York last July for Liverpool, with his wife and son, saying that he was going to Limerick, Ireland, to visit his mother. He said he expected to be back in New York by September 1.

Shortly before he sailed, Sullivan was virtually asked to resign his post as Minister to the Dominican Republic, as the result of an investigation conducted by a commission. It was understood the report censured Sullivan for indiscretions in the conduct of his office.

Sullivan was born in Killarney, Ireland, in 1870, and came to the U. S. in childhood.

Members of the Shell Committee

Were in Witness Box at Shell Inquiry To-day

OTTAWA, Ont., May 5—Col. Carnley and Mr. Watts, members of the original shell committee, were in the witness box at the Shell enquiry today, but little new light was shed on matters at issue. Mr. Johnston, the counsel for the Opposition, was stopped by the Commissioners when he attempted to draw admissions out. The chief interest to-day centres in the House of Commons where parliament will be asked to extend the scope of enquiry.

Must Accept The $144,860 She Called "Tainted"

NEW YORK, May 5—Some people are born rich, others acquire riches, and a few have riches thrust upon them.

To the last-named class belongs Miss Edith H. Kitching of No. 24 Bank Street. Miss Kitching must take a legacy of $144,860 left to her by Frank F. Ripley, an uncle who died last November in Brooklyn.

When first told that her legacy would be $40,000, Miss Kitching said she would not accept it because the money was "tainted" and "coined from the life-blood of the people."

Had her uncle left her the entire estate she might have accepted it, she said, as "reparation for wrongs he had committed against his martyred family."

An appraisal of the estate yesterday in Brooklyn showed that Miss Kitching received virtually the entire fortune. She must accept the riches, lawyers assert, because no one has a right to abandon title to property.

ORIGIN OF "BUNK."

Flamboyant U. S. Congressman Came From County Named Buncombe.

Buncombe is the name of a county in North Carolina, a county, by the way, of which a place of no less celebrity that Asheville is the seat, says the Christian Science Monitor. A member of Congress hailing from this county, and rather flamboyant and tiresome, succeeded before his term expired in having his county name applied to talk such as he habitually indulged in—"bunk," meaning, in the American vernacular, sound without substance, is a contraction of "buncombe." Since they are now using the shorter term in Congress, and since it is finding its way very rapidly into newspaper political discussion, perhaps it is well enough to know something of its origin and meaning.

Life is but a light dream, which soon vanishes. To live is to suffer. The sincere man struggles incessantly to gain the victory over himself.—Napoleon.

A CORRECTION.

With all respect to Mr. Jos. Picard a reader of the Examiner claims he is in the wrong regarding his snow storm of ten years ago, on May 4th. The snow storm to which he refers occurred on May 4, 1907 (nine years ago). It amounted to over six inches and necessitated the bringing into use again of the city snow plows. As late as the 20th of that month there was a fall of snow of half an inch.

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

New York, May 5.—The Stock Market broke sharply at the opening, to-day, traders evidently viewing the German submarine reply with pessimism. The break ranged from 1 1-2 to 6 points.

United States Steel opened at 80 1-2 and 81, off 2 1-8 and 2 5-8 points. Among the war stocks Crucible was the heaviest loser, selling off at 6 1-8 points, at 73. Studebaker was down 3 1-2 points; American Can. 1 1-2 points, Reading 1 1-4 points, Ansonda, 3 points, and Union Pacific, off 3-4 of a point.

More than three hundred thousand shares were dumped into the Market during the first hour. Prices improved by fractions during the second half-hour, but traders seemed inclined to await interpretation of the final clauses of the note which was made public, section by section, while the flurry on the Stock Exchange floor was in progress.

Stock Market Soon Revived

Special to the Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 5.— The stock market broke sharply one to six points to-day as the first sections of the German note were published, then climbed point by point as succeeding sections revealed compliance with President Wilson's demands until at one o'clock prices stood practically at Thursday's closing level.

The possibility of a break of diplomatic relations had been discounted by short selling during past few days.

As the last sections of the note appeared on the news ticker, shorts rushed to cover and their buying served to boost prices further.

Solubility.

Two highly respectable citizens of Brooklyn were strolling past the old King's County Penitentiary, now nothing but a memory. They noticed a gang of convicts working on the road, and paused to watch the prisoners, who appeared harder than the stones they were breaking. The guard, a tough-looking man, came along and said:

"Beg pardon, gentlemen. You will have to move on. It doesn't please the boys to have their friends see them in such a predicament."

President Wilson's Attitude Disappointing To The London Press

Writers Agree That Germany Has Failed to Meet the American Demands---Believed That a Diplomatic Break Was Inevitable.

LONDON, May 6. — Washington press despatches reporting that President Wilson probably will accept in substance the German reply, brought disappointment to the London press to-day.

The early editions of the morning newspapers, carrying the full text of the German reply, printed lengthy editorials.

The writers agreed almost unanimously that Germany had failed to meet the American demands, that a diplomatic break was inevitable and that shortly the United States would be ranged beside the Allies in the war.

The English newspapers expressed concern, too, over Germany's attempt to embroil Great Britain and America by making her concessions conditional on a change in the British methods of warfare.

They united in the declaration that the British Government will not allow itself to be made a party in such a three angled diplomatic game.

The Express declared that the German reply was an insult to American intelligence, and added that Germany was attempting to force the United States to obtain concessions from Great Britain by threatening to stop munition shipments.

The Morning Post and Daily Chronicle agreed that Germany is only prolonging negotiations again and express the certainty that the reply will not prove satisfactory.

The Telegraph and Times take about the same attitude.

Both now claim his entire estate.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

A general exodus of men to the sardine canning-factories in Lubec and Eastport was suggested, and met with some favour until it was pointed out that the small sardine herring had fallen off vastly in numbers, and that the factories were hard put to it to find enough work for their regular employees.

Self-consciousness and restraint were forgotten in this struggle for the common preservation, and above the buzz of general intense discussion there rose always the voice of some speaker with an idea or suggestion.

Code Schofield had come to the meeting with Pete Ellinwood and Jimmie Thomas, both dory mates at different times. They sat fairly well forward, and Code, glancing around during the proceedings, had caught a friendly greeting from Elsa Mallaby, who, with some of her old girlhood friends, sat farther back.

The solemn occasion for and spirit of the meeting had made a deep impression on him; but, as the time passed and those supposedly older and wiser delivered themselves merely of useless schemes, a plan that had come into his mind early in the evening began to take definite shape. As he sat there he pondered the matter over until it seemed to him the only really feasible idea.

Finally, after almost two hours of discussion with no conclusion reached, a pause occurred, and Code, to the amazement of his companions, got upon his feet. As he did so he flushed, for he wondered how many of those eyes suddenly fixed upon him were eyes of hostility or doubt. The thought stung him to a greater determination.

"I don't want to be considered bold after so many older men have spoken," he said, looking at the squire, "but I have a suggestion to make."

"Go ahead, make it," bellowed the squire cordially. "I wish more young men would give us their ideas."

"Thinking it over, I have come to this conclusion," proceeded Schofield, "There is only one thing that goes on this island do perfectly, and that is fish. Therefore, it seems only common-sense to me that they ought to go on fishing."

A ripple of laughter ran around the room that was now hot and stuffy from the glare and smell of the grease oil-lamps. Code heard the laugh, and his brows drew down into a scowl.

"Of course, they cannot go on fishing here. But there are any number of places north and east of us where they can go on. I mean the Grand Banks and the Cape Shore in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. We have schooners and sloops, we have dories, and men, and can get provisions on credit, I should think, for such a cruise.

"That, then, is my idea—that the captains of Grande Mignon fit out their vessels, hire their crews on shares, and go out on the Banks for fish like the Gloucester men and Frenchmen. If we do it we're going against the best in the world, but I don't believe there is a fisherman here who doesn't believe we can hold our own."

Suddenly far back in the room a woman arose.

She was young, and her face showed that once it might have been beautiful. Her frame was large and angular, and her rugy black clothes sat awkwardly upon it. But youth and beauty and girlish charm had gone from her long since, as it does with those whose men battle with the sea. She was a widow, and a little girl clung sleepily to her dress.

"Code Schofield," she cried, "what about the women? Ye ain't goin' off to leave us fight the winter all alone, are ye? Ye ain't goin' to sail them winter gales on the sheals, are ye? How many of ye do you s'pose will come back?" She shook off those near her who tried to pull her down into her seat.

"Last year they lost a hundred an' five out o' Gloucester, an' every year they make widders by the dozen. If it was set in India's coral strand we'd know it was a fishin' town by its widders; an' Freekirk Head'll be just like it. I lost my man in a gale —" Her voice broke and she paused. "D'ye want us all to be widders?

"How can ye go an' leave us? It's the women the sea kills with misery, not the men. What can we do when you're gone? There ain't any money nor much food. If there come a fire we'd all be cleaned out, for what could we do? If you'll only think of us a little—us women—mebbe you won't go." She sank down amid a profound silence.

"Poor thing!" rumbled Pete Ellinwood. "She shouldn't have come. Al Green was her man." Sobbing sounded in another quarter of the hall, and the men looked at one another, disconcerted. Still no one spoke. The matter hung in the balance, for all saw instantly that could the women be provided for this was the solution of the problem.

Though taken aback, Code stood to his guns and remained on his feet.

Suddenly in the middle of the hall another woman rose. Her motion was accompanied by the ustle of silk, and instantly there was silence, for Elsa Mallaby commanded considerable respect.

Code saw her with surprise as he turned. She noted his puzzled expression and flashed him a dazzling smile that was not lost, even in that thrilled and excited crowd. He answered it.

"I consider that Captain Schofield has solved the problem," she said in a clear, level tone. "There is no question but that the men of Grande Mignon should fit out their ships and fish on the Banks. There is also no question but that the objection Mrs. Green raised makes such a thing impossible. Now, I want to tell you something.

"I belong in Freekirk Head, and you have all known me since I was little. Hard-luck Jim Mallaby belonged in Freekirk Head and made his money out of the island. Jim's money is mine now, and you can rest assured that while the men are away fishing no woman or child on Grande Mignon shall go hungry while I am alive to hear of it.

"Some people hate me because I live in a big house and have everything. It is only natural and I expect it, but ever since Jim left me I have wondered how I could do the most good with his money here. I would like to give it; but if you won't have that, you can borrow it on a long-time loan without interest or security. Now I will go out and you can talk it over freely."

With a companion she walked up the aisle and to the door, but before she reached it Code Schofield was standing on a chair, his hat in his hand.

"Three cheers for Mrs. Mallaby!" he yelled and the very building shook with the tumultuous response.

It was five minutes before the squire, purple with shouting for order, could be heard above the noise. Then, with hand upraised, he shouted:

"All in favour of Schofield's plan say ay!"

And the "ay" was the greatest vocal demonstration ever given in Freekirk Head.

CHAPTER VII.
A STRANGER.

The ensuing week was one such as the village had never beheld. A visitor to the island might have thought that war had been declared and that a privateering expedition was being fitted out.

On the railroad near Flag Point there was always some vessel being scraped or painted. Supplies brought over from St. John's by the steamer Grande Mignon were stowed in lazarets and below. Rigging was overhauled, canvas patched or renewed, and bright, tawny ropes substituted for the old ones in sheet and tackle.

Every low tide was a signal for great activity among the vessels made fast alongside the wharfs, for the rise of the water was nearly twenty feet, and when it receded the ships stood upright on their heels and exposed their bottoms to scraper, calking mallet, and paint-brush.

In every house where father or son was expecting soon to sail the women were busy with clothing and general outfit. There was a run on the store carrying oilskins, sea-boots, oil-lamps, stoves, and general paraphernalia.

All these things were gotten on credit, for there is no such things as a vessel returning empty-handed from the Banks, and Bill Boughton stood sponsor for most of them.

The owners of vessels divided their time between provisioning and overhauling their ships and the securing of crews. One rainy afternoon, when work had been generally suspended, a number of the men gathered inside Bill Broughton's store to wait for a let-up in the downpour, and the subject of crews was broached.

"How you comin' with your crew, Bige?" asked a tall, lanky man of Captain Tanner.

"First rate. Got a dozen men now an' that's about all the Rosan can take care of. At that somebody'll have to sleep on a locker, I cal'late."

"You're doin' well, Bige. I hear Jed Martin can't round up more'n eight and he's been as fur south as Great Harbor."

"D'ye wonder?" put in a third. "Jed ain't never set up grub that a shark would eat. I sailed with him one five year ago, an' that was enough fer me."

"Twelve men ain't much," put in Tanner.

"Them Gloucester men sail with sixteen or eighteen right along, and I've heard o' one feller put out to T-Wharf, Boston, carryin' twenty-eight dories. Of course, them fellers lays to fill up quick and make short trips fer the fresh market. Ain't many of them briners."

"Don't believe there's anybody'll carry sixteen men out of here, is they? came a voice from over in the corner.

"Sur!!" The rumble and bellow of the reply denoted Pete Ellinwood where he sat on a cracker-box, his six and a half feet of length sprawled other. "There's Nat Burns's Hettie B. She'll carry sixteen, and so will Code Schofield's Laughing Lass—Mebbe more."

"Huh!" Yes, if he can git 'em," sneered a voice.

"Git 'em. O' course he'll git 'em. turning upon the other belligerently.

"Wal," replied the other, "they do say there's men in this village, and farther south, too, that wouldn't sail with Code, not fer a thousand dollars and all f'und."

"Them that says it are fools," declared Ellinwood.

"An' liars!" cut in Bijonah Tanner hotly. "Why won't they sail with the lad? He can handle a schooner as well as you, Burt, and better."

"Yas," said the other contemptuously; "nobody's ever forgot the way he handled the old May Schofield. Better not play with fire, Bige, or you'll get your hands burned."

Pete Ellinwood got upon his feet deliberately. He was the biggest and most powerful man in the village, despite his forty-five years, and his "ableness" in a discussion—physical or otherwise—was universally respected.

"Look here you, Burt an' all the rest of you fellers. I've got something to say. For consid'able time now I've heard dirty talk about Code and the May Schofield dirty talk an' nothin' more. Now, if any of you can prove that Code did anything but try and save the old schooner, let's hear you do it. If not, shut up. I don't want to hear no more of that talk."

There was silence for a while as all hands sought to escape the gray, accusing eye that wandered slowly around the circle. Then from back in the shadow somewhere a voice said, sneeringly.

"What ax you got to grind, Pete?"

A laugh went round, for it was common talk that, since the death of Jesper Schofield, Pete has expressed his admiration for Ma Schofield in more than one way.

"I got this ax to grind, Andrew," replied Ellinwood calmly, "that I'm signed on as mate in the Charming Lass, an' I believe the boy is as straight and as good a sailer as anybody on the island."

This was news to the crowd, and the men digested it a minute in silence.

"How many men ye got sailin' with ye?" asked one who had not spoken before.

VITAL ELEMENTS.—People that live in cities or even country districts where the water supply is impure and are forced to boil the water in order to make it safe for drinking purposes, usually complain of the flat or insipid taste. As a matter of fact water that has been boiled is dead, and although all of the impurities that were in it before boiling are still there, they have been killed by the cooking process and I presume that in their little world the process of decay is going on just as it does in the world of our vision.

To place boiled water in closely sealed bottles and let it stand in a warm room increases the bad taste; keeping the closed bottles in a refrigerator helps some, and to make this sterilized water perfectly palatable it is only necessary to give it plenty of air. This may be done in various ways. Letting it stand in a clean room in an open air bucket or pitcher but covered with a clean cheesecloth, will soon restore life and vitality. Ten to twenty hours would not be too long for it to stand; then a little pure ice may be added and you have a pure and palatable drink of sparkling water.

The same result could be accomplished much more quickly by attaching a clean rubber tube to your auto or bicycle pump, insert the tube into the bottle that has been previously filled with the boiled water, see that the tube reaches the bottom of the bottle and then pump air into the water for a few minutes.

Many excellent foods are ruined and their digestability almost destroyed by cooking. Cabbage is a notable example of this nature. Chopped fine, or ground in a meat chopper and seasoned with French dressing it is not only delicious to the taste but is one of the most easily digested of all foods. It furnishes some of the very best of medicinal elements when served in this way and it's bulk and percentage of waste aids the bowels in their peristatic movements.

As soon as it is cooked to the boiling point the organic iron that is so abundant in the raw article is destroyed and the tough, leathery fibres become very hard to digest. By studying the table of digestability of foods in your Home Health Club Book, Vol. I., you will find that there is only one other article of food that requires greater powers of digestion or longer time and that other article is usually found in the same pot of New England boiled dinner.

The medicinal value of many herbs is destroyed by cooking; that is why so many of the herb remedies used by the natives of various countries, with astonishingly beneficial results, are wholly innocuous when subjected to laboratory tests of the modern scientists.

Animals use certain herbs in the raw state and derive certain specific results, but when the same herbs are made by man into tinctures, extracts or infusions, no such results are secured. The aroma of coffee is largely wasted when it is cooked in an open coffee pot and it is for that reason that coffee made in a percolator is so much more economical; less coffee is required and the flavour or strength as it is usually called is much greater.

Whenever possible one or two articles of fresh or raw fruit or vegetables should be eaten every day by everyone. If this rule is followed you will have fewer doctors' bills to pay, and you will feel much more alive and fit than when you partake only of cooked foods.

BLANKETS are luxuriously clean, soft and fleecy when washed with LUX. Every housewife knows that blankets are very liable to shrink in the wash and become hard and thick. LUX is the ideal preparation for washing blankets, all woollen things, fine laces, etc., because it cannot shrink them.

LUX is the economical cleanser—it dissolves readily in hot water—makes a foamy, cream-like lather which coaxes rather than forces the dirt out of clothes.

The Youthful Note In Summer Fashions

Satin and Serge Combinations Favoured—Also Figured and Plain Materials

Hand-Painted Neckwear Novel

New York, May 1.

Perhaps the most noticeable thing about the summer styles is their decided youthfulness; this is both in line and coloring. The straight lined frocks and suits of serge, gabardine, taffeta and faille, lend grace and youth to all types of figures. For instance a yoked, pleated frock of dark blue serge trimmed with black taffeta may be worn by the large woman or the small one with equally good results. One particularly good model, worn by a large woman, at an exhibition recently, was made with a deep shoulder yoke of black taffeta, the serge laid in deep, flat pleats, hanging straight from the yoke. A girdle, consisting of two narrow stitched straps of the black silk came well down over the hips, giving a long slender appearance to a rather heavy figure. A pretty adaptation of the same style of dress is illustrated here in serge for the slender, younger woman.

Satin is effective with serge, and of course the combination of navy blue serge and black satin is quite as popular this season again as it has been for several seasons past. One sees many smart serge frocks with sleeveless coatees of black satin, half skirts of satin, sleeves of satin, and the various other notions favored for the modish combining of two or more contrasting materials. Scarcely a frock appears these days made strictly of one material. It is a fad which makes for economy and becomingness.

Blue Serge Frock.

HAND PAINTING ON SPORT COSTUMES.

The sport costume is another youthful notion. It imparts a delightful feeling of freedom, both of movement and spirit. There is something very becoming and exhilarating about the combinations of vivid colorings in the wide, striped, checked and printed novelty fabrics now being used in skirts and suits. The middy-blouse costume is popular with all; one of the new materials being used for middys is an adaptation of the old fashioned jean. This material wears quite as well as its old time blue predecessor, is reasonably priced, and a most satisfactory material generally for middy blouse, and accompanying skirt. An effective combination for a middy costume is one of the bright awning striped linens or ducks, with blouse of plain white, collared and cuffed in the stripes. One of the New York smart shops is showing a middy blouse which flares smartly over the hips; the idea is novel and attractive in its up-to-dateness quite in accordance with the season's silhouette.

CHOICE RECIPES

STEWED MUSHROOMS.

Peel and rinse the mushrooms, and cut off the ends of the stalks. Stew them gently in water, stock or milk quite tender, adding pepper and salt to taste. Then thicken the gravy with a little flour and let it cook well, stirring carefully. Before serving stir in a little cream or butter.

CREAM PUFFS.

One-half cup of butter, 1 cup of boiling water, 1 cup of flour, sifted with a pinch of soda size of a pea beat well and cook at once. Cool mixture, then add 4 eggs, 1 at a time. Beat well. Place 1 teaspoonful 1 inch apart on well buttered pan. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Then fill with whipped cream and put chocolate frosting on top. This makes 12 large puffs or 18 small ones.

BAKED PRUNES.

Wash 1 pound of prunes and soak them three or four hours in a little water. Put them in a bean pot, cover with boiling water, add 1 scant cup of sugar, 3 cloves and a stick of cinnamon, cover and bake slowly until the prunes are almost candied. Serve cold with whipped cream.

ESCALLOPED ONIONS.

Boil onions as usual in salted water. Drain well when done and mix with an equal quantity of white sauce made by blending one tablespoonful of butter melted and one tablespoon flour. Stir till smooth, add one cup hot milk, season with salt and pepper, cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake one hour. Best way I've found yet to cook onions.

MAPLE FUDGE.

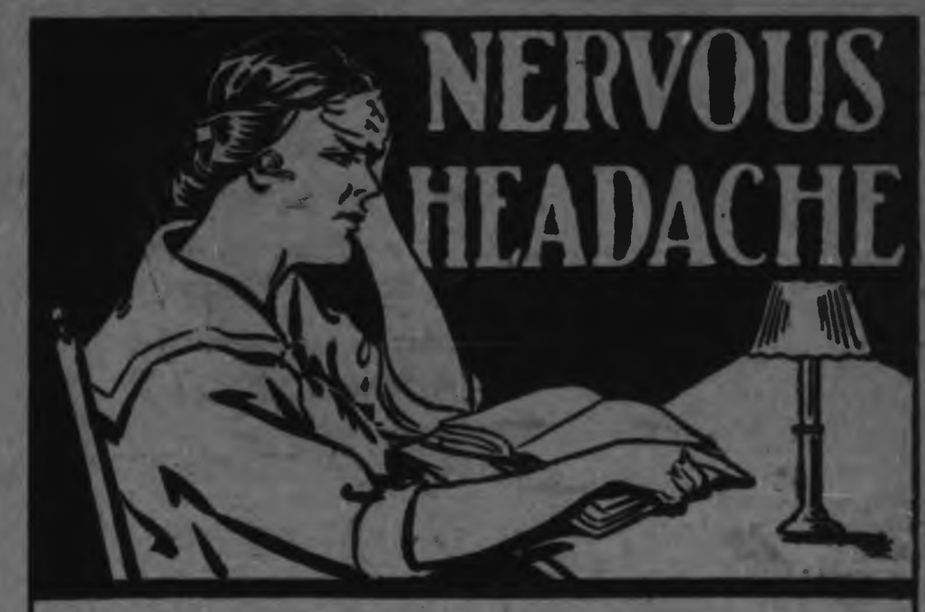
Break a pound of maple sugar into small pieces. Fill a cup three-quarters full of cream, then fill to the brim with boiling water. Pour over the sugar and cook until a little dropped in cold water can be rolled into a soft ball. This requires a little longer boiling than for the usual thread stage. Do not stir while cooking. Take from the fire, beat until creamy, pour into a buttered pan and when nearly cold mark into squares.

ONION LOAF.

One green pepper, chopped fine, and parboiled. Two cups of parboiled onions, two cups of bread crumbs, four slices of bacon, diced and browned, add one egg. Season with salt and pepper. After cooking bacon add the onions, then the bread crumbs, seasoning, well beaten egg, mold in loaf and put in well greased pan. Sprinkle over the top two tablespoons of grated cheese, bake for 30 minutes then serve with tomato sauce.

TUNA FISH A LA KING

Put four tablespoons of butter in the chafing dish and add finely minced green pepper and then cook until soft, taking care not to brown. Stir in two tablespoons of flour, and when thoroughly mixed add one cup of milk; when boiling add one can of tuna fish that has been broken into pieces, and two hard-boiled eggs, chopped fine. Serve on toast; garnish all with parsley.



Headache is not a disease in itself, but comes as a warning to tell you that there is something wrong with the system. Consequently when you stop a headache by the use of powerful narcotic drugs, you merely stifle the "danger signal" by which Nature tells you that there is trouble ahead.

'A' starved condition of the nervous system is by far the most frequent cause of headache. You may be going too fast a pace and burning the candle at both ends. The nervous system has no opportunity to renew its vigor, and the result is nervous headache, sleeplessness, indigestion and irritability.

Why not select a treatment that aims to remove the cause of trouble by enriching the blood and building up the starved and exhausted nerves. Such is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the effectiveness of this food cure is so well known that we scarcely need tell you about it.

In almost every newspaper you will find some cure reported as a result of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The mention of it among your friends will reveal the fact that nearly everybody knows it as the standard medicine for diseases of the nerves and other ailments arising from a watery condition of the blood.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

So many pretty silks and wash fabrics are manufactured at present that a simple little frock may be made quite effective with the right contrast of materials and without much ornamentation. A model that is excellent for summer wear, designed very simply but with the artistic touch that marks it original, is shown in No. 7,686. Contrasting goods contribute the neat collar and the dainty cuffs. The dress is gathered front and back at a lowered waistline, where a four gored skirt is joined; the gores are so arranged that a short panel back and front are formed. In the scalloped and plain outline to close the blouse at the left front there is almost enough decoration for this dress, but a sash with a great bow is a feature that all girls love, so it is included for adornment and utility.

This pattern is cut in sizes 6 to 12 years. To copy the model in size eight years one need 2 yards of 44 inch material, 2¼ yards of ribbon and ¼ yard contrasting goods.

The pattern will be promptly forwarded to you if 10 cents be sent to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 15c.

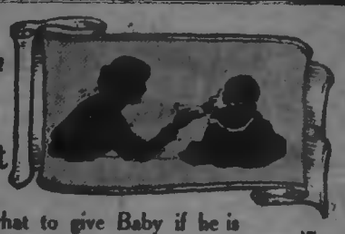
MAPLE COOKIES

Warm three cupfuls of maple syrup in a saucepan until it will melt, then cream with one cupful of butter. Cut with plain or fancy cutters and bake in a moderate oven.

Anxious forethought



The decision as what to give Baby if he is denied his natural food rests chiefly on one point. The alternative nourishment must correspond as closely as possible with healthy human milk.

Cows milk diluted with water and modified under disadvantages in the home does not provide a satisfactory food.
Further—cows milk as usually distributed is infected with germs; a grave danger to Baby.
The quality of cows milk varies—a serious drawback. In the spring it is subject to changes, and in the summer it is a cause of infant mortality.

Careful tests of the milk values; the necessary modifying, the making up of deficient cream and milk sugar to ensure

DR. HERBERT ADAMS GIBBONS WRITES OF VERDUN BATTLE

VERDUN AS IT APPEARS TO-DAY

Almost Bare of Civilians and Only Military Allowed to Enter Town.

(Special Dispatch)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

We have come by motor from Bar-le-Duc to this unknown village, whose name will some day be historic, although it must remain anonymous at the present writing. For here General Petain has his headquarters, and as here momentous decisions are being taken daily for the checkmating of the German attempts against Verdun. If the work of the General Staff in the Mairie of this little village continues to give such good results as it has up to the present moment X— will not be forgotten when the annals of this war are written.

Nor will the name of the man who has risen so rapidly and so well deservedly in less than two years from one of thousands to one among thousands be forgotten. Since the last week of February the whole world has been looking to General Petain with increasing confidence and admiration. I had hardly arrived in X— this morning and had just gotten out of the motor to stretch my legs after a long early morning ride when I was told.—"That house over there with the guard in front is where General Petain lives. He will be coming to his office in a few minutes, for he is always at work promptly at eight o'clock."

The General came on the very stroke of eight, picking his way along down the muddy road and gravely returning the salute of all whom he met. Twice later in X— have I seen him, each time unaccompanied. There is no blare of trumpets about this man, no ceremony. But no General in the field has graver responsibilities than he.

Road Barred to Civilians.

X— is almost as devoid of civilians as Verdun. The people of the village remain, but the road is barred to others. Not that there is fear of espionage. The control is too strict for that. General Headquarters has to be protected from the insistent demands of inhabitants of Verdun who want to return home.

A thousand and one reasons are urged by civilian inhabitants of the city, which is a pivot of the French defence, for obtaining the magic laisser-passer. Some reasons are good, others are laughable. But the petitioners are insistent. They think that their business is the most important in the world. So to protect General Headquarters from these demands civilians do not have a chance to get near, whatever be the reason they urge.

Officers have told me over and over again that one of the most curious facts of this war is the difficulty they have in persuading civilians to keep out of the range of the enemy's fire. Many of the inhabitants of Verdun had to be forced to leave the city. They hid in their closets and attics and did everything possible to avoid being caught by patrols. Now they are trying to get back home.

One reason alone is considered valid for allowing the people of the country to remain close to the enemy's lines. That is the demand of the bona fide farmer to continue to till his field. Everywhere I have been on this trip within the zone of the armies the farmers are at work just as in peace. It is time for the spring [illegible] and nowhere have I seen fields that have been abandoned.

Soldiers Tilling Fields.

In many cases one sees territorial soldiers in uniform at work in the fields. But the bulk of the work falls on men beyond military age and women and boys. It is not too much to say that throughout Northeastern France there is no interruption whatever in agricultural pursuits. Going along the road for hundreds of kilometres behind the lines I have made a special point of observing this.

What animation there is in the towns is wholly of a military character and due to the presence of soldiers in repose and the revictualment corps. But when once you pass out of the towns into the country farmers and farmers' wives and farmers' sons, horses and ploughs, grazing cattle and sheep would make one feel that war was far away were it not for the distant thunder of the cannon.

My officer cicerone pointed out to me laughingly, however, one abnormal thing that had escaped my notice. We were not bothered by stupid chickens flying across the road in front of our automobile. The barnyards are more or less deserted.

"We have not always been able to keep our men from indulging a fondness for fowls, somewhat similar to that of your Southern negroes," he explained.

When one goes "out to the front," so far as the fighting is concerned, he hears rather than sees. The cannon do thunder; there is the tit-tat-tat of the machine guns and the occasional crack of a rifle. The shells whizz and burst. If you are at a distance you have a view of the ensemble of the operations, but you see very little except smoke, even through good glasses. When you approach near the zone your field of vision is naturally contracted and you have a confused notion—if any notion at all—of what is going on. In the trenches one sees nothing.

I have found out in former wars that "eyewitness" accounts of fighting are practically of no value, owing to the very restricted field of vision and experience of the eyewitness. In this war of trenches it is ever of less value, so far as giving an intelligent account of the ensemble of operations goes, than ever before.

What one gets, then, by a trip to the armies in the field is certainly not a clear idea of the military operations. Even were I allowed to do so I could not write a single paragraph worth reading about the technical side of all the fighting around Verdun. The staff officers who have been directing the operations from the very first day tell me that all they know—at the present moment—is how things stand. The results are tangible. How these results have been obtained is by no means clear, even to those who have obtained them.

Confident of Victory.

But what the outsider can see and write about with some degree of assurance is the spirit of the men who are facing the enemy and the efficiency of the organization for revictualment behind the lines.

From experience with the Turkish army in the Balkan war I know that dogged determination can exist, even when there is no hope, and that men do fight bravely after they have lost confidence in ultimate success.

The French resistance is not at all of this kind. There is no feeling, as far as I can find, that Verdun is a decisive battle of the war. It is looked upon only as an incident—a point against which the Germans are bringing their full strength to bear at the present moment. And the belief is universal that there will soon be a test similar to that at Verdun at some other point along the lines.

It does not seem to me to be true that Verdun has raised the morale of the French army and put new heart into the souls of the French soldiers, as some have written. For these, did not need their morale raised; they did not need to have new heart put into them. The success of the resistance at Verdun is only what was expected of the men in the ranks.

The truth of the matter is that ever since the battle of the Marne, now a year and a half ago, the French armies have had the firm and unwavering belief in their ability not only to defend France, but also win this war. What has upheld them through two winters in the trenches has been the feeling that the game of Germany was up ever since the failure of von Kluck to reach Paris.

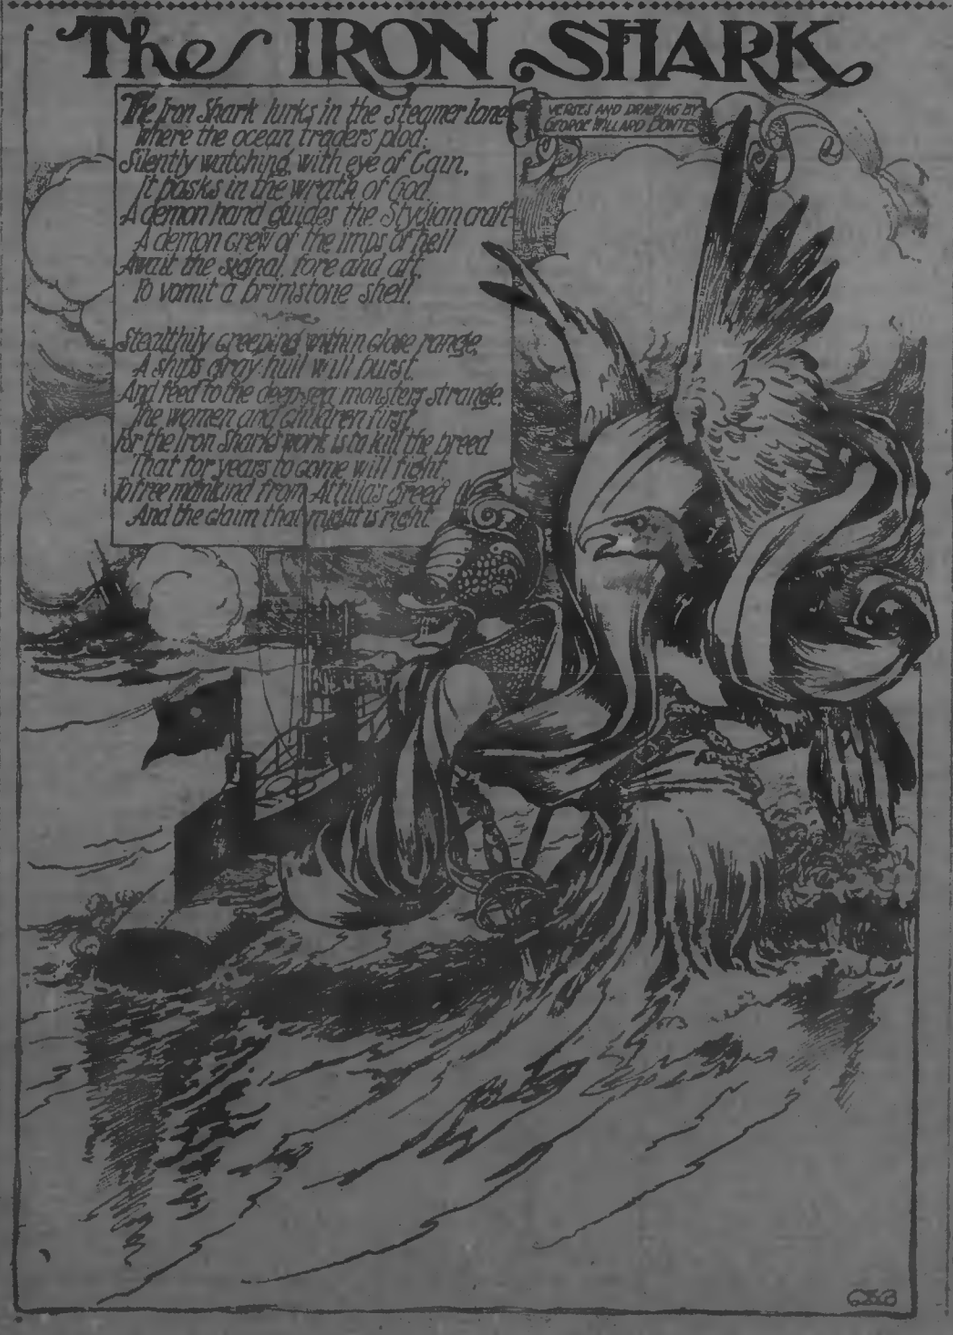
CHURCH BELL OMEN OF NEAR END OF WAR

(Special Dispatch).

LONDON, Saturday.

A curious incident which has just happened at Nay, a little Pyrenecan village far from the noise of battle, about which superstitious people are talking, is narrated by Mr. John N. Raphael, the special correspondent of the Daily Express in Paris.

Twice in the history of France, he says, the big church bell of Nay has fallen without being damaged. It fell from the belfry exactly three months before the Crimean War ended, and it fell from the belfry again three months before the end of the war of 1870. It has just fallen a third time, again without damage, and the superstitious are wondering whether this time the fall of the church bell in Nay belfry is an omen of peace.



The IRON SHARK
The Iron Shark lurks in the steamer lane
where the ocean traders plod;
Silently watching, with eye of Cain,
It basks in the wrath of God.
A demon hand guides the Stygian craft,
A demon crew of the imps of hell
Await the signal, fore and aft,
To vomit a brimstone shell.
Stealthily creeping within close range,
A ship's gray hull will burst,
And feed to the deep-sea monsters strange,
The women and children first.
For the Iron Shark's worst is to kill the breed
That for years to come will fight
To free mankind from Attila's greed
And the claim that might is right.

Viennese Think War Will End Within Three Months

Traveller Back from the Austrian Capital Tells London Correspondent at Milan That Americans Are Detested There Almost as Much the British.

(Special Dispatch).

LONDON, Saturday.

An American who has just arrived at Milan from Vienna has been telling Mr. A. Beaumont, Daily Telegraph correspondent at Milan, that the Viennese are still under all sorts of extraordinary illusions, one of which is that the war will surely end within two or three months.

"But," asked Mr. Beaumont, "what if it doesn't?"

"Oh, that is a possibility they don't even consider," replied the American. "Moreover, they firmly believe that peace will be entirely in their favor. Viennese burghers crowd the cafés daily, listen to the gypsy bands playing, and drink to the health of their army, which they proudly speak of in the presence of foreigners as ever victorious. The contrast between victories and the rationing out of bread, meat, sugar and other objects of prime necessity does not seem to strike them, but the poorer classes are much more frank in expressing their desire for peace."

Asked if he thought there was any possibility of a revolt on the part of the working classes, he said it was unlikely. They consist of only old men, women and boys, all able bodied men being enrolled in the army.

"You see only women and boys or old men in Vienna now. You cannot expect any serious revolt from them. A few weeks ago there was some excitement in Vienna, which the newspapers hushed up. The supply of flour had failed at the big official bakeries. It was a very populous quarter, and in the evening when the factory hands and munitions workers returned they found no bread. This had been going on for days, when a vast crowd, amounting to about 20,000 persons, chiefly women and children, assembled in front of one bakery and howled for bread. Troops were called out and on their appearance the crowd immediately dispersed. This gives you the measure of the resistance the people are likely to offer. Milk is extremely scarce. The Vienna cafés in the afternoons and evenings no longer serve the famous mélange with foaming cream. The only time when milk can be had in a hotel is in the morning, for coffee.

"One of Vienna's curiosities are the numerous depots for brass, copper and other metals established by the government all over the city. The authorities hired vacant shops in the principal streets, and there people are asked to bring all their brass and copper objects. Most extraordinary collections can be seen in these depots. The windows are plastered with posters three feet high, with a picture of a big howitzer firing an enormous shell and under it the inscription, 'Your government needs copper for these shells.' The people seem very cheerfully to have contributed all they possessed, and the government offers a strong inducement by paying a good price for such metal.

"The shops still exhibit in numerous ways on postcards, boxes of matches and badges of all descriptions the motto 'God punish England.' Americans are detested almost as much as British. It is unsafe for them to speak English in the streets and ordinary cafés. 'We hate everything English,' said two officers a few weeks ago to me. I happened to be in a café near Graben with some attachés from the American Embassy, and, as was quite natural, I was speaking English with them. The Austrian officers repeated their remark, whereupon I wrote on my card that I was an American and offered it to them. They declined to take my card, asserting more loudly than before that they did not care whether we were English or Americans. Every one in the café got excited, stood up and yelled at us, 'Out with you! Get out! Throw them out!' We defied the two officers to give us their cards, which they refused. We threw down our cards on their table and left. Another day, having said a few words in English over the telephone in a café, I was insulted as I left the telephone cabin by a man who said, 'We want no English here,' to which I replied, 'And we wouldn't want you in the United States.'"

REBUILD WRECKED ALBANIAN TOWNS

(Special Dispatch).

BERLIN, Saturday.

German mechanics, engineers and skilled workingmen in large numbers have arrived in Albania recently, the purpose being to improve the roads and rebuild some of the wrecked towns and villages. The German papers report that everything is being done for the comfort of the inhabitants, who now are on friendly terms with the troops.

In an effort to banish everything Italian from the country the Austrian troops have begun by giving Albanian names to all towns and villages which heretofore had Italian names. Thus Scutari is now designated Skchkedra, Alessio is Lesch, Durazzo is Dora, Spalato is Spla, Ragusa is Runa and Dulcigno is Dulka. This is to be followed by eliminating the teaching of the Italian language in the schools.

Shopkeepers, hotel and restaurant proprietors and others also have signified their willingness to change all Italian signs and placards as well as menus from Italian to the language of Albania. In this movement the Austrians have the support of the Albanians, who feel that Italy deserted them in their critical hour, and who are very much incensed in consequence.

Dunston's Revenge

An Evil Intention Changed to a Good One

By CLARISSA MACKIE

A man and a woman were riding on horseback over the broad acres of a western ranch. As they cantered on the girl chatted pleasantly, while the man listened, making brief replies. He was thinking of another matter than the one of which she was speaking. Suddenly he reined in his horse and facing her said, more as if in anger than in love:

"Rose, I love you. I've loved you a long while. Will you be my wife?"

The girl, startled at such a proposition made in such a tone, drew back.

"I can't, Ralph; I can't. I would if I could, but—I don't love you."

"You can love me if you want to," he replied bitterly.

"Indeed, I can't."

"Then there isn't a chance for me?" asked Ralph Dunston hoarsely as he looked away.

Rose's brown eyes grew very pitiful, and she laid her little gloved hand on Dunston's bridle rein.

"I'm sorry, Ralph," she whispered in a distressed tone. "I'm sorry"—

"That's enough!" he interrupted sharply. "I suppose it's Bert Slater. But I'll see he doesn't get you!"

* * * * * * * * *

"Well, honey, what's bothering you tonight?" asked Rufus Weldon of his daughter, as she sat in dreamy silence before the fire.

Rose sighed and then flashed a smile at her father. She went over and knelt beside his chair, leaning her dark head against his shoulder.

"Nothing much, dad," she answered after long silence—"only—only—only—well, father, it's Bert Slater!"

"The deuce!" exploded Rufus in pretended surprise. "You don't mean to say my foreman has the nerve"—Rose's hand covered his lips.

"I love him, father," she whispered. His arms went around closely, and it was thus Bert Slater found them. When he came in Rufus extended a hand to include him in the little circle.

"The matter seems settled, eh," said Rufus humorously.

The period of Rose Weldon's engagement to Bert Slater was marked by anxious days and nights. She had not told her lover of Dunston's threat, nor had she confided in her father, for in either case one or both of them would have gone forth to administer punishment to the disappointed cowboy.

Then suddenly one day Rufus Weldon met death, and the horse that had thrown him had to be shot. Left alone on the ranch, with her nearest relatives some maiden aunts in Massachusetts, Rose gave head to Bert Slater's pleading, and soon they were married. Slater had invested some money in the ranch, and as Rose was her father's sole heir, husband and wife carried on the business in the same thrifty manner that had made Rufus Weldon comfortably rich as compared to many of his neighbors.

Of Ralph Dunston they saw little. When they did meet him Rose was all a-quiver with anxiety lest the dark browed man engage her good tempered husband in an argument that might foment trouble and end in the gun play that would give Dunston his long cherished opportunity to put an end to Bert's life and thus carry out his scheme of revenge.

But Dunston held himself well in hand. If he had little to say no one could marvel at his taciturnity in the presence of his successful rival, for the whole county knew that Ralph Dunston had loved Rose to distraction, and many people said that he had had a fair chance to gain her affections had not Slater come on from the east to join Rufus Weldon in the business.

But it had been a banner year in the cattle raising country, and every one was so happy and contented that no one gave head to Ralph and his cherished revenge. Outwardly he was gay and careless, and no one knew that his insouciance covered a heart brooding blackly over his coveted revenge.

As the months dragged by Rose gradually forgot Dunston's threatened revenge, and she dismissed it entirely from her mind when they placed her baby in her arms. Rufus Weldon Slater they named the little one, and in the joy of motherhood Rose included the whole world in her great warm heart.

When Dunston heard about the little Rufus he went for a long ride through the purple sagebrush, and when he came back his lips were smiling, but murder lurked in his black eyes.

* * * * * * * * *

The snow was falling thickly on that winter evening when Ralph Dunston set out to encompass his revenge. It was the very night for his purpose. Two halfbreed Indians slouched after him on wiry horses, and one of these blanketed rascals was to draw Bert Slater from the house on some fictitious errand while the other kidnaped Rose's little son. It was a very crudely planned affair, after all, and showed the effect of long months of brooding over his fancied wrongs. Ralph was desperate now. He felt that by depriving Rose and Slater of their first-born he could cause them greater pain than by simply taking Bert's life. He wanted Slater to suffer, too, and in death there was only release.

A light burned in the house, and a shadow flitted across the window shade. The bunkhouse was in total darkness. Dunston had chosen his night well, for it was the occasion of a big ball at Red Top, and there was not a soul about the place save the two Chinese cooks, and they were audibly asleep in the little hut which they occupied together near the corral.

Just as Dunston rode up to the doorstep to peer into the window the door was flung wide open, and he started back.

Rose Slater stood in the doorway peering up at him like one distracted.

"Oh, Ralph," she cried in a relieved tone, "I am so glad it is you! I was afraid it might be some one I couldn't trust. Bert has broken his leg. There isn't a man about the place, and baby has the croup. He will die if you can't get the doctor here. Oh!" She leaned against the doorpost as Dunston slipped from his horse and rushed past her into the house.

"Come in and shut the door," he commanded grimly.

"Where's the baby?" he asked curiously.

She pointed to the sofa drawn close to the fire and then snatched the bundle to her breast, rocking to and fro in helpless fear. From the bundle came hoarse, choking sounds.

Ralph Dunston had been the oldest of twelve children, and he had seen his mother handle croupy babies in the distant past. It is remarkable how tenacious those home memories are in the breasts of the harshest of men.

"Don't you know what to do for the baby?" he asked sharply.

"I've given him croup medicine," began Rose helplessly, when the big man tossed his hat into a corner and strode into the kitchen, where Hop Sing's fire was carefully laid for the next morning. A copper kettle of water on the stove was quite warm, and in a trice Dunston had lighted the kindling in the stove and drawn the big kettle over the flames. He sought and found the baby's tin bathtub and placed it on two chairs before the sitting room fire, just as he had seen his mother do in that faraway past.

Once he stepped outside to send the wondering halfbreeds scurrying back to Red Top for the doctor, and once he ran upstairs and took a look at Bert Slater, who was lying white and still on the bed. He examined the injured leg and found that Rose had put it in splints formed of an umbrella and two of her father's heavy canes. It would do until the doctor came. The baby needed first attention.

He held the baby while at his direction the distracted mother flew here and there, gathering flannels and mustard. Then the hot water was poured into the bath and the mustard added, as Dunston had watched his mother do, and finally the choking and gasping baby was gently lowered into the bath.

Half an hour later little Rufus was sleeping soundly, wrapped in warm blankets. Ralph Dunston awkwardly held the soft bundle while Rose, crying softly with relief, put away the bath and then went to attend to her husband.

The doctor came while Ralph still sat there.

"Hello, Dunston—helping out? That's a good fellow," was the doctor's greeting. Then Rose told the physician of the sudden attack and of the opportune appearance of Ralph Dunston. Dr. Finch nodded gravely, examined the baby and then patted Dunston on the shoulder.

"Good work, Dunston; you saved the baby's life! Noble work, my man," he said significantly as he turned away, for he, too, knew Dunston's secret.

Dunston flushed and bent his face above the baby's rosy cheek. Rufus turned his head sleepily, sighed and reached a velvety hand to Ralph's neck. The young man sat there, paralyzed with fear lest the baby should remove the trustful little fingers. Little tricklets of warmth ran around his heart and seemed to melt all the hardness and the bitterness that had bound it in an icy crust. Desire for revenge vanished never to return; love for Rose Slater became an almost forgotten incident. The Slater baby seemed to fill the bottom. Just to hold that wonderful little form close to his breast, just to feel the little helpless fingers clutch him confidently, just to know that the little breathing atom of humanity needed him, might grow to love him in time, was enough for Ralph Dunston.

Rose came back to the room, her eyes shining softly, as she saw Ralph Dunston's transformed countenance. He smiled upon her impersonally. She was only the baby's mother!

"How is Bert?" he asked.

"Doing splendidly. The doctor says he must be careful and that it means a good many weeks of idleness. Bert wants me to ask you if you can't help him out here. Some one must take charge. He needs some one he can trust. He says if you can, why, when he gets around once more he would like you to stay on as foreman. Will you?"

"Will I?" Dunston unconsciously repeated the question. He told himself that if he remained he must confess to Slater his evil intentions that night—he would start clear with him. Well, that would be hard, but he could do it. Then, there was the baby. He could see Rufus every day—could ride him on his back—play with him—later, teach him to ride a pony.

"Sure, I'll stay," he said heartily, and as he spoke he bent his head and his lips swept the pure cheek of the little one.

"I'm so glad," said Rose softly, as she took the baby from him. "I know he's going to be awfully fond of his Uncle Ralph!"

And Ralph Dunston tiptoed out of the house, as one who leaves a sacred shrine.

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McIlwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some years later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

STANDARDIZATION OF PARTS.

Eli Whitney's Scheme Revolutionized the Manufacturing Business.

The system of the standardization of parts, now so universal, originated with Eli Whitney, the inventor of the cotton gin, when he undertook to make muskets. The government gave him a contract in 1793 for 10,000 stands of arms, although he had no "plant" for their manufacture. He built a small factory in New Haven, Conn., and began work, but found a great obstacle in the difficulty of getting good workmen, especially those capable of acting as foremen under his novel methods.

His plan, as is pointed out by George Iles in a recent original study of Whitney's achievements, was to make of his factory a single huge machine. In an armory before Whitney's day each man, highly skilled, produced by himself a distinct part of a musket. This division of labor Whitney supplanted by so apportioning work that little or no skill was demanded. He separated the various tasks and at each of these operations kept a group busy. For their assistance he simplified each operation and introduced three aids since indispensable in manufacture—drilling by templets or patterns, filing by jigs or guides and milling irregular forms.

From first to last a model musket was copied with precision so that every lock, for example, was exactly like every other among thousands. When all the parts needed to form a weapon were assembled they united much superior to a musket formed on any other plan. In case of repair a new part exactly fitted the place of an old part and at a trifling cost.

In order to accomplish his purpose and carry out his contract, whose execution was much prolonged, Whitney was obliged to invent new tools and machines at every step, none of which was patented. By doing so he not only greatly improved the finish and accuracy of his guns and the speed of their manufacture, but he impressed the value of the idea of standardization upon the minds of manufacturers that it was presently applied in other trades and has long since become the rule in manufacturing.—Harper's

Arrest Causes Demonstration And May Lead to a Revolt.

LONDON, May 5.—The arrest of Dr. Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, in connection with a May Day demonstration in Berlin, May 1st, caused great excitement among the workers there and led to a fresh demonstration, which was suppressed by a large body of police, according to reports from Berlin, forwarded from Copenhagen by the Exchange Telegraph Company. The despatch adds that it is believed the German Government will be compelled to release Liebknecht in order to prevent a revolution.

It is stated that he was arrested while addressing a peace demonstration and that it was a violation of the military regulations for him to wear civilian clothes in which he was arrested, as he is a soldier.

BERLIN, May 5.—A Berlin Socialist has introduced a resolution in the Reichstag requesting Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg to release Liebknecht from arrest and to suspend proceedings against him until after the adjournment of the Reichstag.

—but here it is —the ideal car —at the ideal price

Things that were impossible yesterday are today's accomplished facts.

Somewhere in the world someone with special knowledge, special experience, special equipment, gets ready and then startles the world by accomplishing the seemingly impossible.

Almost everyone said that a complete automobile of beautiful design, fine finish, the ideal small, light, economical car, built with quality materials and absolutely completely equipped, could not be built to sell for $850.

And but for Overland special knowledge, special experience and special equipment, it probably would still be one of the impossibilities instead of an accomplished fact.

Probably no other organization in the world can produce the quality and efficiency equal of this car to sell at anywhere near so low a price.

Certain it is that no other organization is doing so.

And no other car ever produced seems so exactly to suit the requirements of so varied a lot of people.

People of wealth, people of modest means—

People of long automobile experience—

People who never before owned a car—

All find in the small, light $850 Overland their ideal car.

It has the beauty, comforts, conveniences, power and complete equipment which everyone wants.

Yet it is inexpensive to buy and economical to operate.

See the Overland dealer and get acquainted with this car.

But act now, as this car stands alone and the rush to own them is amazing—delayed action is almost sure to mean a long wait for delivery.

Nervous Exhaustion Not to Be Trifled With

Nervous exhaustion is not a thing to be trifled with. If neglected it may result in a breakdown from which recovery is almost certain to be slow.

Its warning signals are unmistakable. When sleep becomes difficult, when dyspepsia sets in, when there is a persistent feeling of uneasiness and fatigue when memory becomes treacherous and attention hard to fix—then, indeed, it is time to seek expert advice as to the best course to pursue.

Sometimes an underlying organic condition will be found responsible for the nervous symtoms, making medical aid necessary. Sometimes skillful psychological treatment will be required to effect a complete restoration to health.

But often all that is needed is a temporary change in living conditions with a view to giving nature a chance to re-establish the nervous balance.

By this simple means what might have been a disastrous collapse has been averted in many cases. Let me cite a typical instance from personal experience.

There came to me a student in the graduate scho ol of one of our largest universities, a young man of small means but high ambitions. He had the usual list of neurasthenic symptoms and was in a mental state bordering on panic.

"I have worked hard," he explained, "to save enough to carry me through until I could gain my degree of doctor of philosophy. My final examination is due in May.

"Now it seems absurd for me to take it. I cannot study. I cannot even think. My head aches constantly. Sleep is impossible to me.

"It looks as if I would lose my whole year's work. And I have not the money to keep me here another year."

"What have you done about it?" I asked him.

"I have been to the university physician and he tells me that there really is nothing the matter with me. Nevertheless I am unfit to work."

Not many questions were needed to gain a clear view of the situation.

It was simply the case of a man who had neglected hygienic precautions under the [illegible] desire to succeed. He had worked late, in a badly ventilated room, had taken no exercise, and had worked over the possibility of failure.

"If you want to save yourself an other year's labour," I told him, "you must forget your books fr a time—must, indeed, forget that there is such a place as this university.

"Go to the country for two weeks at least, for a month, if possible. You can get good board cheap. Don't take a book with you.

"But do take war clothes and a good pair of boots. Rain or shine, get out of doors. Walk a few miles every day. Find a congenial walking companion, if you can. But, whether alone or in company, walk.

"Pretty soon you'll find yourself able to sleep. Life will seem less gloomy to you. And when you come back you'll be better able to study hard without overtaxing yourself.

"When you do come back forget your fear of failure. This, coupled with the physical upbuilding that the fresh air, good food and exercise will bring, is the thing which will most surely cure you."

As the event proved, it was all he needed to overcome his nervous exhaustion. It is all that many nervous patients need.

The policy of "fighting it out" is a mistaken and dangerous one when the nerves are frayed. Discretion in such cases is always infinitely better than valor.

To escape, to relax, to upbuild, may seem out of the question. But in the end it is less expensive than to plug along under the self-same conditions that have brought on the nervous exhaustion in the first place.

To be sure, not all nervous patients need to run away from their work. All, however, do need various changes in their mode of life.

And it is with regard to the changes needed that expert advice should be sought—not followed.

"WHISKEY PELLETS"

Mr. Lloyd-George on the Harm Liquor Can do the Huns

A note of warning was sounded by Mr. Lloyd-George at the Ministry of Munitions, when he replied to a deputation representing the Temperance Council of the Christian Churches. Mr. Lloyd-George pointed out that he had to deal with the drink question not as a temperance reformer, but merely from the point of view of the successful prosecution of the war.

He realized at the start that it was a struggle which would call upon all our resources before we could ever succeed in obtaining a triumphant conclusion to our efforts; that the nation would need a fit heart and a firm muscle, and that it could secure neither so long as from $750,000,000 to $800,000,000 a year was being spent on drink.

He put forward certain suggestions of a rather drastic character—a little too drastic for the House of Commons—but a good many of these proposals had survived, and there were much larger powers involved in the truncated piece of legislation than perhaps was fully realised.

"Within the past few weeks," said the Minister of Munitions, smiling at the temperance advocates around him, "I felt it my duty to become the greatest distiller this country has ever seen—the greatest distiller in the world. I have taken over the whole of the patent still distilleries in this country, and I am doing my best to provide whisky for the Germans. If the whisky pellets do half as much harm to the Germans as whisky has done in this country I and every other patriot will be truly thankful."

TORPEDO SECRETS

A Look at the Construction of the Dangerous Missile

At the torpedo's head is an explosive chamber, which holds damp gun-cotton. This is fired by means of a rod which, on contact with the walls of a ship, is driven in upon a detonator. This fires a primer, which in turn explodes the gun-cotton. The chamber stores compressed air to the pressure of 2,000 pounds to the square inch. This is practically the boiler room of the torpedo, for it supplies the motive power to the four-cylinder engine which drives it through the water on its errand of destruction.

Next comes the wonderful gyroscopic control of the air motor by which the rudders are adjusted. This is where the intricate mechanism of the torpedo is so clearly demonstrated. Should it rise or dip in the water, this gyroscope actuates a motor which in turn operates rods related with the rudders, and at once re-adjusts any deflections from the course originally set. The motor mentioned is but a few inches in length, yet the power it exerts by means of compressed air is such that the pressure of ½ ounce operated by the steering-gear produces a pull of 160 pounds on the rudders. This terrible fish's tail holds wheel gearing for the driving of two propellers and the manipulation of the rudders. The propellers revolve in opposite directions, thereby preventing the torpedo describing a circle.

HOW VICTORIA CROSS IS MADE

Some Interesting Facts About This Coveted Piece of Metal

Hitherto the most coveted British war decoration, the V.C., the intrinsic value of which is but a few coppers, has been made from bronze from Russian guns. Russian metal, however, being now withheld, the metal is being made from Chinese gun metal. The origin of the medal dates back to the Crimean War, when Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort decided on the Cross as the highest possible tribute to naval and military heroes "who should perform in the presence of the enemy a supreme act of valor or devotion to their country."

The reward carries with it an annual pension of $50 and $25 for each additional bar, and when a soldier who has won it is totally disabled, the pension may be increased to $250. The actual design of the medal is said to be the work of the Prince Consort himself, the medal being made by the firm of Messrs. Hancock's, of New Bond Street, London.

The first process of manufacture consists of obtaining a rough cast die by melting the metal at a temperature of 200 degrees F., and pouring it into a mould. The cast is then trimmed and chased, at which stage it has to be inspected by the War Office and passed. Then the Cross is sent back to Messrs. Hancock, who wait for the name of the recipient, the bar and the ribbon being added—blue for the navy and red for the army.

GERMANS MAKE GAINS ON HILL 304

MOST VIOLENT ASSAULT ON FRENCH POSITION

THE FRENCH HAVE TO EVACUATE PART OF THEIR HILL NUMBER 304 POSITIONS

Most Determined Assault on Dominating Position Since Verdun Drive Began Launched By the Germans---Battle Raged All Day Yesterday and Last Night and is Still Continuing---Trenches Untenable in Face of Terrible Bombardment.

FRENCH GAIN AT OTHER POINTS ON LINE

PARIS, May 6.—(French Official Communique).—French troops have been forced to evacuate part of their trenches on the northern slope of Hill 304, the keystone of the French defensive positions north-west of Verdun, under a most violent German attack, it was officially admitted to-day.

The attack launched by the Germans yesterday was the most determined assault on the dominating position of Hill 304 since the Verdun drive began. The battle raged all day yesterday and throughout last night, and was still continuing when last official despatches were filed to the War Office.

The Germans launched the attack after an unusually violent bombardment with heavy calibre and asphyxiating gas shells. While the French positions of a wide front were under attack, the sector before Hill 304 received the brunt of the German rush.

The bombardment by German gunners wrecked part of the French trenches, making them untenable in the fire that raked the positions on the northern slopes. It was these trenches that were evacuated.

French batteries posted on the summit of the hill and on the adjoining positions responded so energetically to the German bombardment that the German advance was checked everywhere else.

During last night the Germans made a determined attack against the French positions in the woods north-west of Hill 304, but were repulsed by a bayonet charge. It has been confirmed, the War Office stated, that in Thursday's attack against the northern slopes of Hill 304, fresh German divisions participated, suffering crushing losses.

East of the Meuse there was intense artillery activity in the region of Vaux, north-east of Verdun. At Lassigny the French, by a bold surprise attack, captured prisoners and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans. In the Argonne the French captured two mitrailleuses and made some prisoners.

Will Commemorate Lusitania's Fate

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 6.—A big demonstration, commemorating the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine, May 7, 1915, will be held in Hyde Park to-morrow. A large model of the Lusitania, one of the lost liner's life boats, and other relics will be carried in a procession.

Another Sinn Fein Leader Executed

Special to the Examiner:

DUBLIN, May 6.—John McBride, a Sinn Fein leader, and the eighth rebel to be executed, was shot to-day, it was officially announced to-day.

Two others sentenced to die received a commutation of their sentences to life imprisonment.

DUBLIN, May 6.—Major McBride, with a number of other Irish sympathizers, fought through the Boer War with the Boers, but escaped to Paris after the Boer surrender. He later toured the United States in the interests of Home Rule leaders. He returned to Dublin under a proclamation of amnesty to the Boer leaders.

An Opportunity To Bring War To End

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, May 6.—American circles here pointed out to-day the importance of the peace feature contained in Germany's reply to the American note, and expressed the belief that President Wilson now has a great opportunity to bring the war to an early end. Some persons even suggested that the time is now ripe for Col. House to revisit European capitals.

Consider the Sue Question Settled

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 6. — The submarine issue between the United States and Germany is closed. This is the view of President Wilson's advisors, with the official text of Germany's reply to the American demands in hand. The President himself received the official text to-day, but the White House withheld comment. So completely do officials in touch with the situation consider the issue disposed of, it is said there will be no reply by the President to the German note.

Another Zeppelin Reported Lost

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, May 6. — Dutch fishing boats report that another German Zeppelin is sinking in the North Sea, off Ameland, after an encounter with the British.

MADE NO PROFIT ON WAR ORDERS IN CANADA, HE SAYS

Col. J. Wesley Allison Appears Before the Davidson Commission in Regard to the Purchase of Colts Pistols

WAS A VERY BUSY MAN

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 6.—Col. J. Wesley Allison appeared again before the Davidson Commission this morning, in connection with the purchase of Colt pistols at the outbreak of the war, from the Colt Arms Companies of Hartford, Conn. These pistols cost $18.50 each on an order of 5,000, the usual trade discounts not being secured by the Canadian Government. Col. Allison was asked this morning concerning the amount he had received from the Colts Company for the Canadian orders placed for them. He said he got thirteen thousand dollars. Col. Allison said he had also acted for a time as a broker for the Remington Arms Co., He had acted in purchases for the British and Russian Governments, which ran up into millions. Col. Allison said he had a letter of introduction from Sam Hughes which he found of great assistance to him, "for social reasons."

"I want to give you the opportunity of saying whether you made any profits on war orders in Canada," said Sir Charles.

"None whatever," the witness replied, "neither directly or indirectly."

Don't Forget Sock Shower

Remember the Date, May 13th—93rd Battalion Will Benefit

The members of the 57th Chapter Daughters of the Empire remind the ladies of Peterborough and vicinity that there is only one more week in which to prepare for the sock shower for the 93rd Battalion.

While a large number of socks have already been contributed, the required number, that is 1,100, will not nearly be reached unless the last week shows an immense increase over the number now in the hands of the committee.

Some persons who have not the necessary time have been kind enough to contribute spindles of wool. Anyone desiring to make use of same in knitting for the 93rd Battalion may do so. The wool may be had from Mrs. W. H. Hill, 388 Brock street.

Remember the date, May 13th.

ANNIVERSARY OF ST. ANDREWS

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church of this city celebrates its 83rd anniversary to-morrow, when Rev. Dr. McCrae of London, will be the preacher. Dr. McCrae is widely known all over Ontario as an interesting and impressive speaker. The special collection at both services will go toward the payment of the remaining debt of about $750 on the new organ. The choir, under Mr. Trenaer, will render special music. Old friends of the congregation will receive a warm welcome. Strangers also are cordially invited

PEACE HINTED AT IN BERLIN NOTE

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Overshadowing in many minds the question of the President's acceptance of the German reply is the interest in a small paragraph in the heart of the German note, relating to peace. When President Wilson replies to Germany, this paragraph may or may not be touched upon. Several officials to-day, in guarded manner, indicated strongly that something may result directly from Germany's plain indication that she is anxious for peace.

It may be said with authority that some of those close in the councils of the President believe he should and may tentatively sound out the warring powers on the question of possible peace as a result of the German note.

Pay on Passes.

Save as provided in the next succeeding section, the tax imposed shall be payable by every person entering a place of amusement, whether such person is admitted by regular ticket, pass, or complimentary ticket.

All police officers, the inspector of theatres, and such officer or officers as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint to act as inspector, or in such other capacity as may be required, shall have the right to enter any place of amusement in order to ascertain whether the provisions of the Act are being complied with.

If by reason of accident or delay in mail or express delivery tickets are not available for any performance the owner may nevertheless collect the tax in cash, but shall, not later than the following day, remit to the Provincial Treasurer the amount so collected together with a sworn statement showing the scale of prices and attendance at each performance, and setting out the reason for not selling tickets.

In addition to all other penalties the Provincial Treasurer may revoke the license of any owner of a place of amusement wilfully contravening any of the provisions of the Act or these regulations.

T. P. O'Connor Says Dublin Riots Were Created Largely by the Remnants of the Larkinites Still Sore at Their Defeat in Big Strike

CASEMENT'S CASE

By T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, May 6.—There is an absolute consensus on one point concerning the Dublin riots; that is the movement was primarily directed against John Redmond, the Irish party and Home Rule. It was also created largely by the remnants of the Larkinites still sore at their defeat in the big strike.

Regarding the ultimate political consequence, views have changed from the first feeling of despair, which seemed to portend the sending back of Ireland's cause another century, to a soberer estimate that it will make little political difference. Indeed it brings out three things favourable to Home Rule. The first is the impossible weakness of the British Government of Ireland; second, the mistake in the refusal to give Mr. Redmond, through an Irish Parliament Executive responsibility for maintaining order in Ireland; and, thirdly, the mistake in obstruction from London to Mr. Redmond's Irish National Volunteers, who, if properly armed, would have prevented, or made short work of, an insignificant, insane minority to destroy the work, and oppose the will of nine-tenths of the Irish nation.

Finally, it is now evident that it was almost purely a local movement in Dublin, where the Larkinites have always been a disturbing element and that it had no roots in Ireland.

Threatened Home Rule.

Though the movement began by threatening the destruction of Home Rule, it has not only failed to do so, but may ultimately help even to accelerate it by the spectacle of the steadiness of Ireland and her practical unity in standing up with the Allies against German militarism. But bloodshed and the dreary prospect of innumerable state trials, perhaps executions, and long terms of imprisonment fill every Irishman with sorrow for the dupes, and with hatred for the men who sent them to the scaffold, or to penal servitude, while themselves safe from any such perils. Here in Great Britain the Sinn Feiners never numbered more than a couple of hundred out of two millions and a half of Irish population, and consist of British civil servants such as postoffice clerks. They never attempted to make an appearance at any public meeting in London, and a score who tried to interrupt meetings in Liverpool were promptly put down and have never been heard of since. Previous to the outbreak in Dublin, there had been suspicious signs in Ireland for some time. Two houses in a good position were taken by men notoriously penniless. Flashy agents went to the best hotels in the country, apparently with large funds; but when the Sinn Feiners made a great concentrated parade in several towns on St. Patrick's Day, their numbers reached only five thousand and the smallness of their adherents among the people was so demonstrated that the movement was again regarded as insignificant.

Crisis Precipitated.

Germany apparently, precipitated the crisis before its agents were ready. It is understood that Sir Roger Casement bitterly complains that he was forced into a German sub-

PASTEURIZATION AND PURE MILK.

Although the Scriptures enjoin us to be not over-careful in what we shall eat and drink—"take no thought for . . . . what ye shall eat or what we shall drink"—that does not apply so much to quality as to quantity and means of acquirement and source of supply. Eating and drinking are matters of the supremest faith. We have faith that the things we eat are clean in preparation and substance; and if they are not, a little unconscious dirt, so long as it is clean dirt, won't hurt. We have faith, as a rule, in the sanitary good quality of our food and drink; but here defects are not as harmless as in the case of "clean dirt." The United States Government is making deep investigation into the quality of the "impure dairy products which are being consumed daily by the American people in more or less large quantities." Expert evidence was presented to the effect that there is a great deal of tuberculosis in dairy cows that is transmitted to children using their milk; and the necessity of Federal inspection was urged. Evidence was given to show that of the 1,500 million pounds of butter produced every year in the United States, only 15 per cent. is first grade. An eminent physician testified that tuberculosis from bovine infection was a common disease among children. The New York health department reports that in 500 cases of tuberculous infection in children, 120 were due to infected cows' milk. It was stated that 300 children die in New York every year from tuberculosis contracted from cows. Another testifies that ten per cent. of the dairy cattle of the United States are tubercular. It is admitted that compulsory pasteurization of milk, which would destroy tuberculosis germs, should be adopted.

All this is of interest to us in Canada and Peterborough. We have inspection of milk, but that does not obviate the necessity of pasteurization; we want the danger not only detected, but destroyed, which scientists assert pasteurization will do. Health demands that we should have pure air, pure water, and why not pure milk, above suspicion of harbouring disease germs. We do not in this country do enough to insure pure, sound food, free from disease germs, whose presence competent inspection will disclose. We have government inspection of meats intended for export—to save our commercial good name. Then why not have government inspection of meats intended for home consumption, in the interest of the health of our citizens—an inspection only practicable under a public abbatoir system.

EDUCATIONAL EMPHASIS.

It hardly needs an educational expert to reach the conclusion that there is too much "waste" in the tuition methods in use in our public schools. At the recent meeting of the Educational Association of Ontario, Dr. Putnam, Inspector of Public schools Ottawa, expressed the opinion that there is too much "waste" in our Public School system—he claims that the child is kept too long in the public schools. Assuming that Dr. Putnam's dictum is correct there must be a reason for it. Though he does not explain the reason, it naturally suggests itself to the reflecting mind. The overloaded curriculum of our Public schools must share a large part of the responsibility. The child cannot submit to be stuffed, crammed, with a heterogeneous mass or medley of imperfectly learned and indigestible knowledge. The routine of memorizing a smattering, and little more, of a score of subjects gives a child no chance to become proficient in any single fundamental subject. The three R's are sometimes flippantly referred to as a trifling matter in education. But those who have experience of life know that a good, thorough grounding in reading, writing and arithmetic, and what they incidentally involve, will equip a child for the ordinary battle of life in a way that will supply all his practical needs. Everybody knows that the great mass of mankind in the ordinary course of life, find knowledge of these subjects all, or nearly all, they need to draw upon; and it is found that the "fancy" subjects of the school curriculum, a dab of this and a dab of that, have passed into hazy and dim memories, for one reason because they were imperfectly learned and seldom or never having been required in actual life, have been very much forgotten. It seems that with the chief part of the child's school years devoted to thorough grounding in the cardinal subjects, he will be the gainer and be much better equipped for life's work. A man undertaking to build a house, will succeed the better if he has a good supply of solid, essential materials. With these he can build a good, plain, comfortable house, and trust to the future to add the ornamental features. He would do better than if he provided himself with a scant and insufficient supply of both essential and ornamental materials. His means would not permit him to have enough of both.

If a child at school is thoroughly grounded in reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling and grammar, he will have all, or the raw material of, all that he needs to use in real life. If he is ambitious and wants to learn more, he has the necessary materials for self education; and if he wants to go higher to say, secondary schools, he has the foundation laid and will be in a position to acquire more rapidly, "higher" subjects. He will not have to spend two or three years of his high school life learning thoroughly the rudimentary subjects which, with a practical, well-devised curriculum he should have mastered forever in the Public schools. It is a fact that thousands of pupils scramble precariously into the high school, who are defective in the simple, elementary subjects and have to spend the time that should be devoted to high school subjects in learning what the Public school should have supplied.

Of course, it is impossible for a layman to dogmatize on such a subject, but it is permitted to insist that our Public schools should be made more practical; should give a child during school age, up to fifteen years, a sound grounding in the elementary subjects, the "starting point" and foundation for any future educational structure, and at the same time a sufficient equipment to fit nine-tenths of our children with all the knowledge and educative materials that will help him win his way in the world. There is much talk of technical education, and our schools properly give prominence to manual training, a most excellent thing; but not enough employed, because an overloaded curriculum takes too much of the time of the pupil to permit him to acquire the practical instruction and training which will fit the mass of our children for world usefulness and success. Thorough grounding in the elementary subjects in the Public schools, with manual training, will equip a pupil for better progress in technical education. In this he will need chiefly to use these elementary subjects and won't find much use for the theoretical smattering of a few 'oligies,' which is all that can be gained in the Public schools. Make our Public schools severely practical and we shall have laid a good foundation upon which, the will existing and the opportunity presenting, the superstructure of educational culture can be built. Emphasis upon the essential and not upon perfunctory profusion and superficiality should be the characteristic of a Public school education.

Canadian Timber Required For Government Works

Henceforth Canadian timber only is to be used in all public works undertaken by the Dominion Government. Such a policy can very easily be followed so far as supply is concerned, for it is a fact that Canada is one of the greatest of tree-growing lands. Except in the prairie country the forest is never far distant, and in it are to be found trees suitable for practically every work in which wood enters. With proper management which is now being attempted on a considerable scale, supplies need never become exhausted. It is not a difficult matter to allow and help new forest crops to grow where trees are cut down for industrial purposes.

There are many varieties of big trees in Canada a score of which are well known and plentiful, and which are used for various purposes. The largest is the Douglas fir, named after David Douglas, who discovered its worth as long ago as 1825. This truly splendid tree ranges in height from 175 to 300 feet and has a long clear trunk, from which large timbers of even diameter are squared. The wood is employed in heavy construction work and for masts and poles. The Douglas fir's habitat is British Columbia and also the Rocky Mountain part of Alberta. In the same territory, also, grows the western red cedar, very much in demand for shingles, interior woodwork and doors. Other cedar trees are to be found from Manitoba to the Atlantic, rising to a height of from 50 to 60 feet. Their wood is valued for its rot-resisting qualities. Fence posts and telegraph poles are made from cedar.

The emblem of Canada is the maple leaf and the beautiful tree on which it grows thrives wherever the land is good. There are several species and the hard or sugar maple is the most valued hardwood tree in the country. Its wood enters into furniture, flooring, ship building, railway car construction, tool handles, etc. In the forest the maple rises 100 feet and more and has a diameter of from two to five feet. The Canadian oak is about the same height and is put to much the same use. Hard birch is employed most extensively by manufacturers, especially in the making of cars, carriages and furniture. The elm furnishes strong, tough wood, and the ash is favoured by the producers of baskets, barrel hoops, boats, oars, ball bats, and like articles. The spruce tree, which ranges from the Atlantic to the Pacific, gives a soft light wood, much used for lumber and pulp for paper making. Other useful timber trees include the chestnut, cherry, hickory and the basswood. Indeed the trees of the Dominion are of many varieties and in sufficient quantity to fill every need. They are a great source of national wealth.—Forestry Journal.

FROM THE CORPORATION POINT OF VIEW.

The Toronto Electric Light Company, which has to compete with the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission, operated by public ownership, cites some remarkable figures in a statement published recently. From figures taken from the official report for 1915 of the Toronto hydro system, it is concluded that the average power purchased is 28,722 horse power. After adding $150,000 for depreciation, the cost of power on which rates should be based to the consumer, per horse power year, is put at $51.14. A monthly Toronto hydro account is then taken, showing a net amount of $51.17. The actual horse-power used by the same firm as measured by meter was then figured and the conclusion drawn that power costing the Toronto hydro $51.14 is sold for $9.24. The question is asked, "Who pays the deficit?" If the figures are wrong, an answer is unnecessary. If the figures are right, the answer is "The taxpayer."—Monetary Times.

A piece of burlap is very good for polishing the kitchen stove or range. It does not burn readily, and for that reason is better than flannel or cotton cloth or paper.

Muslin and cotton goods can be rendered waterproof by putting an ounce of alum in the last rinsing water, or by putting the alum in the starch.

A Turkish towel folded into several thicknesses and placed beneath a soft white cloth will bring out an embroidered design better than anything else.

Trades and Labour Notes

Trades and Labor Council Notes by the O.S.

Sustained interest in matters pertaining to the welfare of the workers was shown by the numerous delegates at the meeting held this week under the presiding officer of the year Charles Hammacott.

CONCSRIPTION THE TOPIC

A letter from President Watters of the Dominion Trades Congress caused the chief debate of the evening. At the Vancouver convention of last year the Congress recorded its unchangable opposition to conscription in any shape or form.

Now that the voluntary system of recruiting is about played out, and the Empire is no more thinking of throwing up the sponge than on the day it started in to destroy militarism the ranks will have to be filled and conscription seems to be the next best means thereto. Now is the event of this being introduced by Parliament, "what do you propose to do?" seems to be the question put to every affiliated local by the Dominion Trades Congress. Peterborough Trades and Labor Council turned the matter well over on Wednesday night and varied as well as interesting were the arguments advanced.

Trades unionism has opposed war because the burden has mostly been borne by the worker, yet we are facing to-day an enemy that is not beaten and the ranks must be filled. One representative could see reason in opposing a measure the Governement deemed necessary, while another opened that the measure would be totally unnecessary as if the Germans landed in Canada every man would shoulder the rifle without demur. This last was pointed out as absolute folly by another brother, as there would be no British North America if Fritz succeeded in passing the Grand Fleet of Britain. The question submitted by President Watters it must be admitted will have to be faced sooner or later, so President Hammacott asked for a standing vote. The result was practically a divided vote and as some members did not wish to declare themselves either way the question was laid over by the president, against which action nobody protested.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

The Labour Educational Association will hold its annual convention on May 24th at Berlin (Ontario). There is to be a big programme of war time discussions, and warlike delegates alone need put in an appearance. Peterborough Trades Council have decided to send a representative and the man answering most to the description mentioned was found to be G. S. Myland of the Typographical Union. Representative Myland has the honour of being the 5th vice-president of the L. F. A. The Ontario Conference of Typo Unions usually held their connection at the same time and place but this year things have been changed and Peterborough gets the printers in June.

HELP THE BARBERS

Two delegates were nominated as a committee to interview the proprietor of the Little Windsor whose annexe is occupied by a cut-price barber and further-more whose cards are exposed over the bar which is tended by a union dispenser of liquid refreshment.

Next meeting May 17th.

BULLET IN ANKLE 12 YEARS

Victim and Man Who Shot Him Now Close Friends.

A bullet shot twelve years ago by Casimir J. Welch, now justice of the peace, has been removed from the ankle of Martin J. Chowe, County Marshal, says the Kansas City Star. The shot was one of several fired in a political fight between the two at Twelfth Street and Grand Avenue.

The encounter was in a political campaign in which Welch was working for one faction of the Democratic organization and Crowe was supporting W. T. Kemper, candidate for mayor.

Although the Marshal has carried the bullet all these years, he and Justice Welch have been close personal friends for some time.

Stirring Address By The Rev. E. A. Langfeldt Former Rector of St. Luke's Church

"Our Empire is Out on One of the Noblest Expeditions of Her History" Says Rev. Mr. Langfeldt—It is a War of Principles—The Most Painful and Perplexing Thought is the Appalling Waste of Human Life.

THE BATTLE OF ST. JULIEN

The following sermon was delivered by the Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, former rector of St. Luke's Church of this city, at a meeting that was held in North Battleford, Saskatchewan, in commemoration of the "Battle of St. Julien:

It has been, and still is, difficult to make us here in Canada treat the war which has now been raging for 20 months, seriously enough, said Rev. Mr. Langfeldt, in his opening remarks. The war has not come very near us. It may have cut off some young life which we knew and loved; it may have left a vacant chair in some of our families at this happy Eastertide; but we have not seen it; we have not deeply felt it; we have known little or nothing of personal pain, hunger and desolation, and except for the increase in the cost of living, we have lived, and are living, as we used to live in times of peace.

It is good for us, that there come occasions now and then which help us to bring closer to us the horrors of this world tragedy, lest we forget; and we owe it to the loyal alertness of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, that we are gathered here this afternoon to look back and to remember the great sacrifice our Canadian men made on that memorable day. April 22nd, 1915, when they came to the rescue to prevent the Germans cutting off the British troops occupying the salient to the east on the western battle front. It is recorded that in spite of the danger to which they were exposed, the Canadians held their ground with a magnificent display of tenacity and courage; and it is not too much to say that the bearing and conduct of our splendid men averted a disaster which might have been attended with the most serious consequences.

Agonizing Death.

You will remember, said the speaker, that it was at the commencement of the second Battle of Ypres on the evening of the 22nd of April that the enemy first made use of the asphixiating gas. All the scientific resources of Germany must have been brought into play to produce a gas so devilish and poisonous a nature that any human being brought into contact with it is first paralyzed and then meets with a lingering and agonizing death. The battle of St. Julien characterizes, to the eternal shame and disgrace of Germany, the fighting of the enemy so cynical and barbarous as to disregard the well-known usages of civilized war, and to set at defiance the terms of the Hague Convention.

At 6.30 that evening of April 22nd, it was reported that a strange green vapour was moving over the trenches, and streams of soldiers were seen everywhere, blinded and coughing, and wild with terror. Fearless as they had been in the face of shell and bomb they had broken away before this more than human fear. Behind them they had left hundreds of their comrades stricken and dead, with froth on their lips and horrible faces.

The semi-circle that connected our lines from Hill 61 to the south, to Steenstraate at the northwest was about broken in the neighbourhood of Langemarke, and the right of the German assault was beyond the canal in several places, and bearing hard on the French remnants on the east bank. All was confusion, it is said, but the 3rd Canadian Brigade stood fast and did not break. Overwhelmed with superior numbers of men and guns, and sick unto death with poisoned fumes, they did all that men could do to stem the tide. To their eternal honour let us record it, though the battle front was pushed back towards St. Julien, the line was not broken, and the brave Canadian boys, by their courage and fearless devotion, prevented what would have been a terrible disaster.

Appalling Waste.

This is, in a few words, the record of the battle of St. Julien, where Canada's sons won undying fame; and to remember this we are here this afternoon.

What of the fine men who laid down their lives?

To some people looking out upon the world-tragedy of to-day, the most painful and perplexing thought seems to be the appalling waste of human life, the thousands and thousands of splendid fellows in the prime of their young manhood, with the high promise of their future unrealized, cut off in a moment. Even to outsiders it is an appalling thought; what must it be to the friends who loved them; to the mothers who are breaking their hearts all over the world to-day? But is it a waste? You will have no difficulty in answering the question when you think what these allied nations are fighting for.

Our Empire is out on one of the noblest expeditions of her history, fighting for the freedom of Europe, for the defence of weak nations, for the honour of her plighted word. This is no ordinary war. It is a war of great principles, of Might against Right; of low ideals against high, almost of Paganism against Christian ity. I hate to say it of any people, but I have been studying the question as deeply as I could, and I fear that the paganism of the wild German tribes of old is breaking through again in the lives of their Prussian descendants. If we are to judge by their acts and by the utterances of their most popular teachers, the old pagan spirit is breaking through the veneer of Christianity, and, [illegible] is tearing up the Sermon on the Mount.

England in Danger.

As things stand to-day, if they win this fight and become the lords of Europe, religion and civilization will be set back indefinitely. Even England herself may be in danger, in spite of all our optimism. You can never tell how the world position may be altered in a few months for one side or the other. You do not want another Belgium for the women and children of the Motherland. And it is the last men out that will make the difference. Go out to prevent it. Be worthy of those who went before you, and leave to your children the richest of all inheritances, the memory of fathers who in a great cause put self-sacrifice before ease, and honour above life itself.

Do you think that the lives of those who fell in battle were lost? God forbid for we cannot lay down our arms until we have vindicated the cause which carries with it the future of civilization. All classes have flocked to the colours and the undying story of the bravery of the sons of the Empire at the second battle of Ypres, and that of the Canadians at the battle of St. Julien will live as long as the Empire remains.

Canadians love their own land, and the more passionate their patriotism, the more Imperial it is. The man who, claiming to be a Canadian, opposes the idea of Canadian troops going overseas, ought to be deprived of civil and political rights in this country, for he is no less alien than the citizen of an enemy country.

Britain's Cause.

Loyalty to the Union Jack is not a thing on which the loyalist can nationalize. The veteran should not be able to give a more theoretical account of his attachment to Great Britain than any of the thousands of Canadian lads, Canadian by birth or adoption, who are presenting themselves for enlistment. Any true-hearted Canadian lad, if he be only 14 years old, has the fire in him to fight for the British Empire. Sect or party has nothing to do with it. The lad has come by his loyalty by bringing up, and by the mysterious way of what we may call the genius of the British people.

These are men who have lived a life withdrawn from the actualities of their day who can speculate on the nature of patriotism and who will attempt to give reasons for their favoring Britain's side in this war. Only Canadians who are all but dead to the world or are not whole-hearted in their loyalty can think of explaining why they prefer Britain's cause. With all true Canadians it is not the cause, it is Britain. True, in this war Britain's side is unquestionably the right side. The men to whom patriotism is a matter of ethics or reasoning can satisfy his conscience or his understanding by backing Britain. Millions of men, who are not British subjects at all, are enthusiastically declaring for Britain because she is right. We have heard of men asking young volunteers—why they should feel called upon to enlist in Canada's expeditionary forces. The young recruit might be pardoned for replying that, being a loyal British subject he has the mind and heart in him to fight Britain's enemies, and that he feels bound to treat as an enemy any man in Canada who puts such a question to him.

Passion for Liberty.

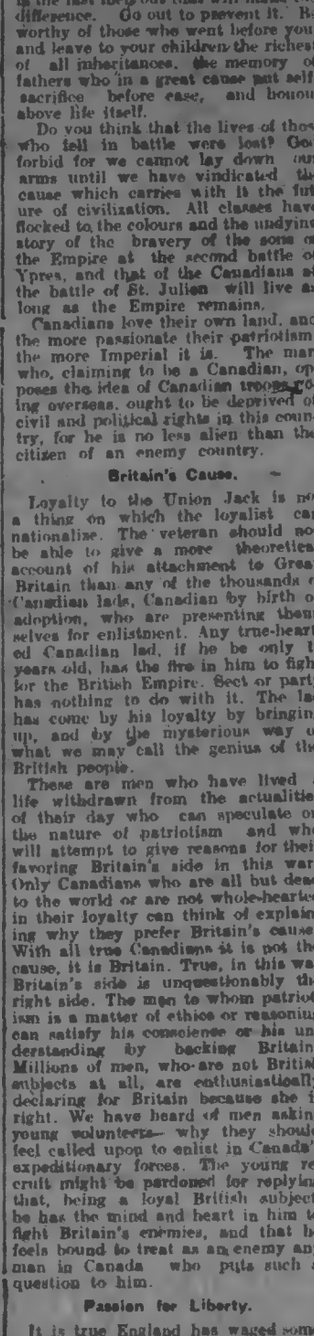
It is true England has waged some wrongful wars, but her greatest battles have been for righteousness and fair play. She has not boasted much but she did things. She has had a passion for liberty, a liking to "play the game fair." She never called wrong right.

Britain is proud of Canada's self-sacrifice for the Empire; proud of the noble boys who died on the battlefield of St. Julien. Let us be proud of Canada, too, proud to be Canadians; let us all do our part of advancing the cause of righteousness and peace.

I am proud of the boys who have gone from here to fight for the Empire. I never thought, with my deep horror of war, that I should one day stand in the pulpit or on the platform asking and urging men to fight. But I gladly would see all men in North Battleford disappear if I could feel that they had gone out at the call of duty. God guide you men to decide aright.

One day Canada will take her place amongst the great peoples of the earth, and historians will tell how she came amongst the nations. And prominent then, I trust, will be the story of her christening; how the old Fathers of Confederation debated on her name. Shall we call her the State or the Colony or the Commonwealth, or what? How old Sir Leonard Tilley arose in his place. "Gentlemen, I read in my Bible this morning that God's dominion should be from sea to sea, and from the River unto the ends of the earth. From sea to sea, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the River, the St. Lawrence, unto the ends of the earth at the Pole. Let us call her "the Dominion." "God's Dominion." And the whole assembly rose enthusiastically to his call and christened her "the Dominion" in the name of the Lord.

May she ever remain true to her sacred title. May her sons guard her faithfully from enemies without and within, and may her sons continue to add laurels to her noble and heroic history, like those who a year ago, at the battle of St. Julien died in the defense of their King and their country."



CARRY THEIR OWN BATHS.

Many Ingenious Devices for Soldiers Displayed at Red Cross Sale.

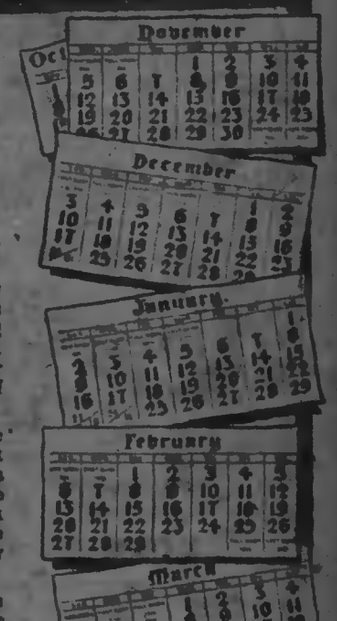
An active service exhibition is being held at Knightsbridge, in London, at which are displayed hundreds of ingenious devices for the comfort, health and safety of officers and men at the front. The money raised by the sale of these articles goes to funds of the British Red Cross and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Among the devices on sale is a small safety razor that will fit easily into a waistcoat pocket, a compact hot bath arrangement, together with patent tubes of "condensed heat," which will raise the temperature of water to the proper degree, a shower bath outfit and other toilet articles.

In order to enable the soldiers to write in the dark a combination pencil case and electric torch, to throw light on the paper, has been invented. The "nutshell canteen," as one little case is called, contains thirty-three assorted drink tablets, tea, coffee, beef tea and cordial ginger, six shields for corns, and a checkerboard.

A steel body shield, light but effective, also is for sale. Cases of bath salts for disinfecting purposes are displayed. A trenching tool with numerous uses attracts much attention. It is shorter than a man's arm, weighs less than four pounds, and will cut wire, and dig up a macadamized road.

Twice a Day for Half the Year



SOMEONE has to attend to the furnace; most people look on it as an irritating, dusty job. It need not be. It is not, if you have a Sunshine Furnace.

Shaking down the Sunshine Furnace does not raise a dust. The fine ashes are drawn up the chimney; there is never that fine sprinkling of dust that lights on everything in the basement, and even floats up through the house. No. That is one thing the owner of a Sunshine Furnace never has to contend with. The Sunshine is as clean as a piece of furniture.

There are extra sturdy grates that turn with a long handle to crush with ease the hardest clinkers. A slight rocking that hardly requires stooping, cleans down the ashes. The ashes fall as the grates are shaken, for the sides of the fire-pot are straight. This saves bother—and heat; because if ashes bank up around the fire-pot they stop the radiation of heat. The ashes come out in a big ash-pan. There is no shovelling or spilling ashes about.

And the door is large, as it should be for convenience in firing up. Or if need be, a large chunk of wood will go through this door. The dampers can be operated from the rooms above. This saves you the nuisance of running up and down stairs to shut off the drafts and open up the check damper.

BUYS PIRATE CASTLE

Retired Clergyman Wishes to Explore Cave Under "Blueboard's" Home.

Dr. James V. Nies, a retired Episcopal, clergyman, who has returned with his wife to New York from a two months' sojourn at St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, said that before he left there he bought the castle of Bluebeard, the pirate, who was brother-in-law of Capt. Teach, known as Blueboard, the pirate.

It has a tower that the natives say was built in the seventeenth century, although parts of the castle are more modern.

Mrs. Nies was delighted with the idea of living in the castle, connected with which are many pirate legends.

"You remember Blueboard," she said, enthusiastically. "Afraid? Oh, my, no!" A Danish family lived in the castle until seven years ago."

Dr. Nies said he understands there is a cave under the castle extending out under the sea, and he intends to explore it. Pirates' treasure is supposed to have been hoarded there. Dr. and Mrs. Nies have lived for some time at the Hotel St. George in Brooklyn.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Movement Primarily Against Home Rule

marine, despite protests that the movement would mean the butchery of his followers. But Germany demanded the delivery of the goods so long promised and often postponed and threw Casement to his fate.

Casement refused to implicate his dupes in Ireland, but two of his associates, less reticent, gave a full list of their confederates. Casement had 20,000 rifles and half a million dollars. All were seized. All Dublin was away at the Fairyhouse races Easter Monday, which helped the Sinn Feiners. The movement had been small in numbers from the beginning and was formidable only because it got possession of the Postoffice and other buildings. It never got into Dublin Castle or Trinity College. The slowness in putting down the rioters was due to the desire to avoid bloodshed, and to spare public buildings like the Four Courts and the Post Office. There have been only very slight echoes throughout Ireland. Cork and Limerick remained perfectly quiet, and in such small towns as Enniscorthy in Wexford it was merely a slight riot, easily squashed.

Turning to the comparative calm of events in England the members of the French section of the Franco-British Parliamentary Commission have been receiving much attention. They are a curious proof of that commingling, or, as they call it, sacred union—among all classes of Frenchmen which the present war has brought out.

Franco-British Commission.

It may be a surprise to many people who always think of France as a country of unadulterated Free Thought, that among the most important members of this Commission were several ardent Catholics. The outstanding figure of this section was the Marquis de Chambrun. He is one of the Frenchmen who speak English quite well; a typical French aristocrat in appearance and manner. Rather delicate of physique, carefully dressed, he is one of the figures that immediately enlisted the attention and sympathy of every audience he addressed. He stands out also as a direct descendant of Lafayette, and therefore it was he who was chosen to make one of the chief speeches at the memorable meeting organized by the American Luncheon Club. He is a strong though broad Catholic, very liberal, very tolerant—a Conservative with strong Liberal leanings.

Another prominent Catholic was Baron d'Aubigny. He belongs to an old Catholic family. Like the Marquis Chambrun he is broad and tolerant. He is quite a young man, about thirty-two or thirty-four, speaks English fairly well and indeed delivered a speech in England at a meeting in Scotland from manuscript. He is the chief figure in the Aviation Committee. He is, I am told responsible for some of the very best new devices which have been used by the French Aviation service.

A third important Catholic figure was M. Guernier. A speech of his was a remarkable instance of that intimate knowledge to which I have alluded. In a paper at one of the meetings he dealt with the difficulty that had been raised in France by the invasion of those parts of the country in which chemicals were mainly found, and especially chemicals which were necessary in order to supply components of ammunitions. To hear him describe how one chemist found one substitute and another chemist another substitute for these most necessary things, was like listening to a lecture in a class room by a professor of chemistry rather than a speech by a politician. He belongs to that race of Bretons whose loyalty to Catholicism is historic. He also is, while a Catholic, a strong Liberal bitterly opposed to anything like religious oppression. He produced a profound impression on all who met him.

Another Striking Figure.

To pass to another group, a very striking figure is Baron de Constant d'Estournelles. He was one of the great pacifist propagandists for ten or fifteen years before the war, has visited many parts of the world, including Germany, is in favour of arbitration instead of war as the proper arbitrament between the disputes of nations. He is married to a charming American wife and speaks English quite well. He made a speech at Glasgow, too, which—though there were some slight imperfections in the English—captured the hearts of the people, and when he had spoken for twenty minutes—five minutes beyond the time allotted to him—the audience insisted that he should go on.

The orator of the delegation was M. Leygues. He is from the South, and he has a perfect command of the highly figurative, and at the same time, chaste style of the French academician, clear, logical and passionate at the same time. He has been minister of education and of the fine arts several times, and now he is president of the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Chamber of Deputies—almost as important a position as the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Socialist Members.

There were two Socialist members, M. Cachin and M. Moutter. M. Cachin, like M. Guernier, is a Breton, but belongs to the opposite side of religious opinion from his compatriot. He moved at an early period of his life to Paris, became a lawyer, and now represents the quarter of Montmartre. M. Cachin was especially welcome at the British meetings, because as a Socialist he was able to speak on behalf of workingmen to working men, and this, of course, was especially desirable at a storm centre like Glasgow, where most of the labour troubles have taken place.

M. Moutet, the other Socialist, comes from Lyons. He also was a lawyer with a large practice before the war. Now that he has taken to politics he has had to neglect his profession, he said chaffingly when the question of religious belief was raised, that there were three religions in his family; his mother was a Catholic, his sister was a Protestant, and he himself had married a Russian Jewess. He is an orator of a fiery, tempestuous order, and he spoke with great effect to the workingmen of Sheffield.

There were some figures there from diplomacy, like M. Guerin; there was the Huguenot like M. Steegg, and of course there was a certain number of Free Thinkers. Most of them had catholic associations and many of them had been married in Catholic churches. The mothers of many of them still remained Catholic. Franklin-Bouillon was the exception. His father and his grandfather were both Free Thinkers, and he never belonged to any religious community. I should say, however, when discussing the religious point of view with several of these Free Thinkers, I found none of the old ferocity against the Christian creed which existed in another epoch. Franklin-Bouillon, for instance, wound up his very fine speech as the American Luncheon Club, by a quotation from the New Testament.

I see in this France, British Commission a preparation for a quite new France after the war. In the first place, it was quite palpable that the common defence of the country and the great disestablishment of the French church had removed a great deal of the old-time religious bitterness. Over and over again the French Socialists assured me that never again would they allow the question of any man's religious opinion to be discussed at their public meetings. They regarded a religion as a question for the individual conscience, and the removal of the great bone of contention in the established church had, in their opinion, entirely destroyed any reason for ever again discussing religious questions.

If an iron is allowed to get red hot, it will never retain the heat so well again.

Thin People Gained Weight Quickly

By Following this Simple Suggestion

This men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look by feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and many thin men and women we believe can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment, for the tissues and blood—prepare it in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, harmless, efficient and inexpensive. Many druggists in this vicinity are featuring large handy tablets to a [illegible] is guarantee of weight or [illegible] Sargol can be found in [illegible] druggist who is unable to [illegible] send $1.00 money order or [illegible] to the National Laboratories, [illegible] St. Albans, and a [illegible] will be sent you postpaid.

Capt. Burnham Will Give An Address

There is a treat in store for those who avail themselves of hearing Capt J. H. Burnham, M.P., on Friday evening, May 12th at 8 p.m., in Victoria Hall, when he will deliver an address to the public, the subject of which is "The Report of the Special Parliamentary Committee on Technical Education Compiled After Five Years' Trial." This is a live and interesting subject and as there is no admission or collection, it is expected the capacity of the hall will be taxed. Capt. Burnham needs no introduction to a Peterborough audience, and an enjoyable evening is assured.—Com.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Mr. W. J. Henry, assessor, is out gathering the necessary information for the compilation of the assessment rolls. This necessitates a house to house canvas. The property valuation of the city is about thirteen or fourteen million dollars.

The Poll Tax.

Notices respecting the poll tax will shortly be issued from the city hall. This year it will take a five dollar bill to settle the city's claim against the young man whose social status acquires his immunity so far as the 1916 tax rate is concerned. Last year's poll tax was one dollar.

A Substantial Increase.

It is estimated that between four and five hundred single men will be effected by the increase in the poll tax. This will net the city a large increase in the way of revenue.

To be sure of a smooth dressing stir the flour in dry, then pour on the cream or milk.

To save knife polish, if the knives and forks are first washed with cold water immediately after dinner they will be stained and they will require little cleaning.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Recommended

"My case was very serious and I was so sick that everybody expected my death any day. No suffering could ever be worse than what I had to endure.

I could feel at first the gravel passing through my bladder but now I am as strong as ever. I weigh about 20 lbs. more than when I started to take Gin Pills.

I beg you to publish my letter so that people may know what Gin Pills had done for me. The first box relieved me a good deal, eight boxes were sufficient to cure me entirely, and bring me back to perfect health.

GIN PILLS are sold by all druggists, 50c. a box; six boxes for $2.50. 28

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY COLUMN

The Examiner, which has already proved such a generous friend to our local society, has increased our indebtedness by granting us permission to have a column all of our very own every Saturday.

By means of this column we hope to sustain the interest in our work throughout the summer, even the fortunate ones who migrate to the lakes and other summer resorts, will on reading it give us who are left at home a kindly thought, and will remember that there are many ways of helping the Red Cross Society even though away from home.

It would be to our everlasting shame if we let our interest waver, for Canadian women have a right to feel a pride in the services they have rendered the Empire, and so all must do their utmost to continue and keep that record unsullied.

We on our part will endeavor to make this column interesting, instructive and up-to-date. Furthermore, we desire to be of service to any of our readers who have relatives and friends fighting for the empire, if they desire any information regarding the many branches of Red Cross work, such as the "Information Bureau," the "Parcel Dept.," the "Prisoners of War Food Fund," the "Canadian War Contingent Association," or whom to apply in order to trace sick and wounded, we shall be glad to be of any service in our power.

Any questions regarding Red Cross work, supplies, methods, which change occasionally, will be answered.

Letters addressed to "Service," c/o. Red Cross Society, Peterboro, will be replied to in this column the following week—unless urgent, when an answer will be sent by post.

The financial report of the Canadian Red Cross Society is now completed, and it is splendid to learn that the running expenses of the head office only amounts to just about 3 per cent. of the cash contributions received. This means that 97 cents out of every dollar goes direct to the work. No officer of the society or any member of the council or the executive receives one cent of salary or remuneration for their services.

Needless to say the same applies to all workers in the local society—all work being entirely voluntary.

The Canadian Red Cross, London, England, which has just removed to larger and more convenient quarters situated at 71 and 73 Tooley Street, sent at Christmas time to every Canadian prisoner of war a parcel containing the following garments: 1 pair boots, 1 pair canvas shoes, 2 pairs of socks, 2 pairs of drawers, 2 vests, 2 shirts, 1 Cardigan, 1 pair gloves, 1 great coat, 1 pair trousers, 1 jacket, 1 kit bag, 1 cap, 2 blankets—all this in addition to the parcels of food sent regularly.

Hundreds of enthusiastic acknowledgments have been coming in from the prisoners, and these post cards have repaid the workers a thousandfold for all the immense labor involved in the sending of them.

Some of the first contingent men gave a concert at the front recently whereby they realized sufficient money to purchase ten gramaphones and records, boxing gloves and footballs for their comrades who are prisoners in Germany.

The money was sent to the Canadian Red Cross in London for this purpose and it was gladly carried out and forwarded to the various camps. A human touch such as this moves one, for it proves that our boys are retaining those attributes which make life pleasanter for one and all, even though in the midst of much that is hard, callous and unchristian.

One chapter of the I.O.D.E. sent £1 18s 6d to the Red Cross in London to purchase comforts for the prisoners in Giessen camp. Three hundred carefully chosen books were bought, and sent to the men there. It is difficult to realise the boundless pleasure such a gift would afford and what a relief to the loneliness and monotony of the dreary routine life of a prisoner in a German camp. Other Chapters might do worse than follow the good example of the East Kootenay Chapter.

The parcels sent by the Prisoners of War Fund Dept. now cost 5s each instead of 4s as formerly therefore "adoption" now costs $2.50 a month instead of $2 as before. Mrs. Rivers Bulkely says in writing of this department of which she is the head:

"The public interest and generosity shown have been so great, especially in Canada, and seems to show no signs of abating (2400 pounds was received in January alone) that I would like to suggest that in every case where a man has agreed to assign 10s a month we should see that he receives in addition to his fortnightly 5s parcel, for which he is paying, another 5s parcel the alternate week provided either by this society or by his 'Adopter.' It seems only fair that the men who are willing to help themselves should profit in some way by this action on their part. It is most desirable that each man should have 5s parcel weekly and I hope eventually, if the interest in the prisoners continues unabated, and people are still willing to adopt prisoners, that we shall be able to arrange for each man, even those that do not pay for themselves, to have at least three parcels a month.

"I should be glad if some statement on the lines of the above might be put in the Canadian papers, as it is felt that it is only right that the Canadian public, who have subscribed so generously, should know of this plan of the men paying for some of their parcels themselves, and should have some idea of how their money is being spent."

Once again we deny statements that the Red Cross is making the soldiers pay for socks and other supplies. Everything is given out absolutely free of charge. Mr. Noel Marshall's offer of $100.00 reward to anyone who can bring evidence to the contrary, is still open and will continue so. Here is a chance for those who "know it for a fact" to earn $100.

Suggestions For Those Who Grow Asters, Dahlias, Annuals

Some of the Good Varieties and Hints As to Planting, and Care of Young Plants

GROWING THE ASTER

An open, sunny position in the garden is best. Close to a building on the south side is not a good position. East or west side of building is not so objectionable.

Asters like a fairly rich, loamy soil. If soil is of a clayey nature, dig in sand or leaf mould. Dig and rake ground fine.

Sow seed out of doors about the middle of May. Make a shallow drill about half an inch in depth and sow seed about an inch apart. Cover with fine soil, and if dry, firm well over the seed. Water if very dry. For early flowering the Comet and Ostrich Plume Asters are best. For late flowering sow the Late Branching Asters. Aster seed may be started in doors in shallow, well drained boxes or in flower pots in April if early flowers are wanted. The plants may be set out in the garden toward the end of May.

When four or five leaves have developed, transplant seedlings, into good soil about eight inches apart, or thin them to about that distance apart each way for flowering purposes.

Stir the surface soil frequently to keep down weeds and save soil moisture.

Cut blooms with long stems and keep in water in a cool place.

OTHER GOOD ANNUALS TO GROW.

Seeds of the annuals such as Phlox Drummondii, Ten Week Stocks, Cosmos, Zinnia, Schizanthus, Coreopsis, Mignonette, Celosia, (Ostrich Plume), Nasturtiums, Candytuft and Sweet Alyssum should be sworn out of doors about the middle of May.

Sweet Alyssum is one of the best annual plants for an edging plant. If you have a very hot or sunny border sow some Portulacca seed about the third week in May. Portulacca seed may be sown broadcast on fine soil and raked in very lightly. Portulacca makes a good plant for the edge of the border, or in a clump or small border by itself. The plants of these may be thinned to about four inches apart later on if too thick in the border. Nasturtium and Zinnia seed should be sown nearly an inch in depth. The seed of the rest of the annuals mentioned should be sown about half an inch under the surface. Poppy seed should not be sown until late in May. The soil for these should be raked very fine before sowing and the seed covered with lightly, not more than one-eighth of an inch deep. All annuals like an open sunny position, few of them thrive in shaded positions. Poppies especially like a sunny position. The Shirley and the double flowering poppies are very showy during the hot summer months if not sown too early. Pansy seed should be sown out of doors as early as the ground can be nicely worked. Pansies like a light, loamy, rich soil, with some leaf mould or black soil from the bush worked in, and a position shaded from hot sun in the middle of the day. Pansy plants raised from seed sown early indoors should be planted outside about the middle of May. Sweet Peas should be sown at once, if not sown earlier, as directed in last week's notes on floriculture. Late sown sweet peas seldom give the best possible results. Sweet peas and asters are two of the best annuals for growing out of doors.

HINTS ON GROWING DAHLIAS

Dahlias are best grown in fairly rich loamy soil. An open, sunny position suits them very well. Close up to a building on the south side is not good for them. A position slightly shaded for an hour or two at mid-day suits them very well. A position exposed to high winds is not a good place for them.

Dahlia roots that have been kept in the cellar all winter may be divided up so that each division or section has a piece of the crown as well as one or two of the fleshy tubers attached. The roots may be divided up, and started in a cool room about the end of April, in rather sandy soil in large pots, or in small boxes or tubs. The plants may be stood out of doors in warm weather in the side toward the end of May to harden before being planted out. They may be planted out in the garden early in June, after all danger of frost is over for early flowering. Dahlias may be grown from cuttings of young growth rooted in sand, or they maye be grown from seed. The seed must be sown indoors early. February or March, to secure Propagating from root divisions as first mentioned is the best method for amateurs to follow.

The dormant roots that have not been started early indoors may be planted out in the garden, about the end of May, if weather permits.

STAKING.

Place a stake to Dahlias, and tie the stems up to it loosely, when growth is about a foot in height. This is important, as unless it is attended to, the growth is often broken down and the plant ruined.

Cut off the small, weakly shoots close to the ground, leaving only one or two of the strongest main shoots to flower. This should be done when growth is about a foot in height.

Give dahlias a good supply of water at the roots in dry, hot weather, and spray with water every day in hot weather. Spraying with soapy water occasionally is also good for dahlias.

A liquid fertiliser, made from cow manure, applied once a week during the summer, will help dahlias.

Dust the terminal points of growth with pyrethrum powder to help prevent attacks of the "tarnished plant bug," the worst insect enemy of the dahlia. Wood ashes, fine coal soot or tobacco dust dusted on are also good remedies. Frequent sprayings with water or tobacco solutions will also help prevent attacks of this pest.

After frost has blackened the growth in early fall, cut the stems down to within five or six inches of the ground. Dig the roots with some soil attached if possible, dry them in a room or shed away from frost for a week or two. Then place them in a cool, not too dry celler, temperature about 40 degrees, until time to divide and start then in spring as stated. A cellar or room where potatoes will keep well will keep dahlia roots. It should always be remembered that both the growth and the roots of dahlias are very easily injured by even slight frosts.

Death Instead of the Altar

Youth of 20, Lass of 17, Ill, Told They Could not Marry.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 6.—Spencer A. Shelby, twenty years old, and his seventeen-year-old bride-to-be, Helen Fiegenschue, had pledged themselves to an eugenic marriage. Then, because the verdict of their physician demanded, in their opinion, that they should not be mated, and as the wedding was to be next week, they entered a suicide pact, resolving to die together and at once.

Both were radiant and happy in the thought of their approaching marriage. She had a persistent cough and he a throat affliction that had been troublesome for several weeks. They discussed these maladies and the idea of eugenics.

Together they went to a doctor for examination, undisturbed by any fears. But on Saturday he told them tuberculosis had its grip on each and that it would be unwise for them to marry.

They conferred on Sunday night, then wrote farewells to their families, expressing preference for immediate death to the wrecking of marriage plans and a battle with the "white plague". Then they disappeared to-gether. Their relatives and the police are convinced they have killed themselves.

REPORT OF MEETING OF ONTARIO LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, Who Attended the Sessions, Presents a Number of Outstanding Features, Including a Summary of a Lucid Address Given by Mr. C. C. James on Agriculture—A Resolution.

The meeting of the Ontario Library Association, which has just concluded its annual sessions in Toronto, was marked by one or two interesting features, of which perhaps the outstanding one was a very lucid and interesting address by Mr. C. C. James, on "Agriculture and The War," in which was graphically brought out the strain to which the food production of all countries was being put by the demands of the various armies in the field. Mr. James stated that the agricultural population had done its fair share in army enlistment, and said that figures could easily be brought to prove this point. One special feature had been consistently overlooked in this matter. In Germany, agriculture was largely represented by the man with the hoe; in this country, represented by the man with the reaper and the gang-plough. In Canada, farming was essentially a man's work; on the continent of Europe it was an occupation where both sexes engaged in it on almost equal terms.

The address by Mr. David Williams, the retiring president of the Association, dealt with the cooperation of the Press and the Library, and the valuable aid almost invariably afforded by the former to the latter was especially dwelt upon.

Annual Report.

The annual report of the Secretary of the Association, Dr. Hardy, showed very clearly that the office is no sinecure. It was Dr. Hardy's 16th annual report and disclosed the fact that whilst the year had been a quiet one in many ways, owing to the war, still much of real interest and value had been accomplished.

A recapitulation of certain of these features will not be amiss.

1. A circular letter to County Councils throughout the Province had been sent out dealing with the desirability of making grants to libraries within each jurisdiction. This matter will most probably be dealt with by the Councils at their next meeting.

2. An appeal to the Legislature for further assistance to the Canadian Library for the Blind had also been under consideration. Nothing had been done, however, owing to the demands on the Legislature created by the war. Dr. Hardy goes on to say that in view of the action of both Dominion and Provincial Governments in creating commissions to survey our resources and our needs, and especially to provide for our disabled soldiers, it would be well to place the case for these libraries before the Commissions at an early date. This, by subsequent resolution to that effect, will be done.

In his review of the work of the year, Dr. Hardy deals with many phases of library work, chief among them being the selected lists of books. Library extension work, in which special reference is made to the importance of interesting Sunday School workers in modern library methods, and also to the great value of a library conducted on modern lines in the various high schools of the Province.

In another part of his report Dr. Hardy lays stress on the extreme value of a library's auxiliary features, instancing the lecture course at Ottawa and the Calgary Library Workingmen's Club.

Resolution passed at the recent meeting of the Ontario Library Association:

1. That this Association, having heard with great satisfaction of the generous grant made by the Board of the Toronto Public Library in aid of the Free Library for the Blind, and having in mind the great extension of its ministry to the Blind, through the deplorable results of the war now raging, would respectfully urge upon the Ontario Government a substantial increase in the annual grant in aid of the Library, and that the President and the Secretary of the O. L. A. be a committee to co-operate with the Board of the Library, and the Committee of the Toronto Public Library in pressing its claims upon the Provincial Legislature.

2. Without criticising in the slightest degree the work of any official we suggest that an effort be made, if practicable, to publish earlier than heretofore the annual report of the Association. That copies of this report be sent by the Secretary of the Association at an early date to each of the Library Institutes for their consideration.

3. That, in view of their cost, we do not endorse the suggestion regarding the publication of papers presented at Library Institutes.

4. We recommend that library institutes be held in the larger libraries of each district where the conveniences of the greatest number of delegates will be served and where library work in its various processes can be best illustrated.

5. That whilst we would earnestly urge upon all our libraries the fullest possible cooperation with the schools, we believe that the Library and not the school, should be the unit in the community. We believe in the children and youth being encouraged to frequent the Library, and learn by practical experience its value to them in their studies.

6. We recommend that when any changes or additions to the Public Libraries Act are proposed the Secretary of this Association notify the library officials in the home town of each member of the Association, so that these officials may see that their members are made acquainted with the proposed changes or additions so that they may have an intelligent appreciation of the desirability of the amendments in question.

Traffic Policeman Torpedoed in Neutral Zone of St. Traffic

The traffic policeman is supposed to inhabit, while on duty, a neutral zone. Until last night none of Chief Thompson's men have had occasion to issue a note regarding infringements of the unwritten law that there must be no unfriendly acts in this extremely limited, but prescribed area around which swirls the traffic of fours, sixes and eights, farmers' waggons, drays and other vehicles that travel the city's streets. But last night, P. C. Deannard was bowled over, gently, but altogether successfully by Mr. W. S. Dodd, who was driving his new car around the corner at Charlotte and George streets. The details of the incident were not given out, but it is learned that there was no serious damage to either the genial policeman or the car. Having stopped all kinds of centre bucks and other rugby rushes in his football days, P. C. Deannard was vanquished in his latest encounter, one of the little incidents that are bound to arise out of the most carefully guided traffic conditions.

NUN TELLS STORY OF ADOPTED BABY

Explains How Mrs. Mathers Got Bryan Child

CHICAGO, Ill., May 6.—How Mrs. Matters, who is on trial here for perjury, adopted the baby girl she swore was her own is told by the mother-superior of Misercordia Hospital, Ottawa, to Assistant State Attorney Ramsey here Thursday. Three nuns from the hospital have arrived in Chicago.

The Mother Superior said Mrs. Matters went to the hospital and told a story that she had lost her husband and that she was so grief-stricken that she felt like ending her life.

Mr. Ramsey said: "She said Mrs. Matters told her she wanted to adopt a boy and raise him as her own. Mrs. Matters then started through the hospital, the Mother Superior said, and took a fancy to the little Bryan girl, who was in bed with her mother.

"She made arrangements so that the Bryan child and her mother were removed to a private room. The Mother Superior said that Mrs. Matters also told her that her husband's father was wealthy and believed that Mrs. Matters was about to become a mother.

"Mrs. Matters, according to the Mother Superior, explained that she wanted to take the little Bryan girl away herself. She did not want any nurse or other attache of the hospital to accompany her for fear that at some time in the future the nurse or attache might disclose that it was an adopted child. She said she wanted to raise the child as her own."

The State is perplexed over the defence of Mrs. Matters and Charles Mellon and Harry Edwards—for the latter two, private detectives, are on trial also—will adopt. It was rumoured yesterday that they will hold that the Jessie Bryan child is dead and that the real Matters heir lives. The State knows that the Bryan girl was informed shortly after her baby was taken from her that it had died. A man later told her that it still lived. Aside from the nuns, Prosecutor Ramsey says, he has discovered a new witness, whose identity will prove sensational.

POOR MEMORY TROUBLESOME IT MAY BE STRENGTHENED

The brain is a great nerve battery that presides over all the powers and impulses of the human body.

Very frequently as a result of poor blood it becomes enfeebled and a general weakness of the entire system follows.

No remedy possess the marvelous brain strengthening power that Ferrozone has demonstrated in thousands of cases.

It contains an abundance of phosphorous and iron which are essential in the formation of red vitalizing blood, and in this way supplies the brain with extra power to perform its numerous and important duties.

Ferrozone is the best preparation for brain workers, and those inclined to a sedentary life. It improves the appetite, insures good digestion, regulates the bowels, and helps the stomach to do its work.

Lawyers, ministers, and those whose occupation entails much thinking and brain labor, will find Ferrozone of immense value, because of its power to stimulate mental activity. Students who take Ferrozone regularly, find it not only clears the brain, and makes it more receptive, but makes them strong in body as well as mind.

A medical student of Toronto University, who has proved the good qualities of Ferrozone, says: "On my study table there is always a place for Ferrozone. I find by keeping my digestion in perfect order, and maintaining a splendid appetite, it enables me to accomplish a great deal of hard work. I consider Ferrozone at the same time food for the brain, the blood and the nerves, and can highly recommend it."

Very few are so strong and healthy that a course of Ferrozone would not benefit. It is good for the young and old alike, and is prepared in convenient tablet form, price per box 50 cts., sold by all druggists.

PETERBORO' BOY GETS THIRD PRIZE

In Typewriting Contest at the Business Show, Toronto—Attends Local Business College

D. Howard Anderson, student at the Peterborough Business College, carried off third prize in the typewriting contest at the Business Show held in Toronto on April 26th, for the Canadian School Championship. The contest was open to all students who had started the study of typewriting by September 15th, 1915. There were forty entries, representing twelve schools.

Mr. Anderson only entered the College on December 6th, consequently his showing is all the more creditable. He had only been four months at the work at the time of the contest. The winner of the first prize wrote 65 words a minute, the second one 60.4, and Mr. Anderson 60.1.

Mr. Anderson, in addition to setting up a new record for the Peterborough Business College, also receives a bronze medal and the initial credential certificate and also the special credential certificate, issued by the United Typewriting Co.

This young student is only seventeen years of age, and is to be congratulated on the splendid success he has already achieved.

Eggs Slightly Higher At Farmers' Market

There were no unusual features to this morning market. The attendance was fairly large and prices showed no appreciable change. Eggs were a trifle stronger at 22 and 23 cents, while butter sold at from 31 to 33 cents. The supply of poultry was very average, and on the outside market young pigs hulked the display. Some of the six weeks' old variety sold as high as $12 a pair. Seed potatoes were $1.50 and $1.75 a pair, with only a small quantity offered.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can discard with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ¼ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, no matter how if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to me, and I have published many testimonials concerning them. I have no financial connection with the manufacturers, but I feel I should in justice to my fellow men, prescribe it in my practice for many patients, and it has given entire satisfaction in almost every case."

The Warner Drug Co., fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions and will gladly fill yours.

Some More Convincing Evidence

If more evidence were needed to demonstrate the exceptional value of the total abstinence as an insurance risk than what has been published by this Company, it is found in the following Table covering the experience in the two Departments of the Company for the period of ten years.

Year	PER CENT OF EXPECTED LOSS
	Abstainer	General
1906	30.95 per cent	74.23 per cent
1907	37.91 per cent	69.13 per cent
1908	33.30 per cent	68.45 per cent
1911	46.87 per cent	73.89 per cent
1914	46.42 per cent	68.96 per cent
1915	45.26 per cent	71.46 per cent
Average for Last 10 Years	38.46 per cent	64.17 per cent

You can reap the advantages of Total Abstinence by insuring in a Company which gives special terms and rates where the above Table clearly shows you deserve it, by those who classify for insurance in this Department. "Greater, Grander, Better Than Ever," Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works

Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Mrs. Vernon Castle, Were New Figures in the Old Collection—Door Receipts Were Acceptably Large and For Patriotic Purpose

MUSICAL PROGRAMME, TOO

Mrs. Jarley resurrected her wax works, dusted and refurbished some of the ancient favourites, modernized her collection by the addition of present day personages, who readily lend themselves to satire and burlesque, and introduced the amusing automotons to a crowded house at the Collegiate Institute last night. It was a grand revival of an old and innocent form of amusement and was given a production that flashed with many displays of talent terpsichorean, pantomimic and otherwise, with incidental music by Mr. Asa Huycke and sapient introductory sketches by the motherly Mrs. Jarley. This reunion of many of the immortals including the latest elect provided a real funny skit, and the ladies of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E., who staged the affair with a patriotic objective for the door receipts deserve a compliment for the fun they provided. The presentation of the figures was not without considerable originality, and though some of the puns were "screamers," they drew the laughs they were slated for. There were Bluebeard who kept his house in order, and Charlie Chaplin who isn't married, Galatea and Pygmalion and George McManus' creation Jiggs and Maggie, or rather Maggie and Jiggs, Red Riding Hood and her dog, Lucky Grey, a suffragette, that suggested a certain lady with pronounced ideas as to woman's right to the ballot, the Indian maiden Pocahontas, who danced in the American vogue of 1492, and a graceful Mrs. Vernon Castle. And son on down the collection to Mrs. Jarley, herself, who held a certain affection for her figures, especially the bride who waited at the church, but presented them with a perfunctoriness of frequent repetition and long familiarity. This aspect of Mrs. Jarley's work was convincingly done together with a dangerous and uncertain knowledge of Webster that is picked up in the school of experience.

The entertainment was opened with a short musical programme as follows:

Violin Duet—"Symphonique Poem," Misses Logan and Palmer, Miss McKee accompanist.
Vocal Solo—"Canada Ever," Mr. Douglas Carlisle.
Vocal Solo—"Spring's Awakening," Miss Dorothy Allan.
Piano Solo—"Cantique D'Amour," Miss Jean Hill.
Vocal Solo—"The Roses Are Here Again," Miss Doris Rathbone.

Mr. Allan played the accompaniments. Miss Allan sang as an encore the patriotic air "Somewhere In France," stirringly and in good voice. Miss Jean Hill, who is an accomplished pianist, won a well deserved encore.

THE CASTE OF FIGURES.

Mrs. Jarley and her wax group were presented by the following:

Mrs. Jarley—Mrs. Peter Campbell.
Jane and George, her assistant oilers—Miss Janet Stapleton and Mr. Connell.
Bluebeard and some of his wives—Lieut. V. Eastwood and Misses Hilda Cubitt, Bessie Mather, Marion Harstone, Helen Houston, Nellie Reid, Kathleen Dunsford.
Jack and Jill—Amy Hill and Alec Fortye.
Sleeping Beauty and the Prince—Rosamond Huycke and Hal Crane.
Mrs. Vernon Castle— Miss Jessie Spence.
Mr. Jarley—Lieut. Gardiner.
Waiting at the Church—Mrs. F. L. Roy.
Pocahontas—Miss O. Cavanah.
Lucy Grey—Muriel Summerville.
Mary Pickford—Greta Rountree.
Doll—Audrey Huycke.
Red Riding Hood—Miss Ruth Robertson.
Pygmalion and Galatea—Mr. Scadding and Miss Jean Neill.
Where Are You Going My Pretty Maid — Miss G. Hooper and Lieut. Stevenson.
Charlie Chaplin — Lieut. Jessé Ketchum.
Maggie and Jiggs—L. Conway and G. McClennan.
Henry Ford—Mr. Bob Neill.
Mrs. Pankhurst—Miss Sherwood.
May Queen— Miss Margaret Eastwood.
Trilby—Miss K. Moore.
Brittania—Mrs. Scadding.
Ireland—Miss Celia Dunsford.
Scotland—Miss N. Hatton.
India—Miss M. Stevenson.
Africa— Miss M. Armstrong.
Australia—Miss Cumberland.
Canada—Miss M. Grieve.
France—Miss B. Reid.
Russia—Miss Stevenson.
Italy—Miss Amy Clementi.
Serbia—Miss Isabel Morphet.
Belgium— Miss Marguerite Baker and Miss Helen Fisk.

To single out the cleverest skits would scarcely be fair to the entire collection, but among those that are prominently remembered are Mrs. Roy as Vesta Victoria, Lieut. Ketchum as Charlie Chaplin, Miss Spencer as Mrs. Castle.

The tableau of the Allies was a pretty finale to an unusual and interesting entertainment.

The committee wish to tender their hearty thanks to Miss Dorothy Allan, Miss Jean Hill, Miss Lora Logan, Miss Doris Rathbone, Miss McKee, Miss Edwina Palmer, Mr. Douglas Carlisle, Mr. Asa Huycke and Mr. John Allan for so kindly giving their services for the musical programme; to Mr. Fisk for operating the lantern, to Mr. A. E. Coulthard and Mr. W. F. Johnston for taking the tickets and money, and to Mr. Crane, who on behalf of the Board of Education, kindly granted the use of the hall, and to Mr. McKee, janitor, for his willing help.

The committee consisted of Mrs. Allan (convener), Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Morphet and Mrs. Spence.

SAY AMUSEMENT TAX WILL CLOSE SOME HOUSES

An indignation meeting to draft a protest against the amusement tax act which will go into effect on May 15 will be held on Sunday by the members of the Motion-picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario. The Association claims that the act will have such a great effect on the attendance to many of the smaller theatres in town that most of them will have to close down.

According to the provisions of the act patrons of the theatres and other amusement places which charge an admission of ten cents or less must pay one cent war tax upon each ticket. Admissions higher in price are taxed accordingly. A ticket chopper with an attendant is also required under the act, and it is this point which is arousing the ire of the owners. The payment of about $15 per week for another attendant, the Association alleges, will cut the profits of the smaller movie theatres.

NEW STRENGTH IN THE SPRING

Nature Needs Aid in Making New Health-Giving Blood

In the spring the system needs a tonic. To be healthy you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it, and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid. You may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What you need in spring is a tonic medicine to put you right, and in all the world of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills actually make new rich red blood—your greatest need in spring. This new blood drives out the seeds of disease and makes easily tired men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Eugene Cadarette, Amherstburg, Ont., says: "I suffered for a long time from dizziness, pain in the back and sick headache, and nothing I took did me any good until I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These cured me after taking six boxes and I now feel better than ever I did in my life. I had fallen off in weight to 92 pounds, and after taking the Pills I had increased to 100 pounds."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or can be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Self-Denial Week From May 13 to 20

Owing to War Work Salvation Army will Make a Special Effort This Year

The Salvation Army's annual self-denial week will be held from May 13th to 20th inclusive, and this year will be a greater effort than ever. During this year of the war it is pointed out that the Army has given largely of its members to battalions in all parts of the Empire, and, besides, has established fifteen homes for soldiers and sailors at the chief naval and military centres. These buildings are equipped with beds, baths, libraries, recreation and other rooms. Army officers are working among the troops at the bases and in the camps, visiting hospitals, both in England and on the Continent. Three Salvation Army units of five motor ambulance cars for the conveyance of the wounded to the field hospitals are also rendering excellent service. This is only one phase, although a new one, of the many branches of the Army work for the general good. The members of the local corps not only make their own denials, but seek the assistance of citizens who desire to help the many works in which the Army is engaged.

DEATH OF LIEUT. COL. GREENWOOD

Former Resident of Peterborough Passes Away in France

TORONTO, May 6.—A cable was received yesterday by J. T. Greenwood, of 203 Robert street, announcing the death of his only brother, Lieut.-Col. H. S. Greenwood.

The deceased had been in ill-health for some months, and had been taken to the south of France to recuperate. He was a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and a civil engineer. He had seen active service in South Africa, and was first taken ill while engaged at the War Office in London.

Lieut.-Col. Greenwood for many years resided in Peterborough and his many friends here will be sorry to hear of his death.

Mrs. Fitzgerald's Will To Be Proved

Two Claimants Say Deceased Promised to Make Them Beneficiaries

An interesting and somewhat involved case has arisen out of certain claims made by Mr. Wm. J. Sisson of Smith and Mrs. C. A. Church of Barrie, against the estate of the late Mrs. T. E. Fitzgerald. Mr. Sisson, a nephew of the deceased, states that she promised to make him a beneficiary in her will if he would move into the city and take care of her. This, he says, he did. Later, the will which had been drawn up including Mr. Sisson was withdrawn and a new one made out in favour of Mrs. Church, who had sold her home in Barrie and had come to Peterborough, succeeding Mr. Sisson in attending to Mrs. Fitzgerald. After a time, Mrs. Church was displaced and the second will withdrawn and replaced with a third, in which Mrs. Fitzgerald bequeathed her estate, valued at about $7,000, to All Saints' church. Mr. E. L. Goodwill and Mr. Jas. Edgar were made executors. This morning Judge Huycke gave an order for procedure which means that the witnesses to the will shall be called upon to formally testify as to the circumstances under which it was made. Also the claimants were directed to file a full statement of their claims for the purpose of ascertaining whether they are valid or not. Mr. Goodwill is representing the executors, who are thus made plaintiffs, Mr. E. H. D. Hall is representing Mr. Sisson, Mr. Joseph Wearing is acting for Mrs. Church, both claimants being defendants. Mr. F. D. Kerr is solicitor for All Saints' church, which becomes an intervener in the case, supporting the executors. The proving of the will and filing of claims will be made in the Surrogate Court in the near future.

Writ Has Been Issued

Mrs. Louisa Tully and Miss Edith Tully of Smith Township Named as Defendants in Civil Action

A writ for two thousand dollars has been issued by the legal firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, against Mrs. Louisa Tully and Miss Edith Tully of Smith Township, on behalf of Evelyn Glover, the eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. Robert Glover, East City. In addition to the above mentioned sum, one hundred and five dollars is claimed for medical attention, thirty-five dollars for hospital treatment and costs. The amount asked for, exclusive of costs, amount to $2,137.

It will be remembered that Evelyn Glover had both her feet frozen while in the employ of the Tullys. The latter were convicted of ill treatment and were each fined forty dollars and costs by County Police Magistrate Langley.

Chandos Man Will Be Examined

Patrick Johnston of Chandos appeared before Magistrate Langley in the County Police Court, this morning, charged with insanity. An adjournment was made until Thursday morning next and a medical examination of him was ordered to be made by Dr. Greer and Dr. Ed. E. Harvey.

Ford

Average first year depreciation of the Ford car is $125 as against $250 to $400 for practically any of the lower priced cars

It is difficult to set any definite figure for the depreciation of an automobile. So much depends on the condition of the individual car at the end of the season.

The average price paid for used cars in the $1000-or-less class at any time during the first year is about $250 to $400 less than the first cost. But the average used Ford sells very quickly for $125 less than the purchase price.

Compare the Ford depreciation cost of about $10 a month with the probable $30 or more a month that the other kind will cost you. Which is the better investment?

Of the New Westminster amateur lacrosse team that succeeded in taking the Mann Cup away from Vancouver last year, nine of the twelve are in khaki. The league, which was composed of Vancouver, Victoria and Westminster has decided to postpone operations until after the war.

The Toronto News says; When one loks over the list of men who have been killed in action or badly wounded and sees the names of champion players in all branches of sport, who were right out in front it makes one feel that the pastimes of this country are well worth while. Allan Davidson, and George Richardson one of the greatest professional hockey player in the game and the other the greatest amateur at the same sport, went down fighting to the finish, while numbers of the best-known rugby, rowing, soccer and lacrosse experts are daily mentioned in the casualty lists. They were champion players at home in different lines of sport and they were greater champions when it came to playing the greatest game of all.

It has been proposed to hold a drum head church service in Central Park to-morrow morning for the 93rd Battalion, but owing to the large number of men on leave the service has been postponed and the usual denominational church parades will be held.

The Peterborough Lacrosse club hereby challenge the 93rd Battalion to a game of lacrosse to take place at the field day to be held by the 93rd Battalion.

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I noticed by last night's Examiner that Police Magistrate Dumble lost a dog by poisoning. The first idea would be to blame some man who had suffered justice, or as he would put it, injustice, at Mr. Dumble's hands. But there is, according to my experience, some other reason. If the poisoned dog was as great a nuisance as I have found dogs, I do not wonder he was dosed. I have been a year in Canada almost and this spring is my first. I tidied up my nice little open lawn and prepared a border for flowers. Next morning I saw five dogs in a pack, large and small, tearing about my lawn, and playing havoc with my flower border. If I could have introduced poison into the system of these canines at the moment, I would have done so. I never was so disgusted with a small annoyance as over this. In the States, where I came from dogs are not allowed to run at large; but in Peterborough, dogs seem to have more liberty than is good for citizens who pay taxes. It seems to me dogs should be kept under control and not be allowed to become a public nuisance. We are talking of a play ground for children; why not have a play ground for dogs, other than people's flower plots—say in some vacant lot, three feet or so underground? If people must keep dogs let them keep them at home, so that they can get the full benefit.

Yours, etc.,
"YANKEE".

JAWS GROW TOGETHER.

William Blanton, a labourer of Ashland, Ky., has gone to Louisville, Ky., where he will undergo an operation. Blanton's jaws are grown together so closely that he is unable to eat any solid food other than that which he can force through his teeth. For over seventeen years nothing as large as a grain of rice has entered his stomach, yet he has worked and supported a widowed mother.

A local dentist extracted his eleven teeth and raised enough money to pay his way to Louisville, where he will be operated on. So far as is known, Blanton's affliction is the only one known of its kind.

ONE YEAR AGO TO-MORROW

The Lusitania was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine on May 7, 1915, just one year ago. By this dastardly act the Teutonic pirates served notice on the world that so far as they were concerned the rules of civilized warfare were suspended, and finally aroused neutral opinion to the true meaning of German kultur in a way that even the ravaging of Belgium had not done.

Out of a total on board of over 2,000, only 764 were saved when the ship went down. The Lusitania was only a few miles off Old Kinsale Head when she was torpedoed, but sank so rapidly (in thirty minutes) that to rescue more of the crew and passengers was impossible.

Many parts of Ontario and of Canada suffered, but Toronto probably sustained the greatest loss.

To The Women of Peterborough

Have you a "Playgrounds Waste Savings Bag" hanging up in some convenient corner of your home? We hope you have, and that you are getting it well filled. The playgrounds committee will not collect until after the 24th of May, as its members are old-fashioned enough to remember it is not safe for the kiddies to discard their winter underwear until that date. Put all worn-out underwear, stockings, flannelette skirts, etc., etc., in your bag; also all pieces from those little dainty cotton and gingham dresses you are having made for summer wear. Worn-out work shirts, collars, trousers; anything and everything that we need to burn in the days before the war.

This war is providing many textbooks not formerly in the curriculum of the nations. We who are so highly favoured in Canada should begin to practice this one of waste-saving. If our women will respond heartily to this appeal from the playgrounds committee we hope to show a splendid result from our united efforts during the holiday months.

TENNIS

A meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association is called for Monday night at the Bowling Green, at 7.15 o'clock. All the members are requested to be present and others intending to join.

BASEBALL

Yesterday afternoon, at the King Edward School grounds, a very interesting game of baseball in the Public School Senior League was played between the Queen Mary and King Edward teams. The victorious King Edward boys were ahead in every innings, the final score being King Edward 14, Queen Mary 0. The batteries were: King Edward, Taylor, Cunningham and Hunt; for Queen Mary, Green, Pethick and Patterson and Thirtebeck.

Mr. Milton Frost umpired the game in his usual efficient and satisfactory manner.

FAMOUS BACK'S ESCAPE.

Footballers generally will join in the congratulations extended to Barnsley's popular captain, Richard Downs, upon his recent providential escape. The famous back went "somewhere north" to attend the funeral of his father. Fortunately Downs decided to adhere to his arrangements to return to Barnsley, otherwise, as he subsequently learnt, he might have been included amongst the victims resultant upon the visit of hostile aircraft. The condition of the house where Downs would have passed the night has caused him to feel very grateful that he made the return journey at the time he did.

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

HYDRO WILL CONTROL TRENT VALLEY SYSTEM

Ontario Government Now Takes Step Liberals Persistently Urged in Closing Hours of Legislature—Hon. Mr. Ferguson Makes Important Announcement

The Ontario government has passed an order in Council transferring the control and operation of the Trent Valley power undertaking to the Provincial Hydro-electric Commission. Hon. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, who was in charge of the Seymour legislation which came up in the closing day of the Legislature, interviewed on the subject remarked, as he had said in the House, it had been the Government's intention to hand the proposition over to the Hydro. The reason why this was not specifically set forth in the bill was because it was considered complicated, matters might have to be dealt with and it was necessary to have the widest possible legislation.

When the bill was dicussed in the House criticism was offered by the Liberals to clause 6 of the bill, which authorized the Government to turn over all or any part of the rights, powers, properties, franchises, privileges, plant or other assets of the Seymour Power Falls Company to any Commission, municipal corporation, municipal commission, company, corporation, firm or individual. It was also objected by the Opposition that there was absolutely no reason why section 7 should not provide for operation of the undertaking by the Hydro Commission instead of by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council or their nominee.

Many Newspapers Disapprove Reply

Special to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, May 6.—A poll of 132 representative American newspapers compiled here to-day by the New York Times from editorial comment reveals that 74 disapprove the reply of Germany to President Wilson's submarine note, 28 approve, and 30 are noncommittal. In the Times' poll the eastern portion of the South is a trifle more hostile to the reply than any other section. The Sun's deduction from the editorial comment of the nation is that most of the papers deem the President's demands "substantially met."

LONDON, May 6.—The afternoon newspapers were even more bitter in their denunciation of the German reply than were the morning.

"Without renouncing her policy of assassination, Germany virtually defies President Wilson to enforce his solemnly defined alternative," said the Pall Mall Gazette.

"The note is partly an evasion, partly a refusal, and partly an invitation of unneutral action," said the Evening Standard. "It in no wise meets the President's demands."

WASHINGTON, May 6.—German Ambassador Von Bernstorff and his staff are invited to a Lusitania memorial meeting to be held at the Carnegie Hall, New York, to-morrow night, under the direction of the American Rights Committee.

Seats of honour upon the platform have been reserved for the members of the German Embassy, the invitation reads.

A CORRECTION.

With all respect to Mr. Jos. Picard a reader of the Examiner claims he is in the wrong regarding his snow storm of ten years ago, on May 4th. The snow storm to which he refers occurred on May 4, 1907 (nine years ago). It amounted to over six inches and necessitated the bringing into use again of the city snow plows. As late as the 28th of that month there was a fall of snow of half an inch.

Sgt. Trynor, V.C. A Second O'Leary Tells His Story

Won the Victoria Cross During the Present War With the Famous Black Watch

MONTREAL, May 6.—Sergt. John H. Trynor, V.C., the Sergt. Michael O'Leary of New Brunswick, has just left after a brief visit.

He won the Victoria Cross during the present war, with the famous Black Watch, and has, as well, a South African medal with four clasps.

Trynor was born in New Brunswick and at the age of three was removed to Maine with his parents. Shortly after the outbreak of the war he left his home in Maine, accompanied by several former Canadians and enlisted.

He was a member of the engineer corps and went through the battle of the Marne and other terrible engagements.

His story of how he won the coveted cross is as follows:

"It was a bright day, and I was in charge of eleven men. We were sending a sap toward the German lines, which were some 480 yards away.

"All went well at first, and we were about half way across 'No Man's Land' when suddenly a big high-explosive shell from one of the German batteries fell short and exploded directly over the end of our sap. In an instant we were tangled up, and uncovered to the German rifle fire.

"I was the only man in the bunch who could navigate. I had my left arm badly injured, but I managed to get a man on my back and lug him into our trenches. I wasn't the weak-looking man you see me now. I weighed 180 pounds then and was as strong as a horse.

"Well, when I got to our own trenches there lay ten poor devils behind me, helpless under the fire of the German rifles. I started back and got a second one on my back; the Germans brought a heavy fire to bear upon us. We got in, but on getting into my own trench I found that the man on my back had been shot while I was carrying him. Well, to make a long story short, I made ten trips and brought in all the fellows who were out there, but in the ten trips the Germans got me eight times."

Sergt. Trynor's left arm is a mass of scars where a shell splinter caught him. He wears a silver plate in his head where his skull had been fractured. Twice was he shot in the abdomen and once through the chest. The third finger of the right hand was also shot off. A second man was killed on his back while he was rescuing his comrades, and a third shot through the foot.

MOTOR MET MOTOR.

Wm. Kidd, in a motor vehicle, collided with the automobile of Joseph M. Lea at the corner of Avenue Road and Heath Street, last October. Mr. Kidd sued for damages, and was awarded $500 by Judge Denton. The Appellate Division to-day allows the appeal of Mr. Lea and dismisses the action. The evidence showed that Mr. Lea had the right of way, and that Mr. Kidd, travelling at twelve miles an hour, thought he could get across in front of the automobile.

French Soldiers Spare Life of German Peasant

Mr. R. Hercod, in the International Rundschau, of Zurich, tells a touching incident of a scene on the western front which gives credit to the magnanimity of the French soldiers.

A French instructor who is acting as a telephone operator in the trenches in Northern France tells the story. This telephone operator states that recently he was in an underground fortified position occupied by a French patrol. This was cleverly hidden from the enemy's trenches, whose barbed wire entanglements were only a short distance away.

"I noticed that two soldiers were speaking in low tones, and they showed considerable excitement," says the writer. "I caught the following sentences:

"'You shoot him,' said the first."

"'I haven't the heart to do it,' said the second. He appears to be an elderly man, and no doubt he has a family. You do ahead and do it.'"

"'No, I can't, it goes against me. It would be murder.'"

"I approached and wondered what the conversation meant. Just then I noticed a German soldier out there in the open quietly gathering pieces of wood that were lying about near the barbed wire. He evidently did not know of his position, or thought, perhaps, that we had abandoned it. Then I knew what the two soldiers were talking about.

"'You must know,' I said to them, 'that if you do not shoot him and spare his life you may perhaps be in a position any time where he would not hesitate to shoot you if he had the opportunity.'"

"'Yes, we know that,' replied one of them, 'but we cannot bring ourselves to do it; we do not want to be murderers. Why don't you do it?'

"I at once got ready and took aim at the man, who was still gathering wood with no thought of danger. Somehow,' I, too, hesitated. For several seconds I stood ready to fire, but I could not.

"'It's no use,' I said. 'I have not the heart either.'".

"And we stood here still watching the German gathering his wood. When he had gathered a good armful he slowly went back to his trench and disappeared, never knowing how his life was spared."

WOMEN ARE BLAMED.

Held Responsible for American Animosity to Germany.

London, May 6.—The Daily Express quotes the following from the Rheinisch-Westfaelische Zeitung:

"The real secret of American animosity against Germany is to be sought in the overweening power of women in the United States. It has long been considered the correct thing in America to talk about England as the mother country of the partisans of women's rights, and of 'isms' in general.

"The men with long hair and the women with short hair felt that their false gods were in danger, and that a victorious Germany, with its manly men and feminine women, would make short work of all these 'isms.' Where would room be found for feminists, Socialists and pacifists were the world to be ruled in accordance with the laws of thoroughness or order of German discipline, and, above all, were real strength and virility to give the tone to and lay down the law for nations?"

FRENCH STILL HOLD THE SUMMIT ON HILL NUMBER 304

Violent Fighting Is Reported On West Bank of the Meuse

German Attack Yesterday Prelude to Fourth Great Offensive Against Verdun

Fighting on the West Bank of the Meuse Attained Great Violence Yesterday---German Objective is to Force Evacuation of Hill 304.

PARIS, May 8.—French military critics declared to-day that the German attack yesterday is the prelude to the fourth great offensive against Verdun. The fighting on the west bank of the Meuse, northwest of Verdun, attained the greatest violence yesterday. Repulsed in their attempts to storm and capture the summit of Hill 304, the Germans resorted to a flanking attack on the French right, which yielded some results. The German objective apparently is to force the evacuation of Hill 304, by threatening to surround the position.

Officially Denied That British Sub. Was Sunk By German Ship

PARIS, May 8.—French still hold the summit on Hill 304, although they were forced to evacuate some trenches.

TORONTO, May 8.—Pine Plain, Simcoe County, ten miles from Barrie, has been selected as a new training ground for troops. Twenty thousand acres will be fitted up for the reception of troops by June first.

LONDON, May 8.—It is officially denied that the British submarine E-31 was sunk by a German ship. It is feared two aeroplanes have been lost.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Two German submarines of the latest type, convoyed by armed auxiliary cruisers, are said to be in the Mid-Atlantic.

PARIS, May 8.—General Petain has been promoted to be Commander-in-Chief of the French armies. He is succeded at Verdun by General Nivelle.

OTTAWA, May 8.—Two Toronto aviators' names appear in the casualty list. One is killed, the other is missing.

LONDON, May 8.—Right Hon. Lewis Harcourt is to succeed Augustine Birrell as Chief Secretary for Ireland.

DOCTOR SAYS

Take Iron For Your Blood, Phosphorous For Your Nerves

People have been suffering untold agony for years doctoring for their nerves when there real trouble was, want of phosphorus in their system.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorus is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your nerves once again. Without phosphoryl the system becomes weakened, your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One is taking medicine for kidney trouble another is taking laxative every night, others taking poisonous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twitching nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never ailed you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Bonized Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good ice cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well; eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables. Fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well, sleep well, work well, digest well. As we are here only for a short stay so why not be healthy, strong, vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Bonized Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Bonized Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every case. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city at either of F. C. Webber's stores at 50c a box.

POLES CELEBRATE AFTER 101 YEARS

BERLIN, May 8, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—Despatches from Warsaw to the Overseas News Agency to-day report a notable celebration there of the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the granting of the Polish constitution by King Stanislaus Augustus.

The celebration, which took place on May 3, was begun with high mass at the Johannes Cathedral, at which Archbishop Kokovsky officiated, and was continued with a civic procession in which about two hundred and fifty thousand persons participated, according to the news agency advices, the line of march leading through the principal streets of the city and the parade continuing for five hours.

Catholic and Protestant clergymen and Jewish rabbis, together with veterans of the revolution of 1863, participated in the demonstration, which was concluded in the late afternoon, with public meetings held in ninety-six places throughout the city. The principal meeting was at the Philharmonic Hall, where there were speeches by M. Lemticky, a member of the Duma, and others.

In all the towns of Poland under German occupation similar celebrations wer held. "This was the first time since 1815 that the Poles had been permitted to celebrate the anniversary," says the news agency report. "Poles who attempted such a celebration were arrested and sent to Siberia. A deputation from a committee thanked Governor-General von Dessler for the permission he had given to hold the celebration."

BULLDOG SAFEST BANK MESSENGER

SHIPPENBURG, Pa., May 8. — Bill, a bulldog with a twisted tail, and a straight conscience, has become the bank messenger for the Sherman Hotel, of this city. He is minding his own business, and is getting along just so. Thousands of persons who would be willing to pet him or anything he is carrying have learned to circle him in a wide detour when he is on the way to the homestead of all evil.

John C. McGraw, proprietor of the hotel, was romping to the bank recently when Bill unexpectedly trotted alongside. Mr. McGraw put the bankbook, bills and checks into his dog's mouth and let him run ahead, paying no more attention to him than he would to the explosion of three hundred tons of dynamite. Arriving at the bank, Bill ran up to the cashier, stood on his hind legs, basked once through the currency, and awaited action by the proper authorities.

The following day Mr. Mcraw sent the dog to the bank with one of the smallest deposits ever noticed en route through Shippensburg, and as the trip was successful large sums are now intrusted to Bill.

Stains in table linen are easily removed by plunging the articles in pure boiling water. The addition of soap or soda would have the effect of fixing the stain.

SICK BABY NO CHATTEL.

Doctors Carry Away Child Despite Woman's Protest.

A child with measles does not constitute a lawful chattel, it was decided by Dr. Abraham Weinberg and Dr. Frank Hurwitt, physicians employed by the Kansas City Health Department. As a result, Robert Lee Hickman, eight months old, was taken to the general hospital to have a fair chance of recovery.

The Hickman baby was held as a security for a $25 bill for the baby's care, the mother having left him with a woman while she worked. Dr. Weinberg, to whom the matter was reported, took the ambulance, and in spite of protests carried the baby to the hospital.

GIRL DEAD FOR 20 MINUTES

Girl Revived by Lung Motor, Says She was "Floating Away."

DETROIT, May 8.—For twenty minutes Myrtle Barton lay dead in Receiving Hospital; dead so far as science could determine.

Then, by the aid of the lung motor, life came back to her.

"Where wer you for those twenty minutes?" she was asked.

"I don't know. Floating away—somewhere," she answered.

Every known device to detect a spark of life in the girl's body was used without discovering the slightest sign of animation while she lay still and cold.

But life came back to her—after 20 minutes. It is an unusual case.

Tuesday night, she drank an ounce or more of poison. Why? Well, she is young pretty and — a woman. So there should be no surprise when she said "Perhaps I did it because of love."

Myrtle bought the drug on the plea that she wanted to clean a dress. She drank it in her room and the landlady discovered her some time later.

For 20 minutes she lay on the operating table, while the lung motor gave out its low, steady, panting wheeze.

"She is dead," said an interne.

"Perhaps," said Superintendent Dretaks. "Keep on with the motor."

They touched her pulse every moment. It was lifeless and the flesh was cold and had the strange, dry smoothness of the dead. A mirror held to her mouth showed not even the faintest blur. The eyelids were raised from time to time, but the eyes were dull.

A door slammed in one of the houses across the alley and the sound may have been a trumpet to the wandering spark we call life. For faintly ther came a throb, a fluttering twitch at the wrist. The room echoed with an "ah-h" of pleasure from the nurses and doctors. The pulse grew stronger, the breath began to come slowly, but surely. The girl's head moved to avoid the pressure of the lung motor's weight. She was alive.

SAYS HUSBAND SEIZED GIFT.

Woman Pursues Men She Accuses of Attacking Her to Recover Wedding Present.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Having failed to return her husband's wedding gift, a lavalliere, Mrs. Alice Reynolds, of No. 1130 Clay avenue, said she was attacked by him and another man as she was about to enter a theatre in Little Herald square, 149th street, the Bronx.

"While my husband held me," she said to the police, "the man with him tore the lavalliere off my neck and then both ran."

Mrs. Reynolds, who is about twenty-two years old, was seen pursuing two men through the square and Detectives Hasslett and Hopper joined her. They caught a man who said he was Harry McPherson, of No. 270 East 161st street, where Mrs. Reynolds said her husband, Charles Reynolds, was living.

SYDNEY, Australia, May 8.—It is estimated that Australia, with a population of 5,000,000 will be paying her soldiers in June at the rate of more than $185,000,000 per annum, plus the cost of maintenance, transport, equipment and waste. This is exclusive of liberal pensions and allowances. The calculation is based on a force of 275,000.

Violent Bombardment In Region of Hill 304 North-west of Verdun

Russians Occupy More Positions in the Direction of Bagdad ---Allied Transport Struck a Mine in Mediterranean

PARIS, May 8.—Yesterday afternoon's official statement says a violent bombardment in the region of Hill 304, northwest of Verdun, continued through Saturday night. There was no resumption of infantry fighting. About twenty French captive balloons broke away from their mooring in a wind squall. Most of the observers were able to descend.

BERLIN, May 8.—Admiralty announced yesterday that the British submarine E-31 was sunk by a German warship off the west coast of Denmark, May 5th.

EL PASO, Texas, May 8.—Patrol of American soldiers at Glen Springs, Texas, was almost wiped out in the said of Villista bandits across the border Friday night.

BERLIN, May 8.—Despatches from Corfu say an Allied transport struck a mine in the Mediterranean late in April with a loss of about 600 Russian soldiers.

LONDON, May 8.—Advices from Salonika state that the crew of the Zeppelin brought down yesterday have been found, and that four officers and eight men have been made prisoners.

PARIS, May 8.—Saturday night's official statement reports a very violent bombardment west of the Meuse and in the region of Hill 304, but no infantry engagements.

PETROGRAD, May 8.—Russian troops attacked the Turks with the bayonet and occupied more positions in the direction of Bagdad.

German Dye Firms Are Combining To Protect Interests

BERLIN, via London, May 8. — Any countries that are counting on either obtaining any part of Germany's aniline dye trade or making themselves independent of Germany, as regards dyes, must expect a bitter struggle after the war.

This is indicated by the action of all the leading chemical concerns in Germany making analine colours in forming a coalition for the protection of their mutual interests. Impulse has been given to this scheme by a realisation that certain foreign governments either are doing all that is possible to encourage the making of analine dyes in their own countries by subsidies or increased tariffs or other protectitive laws, and that further measures of a similar nature are expected to follow.

A further factor in the present loss of almost the entire foreign market, which the Germans dominated before the war. The new coalition will adopt every possible means to increase the efficiency of the German aniline manufacturers and improve the quality of the dyes in order that foreign competition may be overcome. The members of the coalition will co-operate in obtaining protective laws and will exchange information of new processes of manufactire so that all may be in a position to meet competition advantageously.

Nearly all the members of the coalition increased their earnings during the last year and some of them increased their dividends despite the fact that foreign markets were closed to them.

MOURNING SISTERS STRANGELY GONE

NEW YORK, May 8.—The police of Brooklyn have been asked by John Muller, a wealthy provision dealer of No. 269 Menahan Street, that borough, to aid him in a search for his daughters, Anna and Mary, fifteen and nineteen years old, who disappeared mysteriously from hime on April 18. Except for a hastily scribbled Easter post card, mailed at Station W, Manhattan, on April 21, Mr. Muller has not heard from his children.

The young women left home on the morning of April 18 to hear mass in the Church of St. Barbara, Central Avenue and Bleecker Street, which they had been attending during the Lenten season. Both were very religious and since the death of their mother two months ago, had made daily trips to the Church.

When nightfall came and the girls failed to appear the father became distracted. He communicated by telephone with all of his friends to learn if they had seen his daughters. Then he appealed to the police and detectives of the Seventh Branch who were detailed to the case. To date they have not discovered the slightest clew.

Mr. Muller assured the detectives that his daughters had exemplary habits. He said they were never allowed to stay out nights and never were in the company of youths of their own age. They had little money at the time they left home, and it is not thought they could have strayed far.

Mary, the eldest, is described as being five feet five inches tall, weighs about one hundred and twenty-five pounds, has blue eyes and fair hair. Her sister, Anna, is a few inches shorter than Mary, and weighs about one hundred pounds. Both were dressed in deep mourning when they left home and both carried small handbags and prayer books.

Three boys, all under the age of ten, were carried under the arms of a husky policeman to a station house in Philadelphia last night, when they were found in an Italian Catholic Church trying to rob the poor box.

253 MEN, 5 NURSES FROM ONE CONGREGATION

Fort William, May 8.—The service in St. Andrew's church last Sunday evening will be long remembered by the eleven hundred people who witnessed the unveiling of the honour roll of those who had enlisted from the congregation for overseas service. This was performed by Colonel Machin of the 94th Batt., who also made an inspiring and appropriate address.

Mr. W. W. Scullion, the Clerk of the Session, read the list, which consisted of 253 names. The service was in the charge of the minister, Rev. J. A. Cranston. Already five of the number have made the supreme sacrifice, while some are prisoners in Germany, and others are in the hospitals wounded. The congregation is represented not only by the splendid body of men but also by five nursing sisters.

Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Jamaica, N. Y.—"I suffered greatly with my head and with backache, was weak, dizzy, nervous, with hot flashes and felt very miserable, as I was irregular for two years. One day when I was feeling unusually bad my sister-in-law came in and said, 'I wish you would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.' So I began taking it and I am now in good health and am cured. I took the Compound three times a day after meals, and on retiring at night. I always keep a bottle in the house."—Mrs. L. N. BUSHMAN, 86 Globe Ave., Jamaica, N.Y.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"Five outside the skipper an' me," was the reply, "an' I cal'late we'll fill her up in a day or so. Seven men can sail her like a witch, but they won't fill her hold very quick. She'll take fifteen hundred quintal easy, or I judge her wrong."

A prolonged whistle from outside interrupted the discussion, and one man going to the door announced that it had stopped raining. All hands got up and prepared to go back to work. Only Bijonah Tanner remained to buy some groceries from Boughton.

"Steamer's early to-day," said the storekeeper, glancing at his watch. "She's bringin' me a lot of salt from St. John's, and I guess I can get it into the shed to-night."

Having satisfied Tanner, he went out of the store the back way and left the captain alone filling his pipe. A short blast of the whistle told him that the steamer was tied up, and idly he lingered to see who had come to the island.

The passengers, to reach the King's Road, were obliged to go past the corner of the general store, and Bijonah stood on the low, wooden verandah, watching them.

Some two dozen had gone when his eye was attracted by a pale, thin youth in a light-gray suit and Panama hat. He thought nothing of him at first except to remark his clothes, but as he came within short vision Tanner gave a grunt of astonishment and bit through the reed stem of his cory-cob pipe.

He recognized the youth as the one he had seen in St. John's and had referred to as the secretary to the president of the Marine Insurance Company.

Instantly the old man's mind flashed back to what he had heard only a week before, which he had told Code.

He stood looking after the stranger as though spell-bound, his slow mind groping vainly for some explanation of his presence in Freakirk Head.

He felt instinctively that it must be in connection with the case of Code Schofield and the May, and his feeling was corroborated a moment later when, from behind the trunk of a big pine-tree, Nat Burns stepped forward and greeted the other. They had apparently met before, for they shook hands cordially and continued westward along the King's Road.

A few steps brought them opposite the gate to the Schofield cottage, and Bijonah following their motions like a hawk, saw Nat jerk his thumb in the direction of the house as they walked past.

That was enough for Tanner. He was convinced now that the insurance man had come to carry out the threat made in St. John's and that Nat Burns was more intimately connected with the scheme than he had at first supposed.

Bijonah set down his package of groceries on the counter inside and turned away toward the wharf where the Charming Lass was tied up for a final trimming. She already had her salt aboard and most of her provisions and was being given her final touches by Pete Ellinwood, Jimmie Thomas, and the other members of the crew that had signed on to sail in her.

Tanner hailed Ellinwood from the wharf and beckoned so frantically that the big man swarmed up the rigging to the dock as though he were going aloft to reef a topsail in a half a gale.

"Code's in a pile of trouble," said the old man, and went on briefly to narrate the whole circumstance of the insurance company's possible move. "That feller came on the steamer this afternoon, an' if he serves Code with the summons or attachment or whatever it is; it's my idee that the Lass will never round the Swallow tail for the Banks. Where is the boy?

"Went up to Castalia to see a couple of men who he thought he might get for the crew, but I don't think Burns or any one else knows it. He wanted to make the trip on the quiet an' get them without anybody's knowing it if he could. But what do you cal'late to do, Bige?"

"By the Great Snood, I don't knbw, declared Tanner helplessly.

"Wal," said Pete reassuringly, "you just let me handle this little trouble myself. We'll have the skipper safe an' clear if we have to commit murder to do it. Now, Bige, you just keep your mouth shut and don't worry no more. I'll do the rest."

Feeling the responsibility to be in capable hands and secretly glad to escape events that might be too much for his years, Captain Tanner walked back to the road, secured his package of groceries at the store, and made his way home to the widow Sprague's house.

For five minutes Pete Ellinwood lounged indolently against a spile, engrossed in thought. Then he put on his coat and crossed the King's Road to the Schofield cottage.

He had hardly opened the gate when a strange youth in a gray suit and Panama hat came out of the front door and down the path. Pete recognized the newcomer from St. John's, and the newcomer evidently recognized him.

"Ha! Captain Code Schofield, I presume," he announced, thrusting his hand nervously to his pocket and bringing out a fistful of papers. So eager and excited was he that, unnoticed, he dropped one flimsy sheet, many times folded, into the grass.

"No, I'm not Schofield," rumbled Ellinwood from the depths of his mighty chest. "Get along with you now!"

"Please accept service of this paper, Captain Schofield," said the other, extending a legal-looking document, and shrugging his shoulders as though to say that Pete's denial of identity was, of course, only natural, but could hardly be indulged.

"I'm not Schofield!" bellowed Pete, outraged. "My name's Ellinwood, an' anybody'll tell you so. I won't take youd durned paper. If you want Schofield find him."

The young man drew back, nonplused, but might have continued his attentions had not a passer-by come to Peter's rescue and sworn to his identity. Only then did the young lawyer—for he was that as well as private secretary—withdraw with short and grudged apologies.

Pete, growling to himself like a great bear, was starting forward to the house when his eye was caught by the folded paper that had dropped from the packet in the lawyer's hand. He stooped, picked it up, and, with a glance about, to prove that the other was out of sight, opened it.

As he read it his eyes widened and his jaw dropped with astonishment. Twice he slowly spelled out the words before him, and then, with a low whistle and a gigantic wink, thrust the paper carefully into his pocket and pinned the pocket.

"That will be news to the lad, sure enough," he said, continuing on his way toward the house.

The little orphan girl Josie admitted him. He found Mrs. Schofield on the verge of tears. She had just been through a long and painful interview with the newcomer, and had barely recovered from the shock of what he had to tell.

Code, since learning of what was in the air, had not told his mother, for he did not wish to alarm her unnecessarily, and was confident he would get away to the Banks before the slow-moving St. John firm took action.

Pete, smitten mightily by the distress of the comely middle-aged widow, melted to a misery of unexpressable tenderness and solicitude. In his words and actions of comfort he resembled a great, loving St. Bernard dog who had accidently knocked down a toddling child and is desirous of making amends. Ma Schofield took note of his desire to lighten her burden, and presently permitted it to be lightened.

Then they talked over the situation, and Pete finally said:

"I'm sending Jimmie Thomas down to Castalia in his motor dory to find Code. Of course, the skipper took his own dory, and we may meet him coming back. What we want to do is head him off an' keep him away from here. Now, there's no tellin' how long he might have to stay away, an' I've been figgerin' that perhaps it you was to take him a bundle of clothes it wouldn't go amiss."

"I'll do it," announced ma sturdily. "Just you tell Jimmie to wait a quarter of an hour and I'll be along. Now, Pete Ellinwood, listen here. What scheme have you got in your mind? I can see by your eyes that there is one."

"May!" cried Pete reproachfully. "How could I have anythin' in my mind without tellin' you?"

Nevertheless, when he walked out of the cottage door it was to chuckle enormously in his black beard and call himself names that he had to deceive May.

He called Jimmie Thomas up from the duties of the paint-pot and brush and gave him instructions as to what to do. They talked rapidly in low tones until Mrs. Schofield appeared, then Jimmie helped her into the motor dory and both men pushed off.

"I cal'late I'll have it all worked out when you come back, Jim," said Pete as the engine caught the spark and the dory moved away.

Mrs. Schofield turned around and fixed her sharp, blue eyes upon the giant ashore.

"Peter!" she cried. "I knew there was some scheme. When I get back—"

But the rest was lost, for distance had overcome her voice. Ellinwood stood and grinned benignly at his goddess. Then he slapped his thigh with an eleven-inch hand and made a noise with his mouth like a man chucking to his horse.

"Sprightly as a gal, she is," he allowed. "Dummed if she ain't!"

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, occasioned by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and unless the cause of the headache is removed, some serious trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is due to its success in first relieving, and then permanently curing the cause of the trouble.

Mrs. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B., writes: "Several years ago I was a constant sufferer from headache. I was all run down, and nothing seemed to do me any good. I read of Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial, and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ARS LONGA; VITA BREVIS.

All shapes that breathed or bloomed or stirred
In Stratford Street or Warwick Lane,
Flow'r, insect, human, beast, or bird,
Fell, long ago, to dust again.

Time has foreclosed on all the things
Men then called living, real, true;
Yet Shakespere's world of magic springs
Forever young, forever new.

Long buried from all pain and strife,
His bones lie, guarded by his curse;
While his own myriad-minded life
Goes pulsing deathless through his verse.

The oxlip that he used to know,
Wild thyme and nodding violet,
Perished three hundred years ago;
But on his page they blossom yet.

Anne Hathaway undreaming sleeps,
Remembered but because of him;
But Juliet loves, Cordelia weeps,
With passion ages cannot dim.

The tyrant Squire is but a shade,
Though Shallow still the law expounds;
And Dogberry, all undismayed
By death's wide havoc, plods his rounds.

What beefy burglar had not smiled,
If told that Ariel or Puck,
The dreamy poet's airborn child,
Would live when empire's hour had struck?

The tavern ashes long are cold;
No mulled sack there, no friendly bout;
Yet still we hear Dame Quickly scold
And burly Jack comes ruffling out.

Duke's crown and usurer's gaberdine
Lie on Time's heap, with laws, words, deeds;
In one Venetian justice-scene
The Jew still whets, while Portia pleads.

True Life mere humans cannot see;
In vain their pother, pomp, and din.
Only the Artist holds the key—
Can ope the door and let them in.

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR Backache, Rheumatism and Dropsy.

Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to try "Anuric." Send 10c. for trial package.

During digestion uric acid is absorbed into the system from meat eaten, and even from some vegetables. The poor kidneys get tired and backache begins. This is a good time to take "Anuric," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce for Kidney trouble and Backache. Neglected kidney trouble is responsible for many deaths, and Insurance Company examining doctors always test the water of an applicant before a policy will be issued. Have you ever set aside a bottle of water for twenty-four hours? A heavy sediment or settling sometimes indicates kidney trouble. The true nature and character of diseases, especially those of the kidneys and urinary organs, can often be determined by a careful chemical analysis and microscopical examination—this is done by expert chemists of the Medical Staff of the Invalids' Hotel. If you wish to know your condition send a sample of your water to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and describe your symptoms. It will be examined without any expense to you, and Doctor Pierce or his Staff of Assisting Physicians will inform you truthfully.

MEDIEVAL HOUSEWIVES.

Neither the good wife or Bath nor Griselda know what it was to take up and put down carpets; they spread rushes and sweet herbs on the floor instead when they expected company. Their table was literally a board of boards set on trestles and covered with a cloth. Barley and onion bread, bacon, boiled fish, capons, eggs, manchets with vast quantities of home-brewed ale or mead, and sometimes among the nobles, wines from the Levant covered the mediaeval tables. Food was not always plentiful in the homestead.

The choicest articles of furniture in the kitchen of the middle ages was the sideboard or court cupboard. It was usually richly carved and made with little compartments, in which small articles of plate could be placed. On the top the good mothers arranged for display the beakers, tankards, flagons, drinking horns, basins and porringers. On the shelves glistened the family plate, often of pewter, which was of value at that time. Beside them were the lesser utensils, the forks for "green ginger" the powder box for sprinkling green spices over the meats, the curious carving knives the clasp-knives, the spoons and that singular vessel called the "master cup".

WHEN TIBETAN BATHES

Soaks Himself for Hours, Removing Several Layers of Dirt.

Near the ancient wall across the road at Yatung, Tibet, there are some remarkable hot springs, the water in some cases registering boiling point.

Many Tibetans congregate around these springs to bathe, and the water, which is highly charged with sulphur, is considered specially efficacious in cases of skin disease.

Bathing is a simple proceeding on the part of the Tibetan. All that is considered necessary is to scoop out a depression in the deposit round any spring, and this, filled with water, makes the bath. A tent is sometimes thrown over it, and the whole family—men, women and children sit for hours in the steaming water, and they look a different colour after a prolonged immersion, the process removing several layers of dirt.

GOD'S SALVATION IS FOR ALL MEN

Church Is Blessed First, Then the World.

Scriptural Meaning of the Word Grace—The Grace of God Bringing Salvation First Provided During This Gospel Age—Natural Israel Under Law, Not Under Grace—God's Loving Plan for Man Arranged Ages Ago, But Long Kept Hidden—Blessings of God's Grace Effectively Only on Certain Conditions.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

LOWELL, Mass., May 7.—Pastor Russell gave a very interesting address here this evening. As usual he was heard with close attention. His text was, "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation for all men hath appeared." (Titus 2:11.) The Pastor said in part:

The word Grace is a term which is peculiar to this Gospel Age. As used in the Scriptures, it has the significance of unmerited favor. Whoever believes in the grace of God believes that he is privileged to have a favor that he does not merit. That which is merited would be justice; and it is not justice which we are receiving from the Lord, but mercy, favor.

To the nation of Israel God offered, through the Law Covenant, something peculiar to them—He gave them the privilege of coming into relationship with Himself. This privilege was not given to other nations. But God's favor was not extended to them upon the terms of grace. He offered Israel life upon condition of perfect obedience to the Law Covenant. (Leviticus 18:5.) But their endeavor to keep the Law merely demonstrated what the Apostle Paul and our Lord Jesus Christ point out; namely, the fact that no imperfect man can keep God's Law. (Romans 3:20; John 7:19.) The Bible explains why this is so. It is because God's Law is adapted to perfect men, not to the imperfect. Hence it is that the imperfect could never gain life under the Law Covenant. God does not purpose to have a Kingdom with imperfect subjects.

The Almighty Jehovah has made full arrangement that all who attain life everlasting shall be perfect. Here it is that the work of grace comes in. This grace of God was brought to us through our Lord Jesus Christ. It has appeared for all men, although it has not yet been manifested to all men; for the great majority have never yet heard of the grace of God in Christ our Redeemer. But it is for the benefit of all, "to be testified in due time." (1 Timothy 2: 5, 6.) As yet the grace of God has appeared only to those who have heard and received the Message of God "speaking peace through Jesus Christ." It appeared to the disciples of Jesus who followed Him when He was on earth. It has appeared to all those who have since then heard the Message and become His followers. To these the Master says, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

God's Grace Revealed to Believers.

The Christ, the Anointed of God, had been promised for many centuries. But until the time of the First Advent the grace of God had not appeared. For 4,128 years after Adam fell there was no grace manifested, only the Law and Justice. But when our Lord Jesus came, "herein was manifested the LOVE of God," as the Apostle declares. (1 John 4: 9, 10.) God had this Love all along, but it had not been manifested; for He wished mankind to learn a great lesson in regard to the effects of sin. He wished them to learn their own weaknesses and their need of Divine assistance. So He permitted them to take their own course of waywardness and sin, in order that they might see that it would result in depravity of mind, body, and morals; that it would lead them down the broad road to destruction.—Matthew 7: 13, 14.

If God had not intervened, had not provided a recovery, all mankind would have slipped down that broad road to eternal ruin and death—death, not eternal torture. God never provided eternal torture for anybody. A great mistake has been made regarding this matter. During the night of the Dark Ages people got the idea that God had purposed a devilish thing—that He had provided a way for the vast majority to slip down to an eternity of torment. Once born, they could not help themselves, unless they were of the Elect. But not so! As Bible students, we are finding that the Bible most positively and clearly declares that "the wages of sin is death"; that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die"; that the broad road leads to destruction.—Romans 6:23; Ezekiel 18:4, 20; 2 Thessalonians 1:9; Proverbs 2:22; Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6, 10.

The Justice of God has been manifested ever since the fall of man. The Power and the Wisdom of God are manifested in all His great works of creation, in the planetary systems, in the human body. But the Love of God, the Grace of God, had not been made manifest until our Lord Jesus came; and it is not manifested even yet to the whole world.

Revealment of Truth Gradual.

When our Lord came to earth to become the Messiah and to die for mankind, even His Apostles were slow to grasp the real import of His mission. (Luke 24: 25-27.) They could not comprehend that it was necessary for Him to die as a Ransom-price for Adam and his race. When He was crucified, they were sadly disappointed; for they had hoped that the Man Jesus would set up God's Kingdom upon earth, would deliver the Jews from the Roman yoke, and would use Israel for the blessing of the world. They hoped soon to reign with Jesus in His Kingdom. After His resurrection they understood much more clearly. But it was not until after Pentecost that they grasped the matter in full. Then they saw that He could not set up His Kingdom to bless the world until first He became the Redeemer of mankind by dying for them; and that they themselves could not reign with Him until they had first suffered with Him and died with Him.

The disciples then saw that as only one man—Adam—was sentenced to death—all others dying in him—so the death of only one man was necessary as a Ransom, that the whole world might be purchased back from death. (1 Corinthians 15: 21, 22; Romans 5: 12, 18.) The penalty for sin is death. Our Lord Jesus died, and thus laid down the sufficiency of price on behalf of the whole world. God had dealt with only the one man—Adam. Only one man had been sentenced—Adam. When Jesus died, therefore, He was the equivalent, or corresponding-price to Father Adam. His death fully offset the matter. It was sufficient to procure the release of the whole world; for the Whole world was under condemnation, under the curse. Through the one man sin had entered the world. Therefore the death of the Man Christ Jesus furnished the price sufficient to ransom Adam and all his race.

Such is the beautiful picture that God gives us in His Word—the beautiful Story of the operation of His grace toward man. The philosophy of God's great Plan is indeed clearer to-day than before. Before the fulfilment of all its parts is at hand. The more we study the wonderful Plan of God for human salvation, the more we grasp its fulness, the more are we in love with the glorious character of our Heavenly Father. As we see its lengths, breadths, heights, and depths, we are truly "lost in wonder, love, and praise."

Operation of God's Grace.

As we have just said, this grace of God has as yet appeared only to a few, a "little flock." But the revelation of His grace to these does not mean that God will overlook all their sins and imperfections, call them to Himself and give them all His gracious promises, just as they are by nature. The grace of God does not operate in that way. There has been a Grace Fund provided in the death of Christ, sufficient not only for the sins and imperfections of this class, but for the whole world. But God has His own arrangement as to how the merit of Jesus' death is to be applied.

Thus far the death of Christ has only opened up the "narrow way" for the Church, and provided for their cleansing. The Lord is now seeking those who have the courage and the strength to climb this rugged pathway. (Luke 13:24.) All the grace of God now manifested is in this narrow way. Of course, the world are recipients of God's unmerited favor in the sense that He causes the sun to shine upon the evil and the good, and sends His rain upon the just and the unjust. He treats the whole world graciously; but He is receiving none into His favor now except those who have entered the strait gate and the narrow way.

God has not sent His Message of Grace to the heathen nations save to a very limited degree. It was first sent to the Jews, and took out from amongst them the "Israelites indeed." Then the nation of Israel was set aside and left in the dark regarding the Message of the Gospel Age. God then opened the door of opportunity to the Gentiles, sending the Gospel principally to the civilized nations of Europe and later to America. He knew what parts of the world would be most fruitful as respected His present Message.

The Apostle Paul explains why it is that all mankind do not hear the Message. "The god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." (2 Corinthians 4:4.) Even in the so-called civilized nations, the great majority have no ears to hear the Message of God's grace: for they are under the same blinding influences. Only here and there is there a truly hearing ear. This class God is now taking out of the world to be a people for His name—"a peculiar people, zealous of good works."—Acts 15: 13-17; Titus 2: 14.

Some who for a time seem not to heed the Message come later on to have a hearing ear. Perhaps something has occurred that changes the current of thought and purpose. To-day there are many who have an ear to hear who did not have it a few years ago. The great European war has brought many people to their senses. They are listening now and asking, "What does this war mean?" Others have been sobered and set to thinking by severe afflictions. Some have lost friends whom they almost idolized. But these sorrows and sudden awakenings have proved to be their greatest blessings; for by these experiences their hearts have been turned to the Lord.

Meaning of the Name Christian.

It is only with this peculiar people that the Lord is now dealing. The merit of Christ has as yet been applied only for these. Some may ask, "Do you mean that good, moral people, honest in their business and clean in their lives, are not Christians unless they are walking in this narrow way of self-sacrifice?" Yes, we answer. Unless they have taken the definite pathway marked out by our Lord Jesus, they are not walking in His steps. (Matthew 16:24,) Hence they are not Christians; for a Christian is a follower of Christ. To none others than the followers of the Master has God's grace come.

As others have watched God's dealings with His own people, they may have learned lessons of morality and obedience. Perhaps they have learned that fire burns, that sin brings punishment, and so have learned to walk decently and honestly; but they are still in the broad road. The only way to get out of that broad road is to get into the narrow way; and they get into the narrow way by accepting Jesus Christ as their Saviour and making a full consecration of their wills and of their lives to God.

After one has entered the narrow way, there is still more for the grace of God to do for him. After one has come into Christ he is a New Creature. Of itself this New Creature needs no grace. But this new "mind of Christ" must tabernacle in an imperfect earthly body, which needs continual cleansing from earthly defilements. The New Creature must use all the force of the new will to control the thoughts, words, and actions of the mortal body in order to serve and glorify God properly. But while he is in the imperfect flesh he cannot perform perfect deeds, even as the best musician cannot render a perfect melody on a very imperfect instrument.

As the Apostle says, "Ye cannot do the things that ye would." (Galatians 5:17.) But we are to lift up the measure of our ability, by Divine assistance. If we do this, we are reckoned perfect, through the imputed merit of Christ. This is where the grace of God comes in, after we have become disciples of our Lord Jesus. The Lord has arranged that if we are overtaken in a fault we are to go to the Throne of Heavenly Grace to obtain mercy and help for every time of need.

As we apply daily for forgiveness for our unwitting transgressions, the blood of Christ keeps us cleansed. If we have not willingly co-operated in the sin, God will freely forgive us. If we have yielded our will to any extent, we must suffer stripes proportionate to the degree of wilfulness; for God will not cover wilful sins with Christ's merit. Even wilful sin in a child of God would mean up such a one the Second Death. So we see the responsibility resting upon each one who has become a member of the Body of Christ. He must make good or lose life altogether. This is a very solemn thought.

The true Christian learns valuable lessons from his mistakes, and gradually grows strong in the Lord. As in his daily experiences he notes the loving providences of God, his faith is increased, and his love deepened. Appreciating more and more his own weaknesses, he learns not to trust in self, but in the Lord alone. He gains greater control over his natural infirmities of character, and thus is gradually transformed into the likeness of Christ. Thus "the grace of God that bringeth salvation" is made applicable to him.

Riches of Divine Grace.

This salvation has not yet been brought to the children of God, however. As yet they are "saved by hope" only. (Romans 8:24.) We are not yet fully delivered. When we receive our new bodies and are freed from all imperfection, we shall be saved in the complete sense. The Apostle Peter speaks of this salvation as "the grace which is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." (1 Peter 1:13.) So it was still future in the Apostle's day. But we believe that to-day we are very near to the revelation of Jesus Christ, and that the last members of the Body of Christ will soon be with Him in glory. As they lay down their consecrated lives in death they "will be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye"; for "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Corinthians 15:50-54.

This salvation we could never get of ourselves. We receive it only through the grace, mercy, and favor of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Whoever becomes a member of the glorified Church, the Bride of Christ, becomes a joint-heir with our Lord "to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, that fadeth not away."—1 Peter 1:4; Romans 8:17.

But the grace of God only begins with the Church. Just as soon as these are glorified with their Lord and Head, the narrow way will be out of commission at once; and another way will be opened up—the Highway of Holiness, upon which men shall walk in the glorious New Age soon to be ushered in. (Isaiah 35: 5-10.) This great Highway will lead up to perfection of human nature; for the blessing to the world will not be a change of nature, as with the Church, but will be the attainment of perfect human life and an Edenic earth.

The redeemed of the earth shall walk upon this great Highway, which shall lead to life everlasting upon the earthly plane. But only the willingly obedient shall walk up this Highway. The wilfully disobedient shall be destroyed. (Acts 3: 19-23.) Oh, the grace of God is a marvelous thing! The grace that bringeth salvation to the entire fallen race, giving each member thereof a full individual opportunity to attain life everlasting!

The Work of the Kingdom.

During the New Dispensation our Lord Jesus Christ will be the great Mediator for the world. He is not the Mediator for the Church, but their Advocate. But for a thousand years He will mediate for the world, and the Church, His Bride, will be associated with Him in all His great work for man's uplift. (Revelation 22:17.) He will set up His Kingdom over all those whom He has redeemed, with His precious blood. Every step that men make in the right direction will bring them nearer, nearer to salvation. At the close of the Age, when they shall have attained human perfection, they will have salvation in full. Then they will be turned over to Jehovah for a full and final testing, as was Adam when he was perfect. Those who stand the test, which all will be able to stand if they so desire, will be granted life everlasting.—1 Corinthians 15:20-28; Psalm 72; Isaiah 11: 1-9.

THAT MUCH DISCUSSED FUSE—THE SMALL SPARK WHICH STARTED THE PRESENT BIG ENQUIRY AT OTTAWA—Five thousand dollars a day is being spent in legal and other expenses at the Meredith-Duff inquiry into the Kyte charges re Fuse Contracts at Ottawa. Sir Sam Hughes and Col. Wesley Allison are the central figures. Few people have much idea what a fuse looks like, but the illustration will help some. Fuses are screwed on the end of shrapnel or high explosive shells and causes them to explode at a certain time after leaving the gun, or on percussion. The illustration shows a fuse about three-quarters actual size for 18-pounder shell. (a) Nose of fuse, (b) brass ring holding time index in place, (c) spacing for setting time fuse, (d) body of fuse. Dotted lines indicate body of shell to which fuse is attached. They are worth anywhere from $3 to $6 each.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

In my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

BLOW TO GERMAN PRESTIGE

King Alfonso's Marriage Showed the Trend of Europe.

It is probable that the trend of Belgium away from Germany and towards friendship with France and England dated from the Algeciras conference, 1906, says Arthur Ballard in "Diplomacy and the Great War."

But a more tangible symptom of the new state of things in Europe was given—by the international comedy of the Spanish marriage. For a long time European princes had been in the habit of marrying German princesses. Young Alfonso had been isled from one end of the empire to the other, he had passed in review of the royal Gretchens of all the courts of the Deutschland. And when he returned to Madrid and wrote his bread-and-butter letters of thanks for all their lavish hospitality he announced his engagement to a niece of King Edward. A prince of the house of Hapsburg preferred an English girl! German women are among the things listed as "uberalles" in the famous song. Not long afterwards a Norwegian prince followed the example of Alfonso and chose an English bride. German prestige was falling.

TO THE BOYS OF THE NINETY-THIRD.

Tune: The March of the Cameron Men.

Hip, Hurrah! for the boys of the Ninety-third
Who have answered their country's clear call,
And are rallying round the grand old old Union Jack,
Daring for it to fight or to fall.

Chorus—
Loud the sound of the drum, deep rolling, rolling,
And blast of the bugle is heard,
While the hills and valleys re-echo again,
To the march of the brave Ninety-third.
To the march, to the march,
To the march of the brave Ninety-third.

From fair Apsley some hail,
Some from Ennismore's wold,
And deep Dummeronian glen,
Some from Lakefield
And Douro's sons, stalwart and bold
And right gallant Otonabee men.

They left behind, all that the heart holds most dear,
Sweet wife, friends, and loved peaceful home,
To face war's grim dangers, in foreign lands drear—
Far beyond the wide ocean's dark foam.

For these hardy Canucks will undoubtedly close
With the cruel and treacherous Hun.
And will never turn back from or yield to their foes,
Till the glorious victory's won.

In the thickest of battle be sure they'll be there
And quit them like men (mark my word)
Winning glory's bright laurels that warriors wear,
For the boys of the brave Ninety-third.

When with gay martial music they march on parade
To its depths every bosom is stirred,
With true pride, for the heroes in khaki arrayed,
Our own boys of the brave Ninety-third!

GONE!

It is not true! No no—it cannot be
My boy is dead: But yesterday it seems
He turned and waved a last good-bye to me,
And I was left to loneliness—and dreams!

This piece of paper surely would not lie?
"Your son was killed in 'action'"—nothing more.
O God in Heaven, give me strength to try
And bear the mother's burden of the war.

Hark! Did you hear him call? I thought just then
I caught his voice. I wonder if he needs
His mother, 'mid the hosts of soldier men
Who throng the sapphire streets and silver meads?

He was so passing comely—and he died
For Canada, his land so strong and great.
A little while, and I shall pass with pride
To meet him waiting at the sentry gate!

DANDELION WINE.

Two quarts of dandelion blossoms free from stems, 4 quarts of boiling water poured over them. Let stand 3 days, stirring each day. Strain and add 5 pounds sugar, 3 oranges and 3 lemons sliced thin, 1 yeast cake; let stand 3 days longer and then skim out the fruit and let stand 4 weeks (strain through cheesecloth). Add a half-pint of whisky, and put 3 raisins in each bottle. Seal airtight. This recipe was sent to the column by Adnir some two or three years ago and I tried it. The only change that I would suggest is that you let it stand 8 weeks.

After an electric iron is overheated it will require more current to make it hot.

FROCK SERVED OWNER WELL

Frugal Owner Used it at Marriage and Death of Three Wives.

The only regret Jasper Curlett, of Boswell, Pa., suffered eight years ago when about to be married was that he had to purchase a frock coat, with trousers to match, because Curlett is known as a frugal man, and an ordinary $10 business suit has served him for many years.

But, later developments have indicated that the frock suit was one of the longest ranged investments he ever made, and he hopes to get further value from it.

When his wife died, two years after their marriage, he was able to wear that frock suit at her funeral. Then when he married a second time the frock suit was marched merrily up to the altar for further service. Only a year elapsed when the valiant suit was dusted from the moth balls and marched to that wife's grave.

Curlett was thinking of selling the suit, when about three years ago, he reconsidered and decided to get further value from it by marrying a third time, and at that wedding the old suit looked just as good as new, but smelled like a camphor factory. Then he laid it away again, and, sure enough, his third wife died three months ago and he had another chance to wear the frock coat.

So Curlett, despite the statements of his friends that he is too economical, directs attention to the fact that already he has enjoyed three weddings and three funerals in that frock suit and he is still a comparatively young man with a promising future before him and the suit.

WHERE FRANCE WAS BORN

It is a curious thing, worth remark in passing, that here at Verdun, where the turning point of the war between France and Germany" is likely to be, these two great nations were born, says an article in the Philadelphia Record. The empire of Charlemagne, 1,000 years ago, took in under one sovereignty the lands that are now France and Germany. At Verdun in 843 the sons of Lodis I., Charles, Louis and Lothaire, met to portion out among themselves their father's empire.

The map of Europe as it is now began with this memorable meeting at Verdun. The city then fell to the lot of that portion of the empire which became Germany. For 700 years Verdun was German. In 1552 it was ceded to France. From that day on it has been a great fortress, commanding the great highway along the River Meuse to Belgium and the road that runs from Metz to Paris. The fortifications date from an old keep built by Vauban on the site of a Benedictine monastery, which was torn down to make room for the fortress. Gradually the ring of encircling forts has been built. Of late years they have been modernized, until at this day they are as nearly impregnable as military science can make them.

System Was Full of Poison; Pains in Side and Back

Had Constipation For Many Years, But Was Entirely Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

The most common ailment and the greatest cause of disease and suffering to-day is constipation. Artificial food and sedentary indoor life combine to induce torpid, sluggish action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result poisonous waste matter remains in the system and gives rise to pains and aches and affords a starting point for serious disease.

Infectious and contagious diseases are little known to persons whose liver, kidneys and bowels are kept in healthful activity, for there are no suitable conditions for disease germs to thrive in. Even common colds usually take their start when they find the system in a constipated, poisoned condition.

Mrs. Ed. Miller, West Flamboro, Ont., writes: "I can truthfully say that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have cured me of constipation. I suffered with constipation almost ever since I can remember, and for four years had pains at the left side of the back. If I walked across the kitchen floor I would have to sit and rest. That, I think, was terrible for a woman of twenty years. The condition of my blood was shown by pimples breaking out on my face. I suffered so much from pains and stiffness in the back, I am sure my system was full of poison. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have entirely cured me, and I feel better than I have felt for many years."

As a cure for constipation Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills stand alone, for by their action on the liver they awaken the activity of this organ, cause a good flow of bile, and hence remove the cause of indigestion, for bile is nature's cathartic. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

MASTICATION: Frequently I receive letters asking "Why am I so thin although my appetite is good," or "Why am I so fleshy though I do not eat a great deal?" Several years ago I discussed that subject in a series of articles and pointed out that food in order to be properly assimilated should first be properly masticated. It is safe to state that as a rule food must be chewed until it becomes a liquid in the mouth and thus thoroughly incorporated with the saliva before it is ready for the stomach.

One of the foremost expontents of advocating thorough mastication is the late Horace Fletcher who has probably done more than any other individual to bring this subject before the people. His method is popularly known as Fletcherism. The following are some points taken from a pamphlet published several years ago and wherein Professor Fletcher's theories are brought plainly and quite fully. They will interest many Home Health Club readers to-day as they did years ago:

"Do not take more than one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful of food into the mouth at one time, especially for the first week or two. If you take a larger amount of food you will have much more difficulty in learning Fletcherism.

"Do not take any more food into the mouth until this has been swallowed. Chew the food industriously. Some Fletcherites take about two motions of the jaws per second.

"All particles of food should be broken up and reduced to a liquid or liquified form. Learn to return the food from the back part of the mouth for further chewing before swallowing. Do not swallow the food until it loses its original taste. This does not mean that the food should lose its taste or flavor entirely but it should be chewed until it loses its original taste.

"Do not try to swallow at all, just keep chewing the food and enjoy it until it disappears by involuntary swallowing or by swallowing itself. If you do not have time to chew your food properly it is better to eat a smaller amount or not to eat at all until you have sufficient time.

"Soft, mushy foods should be chewed and insalivated almost as thoroughly as solid foods to insure good digestion. If a piece of whole wheat bread or shredded wheat biscuit or baked potato is chewed long enough it will become as sweet as sugar by the action of the saliva in the mouth. The last taste of the food is the best.

"The habits of a life time cannot be changed in a day; you must have perseverance and determination if you wish to succeed.

"Do not read the papers or think about business or engage in conversation so as to engross the attention when you are learning Fletcherism. If you were engaged to run a steam engine or a complicated machine you would give it considerable study and attention: so you must give proper study and attention to your own nutrition if you wish to obtain good results.

"Do not be so greedy as to swallow your food prematurely. Do not be too lazy or indiffent to masticate your food properly. Do not eat when not really hungry. If you eat when not hungry the food will not be absorbed and assimilated readily and hence poison toxins will be thrown off into the blood. Do not be afraid to wait a day or two if necessary for a good appetite. If you do not have will power enough to skip a meal at first, then take only a little ripe fruit or a little fruit juice when not really hungry at mealtime. Some Fletcherites do without breakfast entirely as a rule, or take only a little ripe fruit, say half a banana or a little fruit juice at breakfast time.

Do not eat between meals. If hungry between meals take a drink of water. Quit eating promptly when your appetite is satisfied. Do not eat something more just because it is there and might have a good taste to it. In case of eating dessert it is better to have this at the beginning or the middle part of the meal. If you first eat until your appetite is satisfied and then eat the dessert extra you will thereby violate the principles of Fletcherism and you will not feel so well.

"Do not eat to keep up your strength, your natural appetite will attend to that in due time. Highly seasoned and spiced foods are likely to overstimulate the appetite or sense of taste, causing you to eat too much. Taking large quantities of food into the mouth at one time will overstimulate the taste buds, causing an abnormal and unnatural appetite. Most people eat entirely too much. Fletcherites often thrive and grow fat on one-half the amount of food they formerly used. You derive strength not not from the amount you eat but from the amount you assimilate.

"When the food is reduced to a liquid in the mouth the work of the stomach is cut in two. When you become thoroughly accustomed to Fletcherizing you will require little or no more time for a meal than you formerly required when you bolted your food. Do not use your mouth as a funnel to deluge your stomach at mealtime.

"In drinking water at mealtime, do not take more than one-half teaspoonful at a time; retain this in the mouth until the chill is taken off of it. Do not drink much water at mealtime. It is well to drink a glass of water at one time. Do not drink much water for half an hour before meals or for an hour or two after meals.

"Be master of yourself; do not become a slave to wrong habits."

Personally, I will add a few remarks to the above. Many fleshy readers will perhaps think that by Fletcherizing they will grow more fat but the reverse will occur to those who are overburdened with fleshiness. Obesity is a disease brought on by improper eating and this disease is cured by properly preparing the food for the stomach. At the same time those who are thin will find the above methods exceptionally beneficial and will greatly help in increasing their weight to normal at the same time as tendency to indigestion, rheumatism and many other ill conditions will be reduced to a minimum.

AGED GRANDMOTHER

So Weak She Could Hardly Stand—Made Strong by Vinol.

Right here in Peterborough we have seen such excellent results from Vinol that it is a pleasure to know it is doing so much good for old people in other parts of the country.

Woodbridge, N. J.—"My Grandma was recovering from the grippe and was so weak she could hardly stand, and as she keeps house for my father and myself, she could not get around at all. She had taken cod liver oil and many other medicines, but nothing seemed to do her any good. At last we heard of Vinol and tried it, and Grandma commenced to feel better right away, and got strong very soon, so she gets around as well as ever. We all praise Vinol for it is a splendid medicine," Myrtle H. Bunn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in restoring strength to the aged is because of the rare combination of tonic iron, the curative medicinal extractives of fresh cods' livers, beef peptone and mild native wine. It supplies iron to the blood, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, promotes proper assimilation of food, and enriches the blood, and brings back the strength of renewed health.

BECOMING ADEPT AT ARAB-STICKING ON RIVER TIGRIS.

London, May 3.—Edmund Candler, writing in the Daily Mail, says:

I have seen a good deal of the country lately while reconnoitring with the cavalry. Day after day the same manoeuvre repeats itself. At a horizon's bound from the camp the Arab appears out of vacancy. A major last week spitted an Arab with his sword, and shot another with his revolver, in the same patrol, and his men accounted for three more. He had only five sowars (cavalrymen) with him when he charged and the Arabs were twelve. A troop on the flank had dropped a horse. The sowar mounted behind another trooper. The horse in its turn was hit and the two men were footing it along the nullah towards the squadron as best they could hanging on to their comrades' stirrups with the Arabs in pursuit.

It was just the kind of emergency for which the "Buddoo" bides his time. I call them "Buddoo", the name given them by the local cavalrymen though the Arabs in these parts are not true Bedouin.

A SURPRISE CHARGE.

The nullah was broad and deep with a bend in it. The major with his half-troop was just dismounting to fire on the pursuers when seeing that they were only twelve he gave the order to mount and charge. The Arabs sighted him as he came round the bend at 200 yards. Even then they did not believe that he would charge. They were within a hundred yards when they wheeled and turned.

But it was too late; our men were well mounted and had the legs of them. The major brought down one with the fifth shot from his revolver, the sowars prodded three others with their lances. Then followed the pursuit of the "gentleman in the blue coat." As the major pursued the Arab turned in his saddle and took a steady aim at him over his left shoulder with his rifle. He swung his horse to the off side of the "Buddoo," who turned in his saddle again and aimed at him point blank. "I had already tumbled to it that the rifle was not loaded," the major explained, "and as he didn't fire I became certain." So he dug his spurs in, rode at him and struck him from behind. That was the end of the "gentleman in the blue coat."

GETTING OUT.

The major strained his wrist drawing out his sword. This is always the difficult point. A subaltern of horse told me, describing a similar incident at Baryisieh Wood: "I did not know I had got into him, but I was almost pulled off my horse drawing it out."

And he told me how the natural instinct of the cut sometimes overbore the tradition that demanded the thrust, and how in a little affair near Shaiba he gave way to the impulse. He felled him all right but I gathered that he was a little disappointed in the spectacular effect of the cut. "The fellow's head was as hard as a croquet ball," he explained.

For the last week or two the "Buddoo" has not been of a very oncoming disposition. It may be that he has gone home to his corps or that his year's service has expired and he has not "signed on" again being disappointed in the prize money proffered him, the issue of loot.

A gunner arriving at Kurman in the spring thought he had come in for a circus, a kind of glorified Earl's Court and Olympia in one. The cavalry were having a scrap with the "Buddoo" on the left, a field battery was shelling the Turkish position on the right, and the horse gunners were pig-sticking in between. One of the rules of the game was not to run your pig down in the Turkish lines.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisonous and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Spinach is very good if cooked until tender and then put through the collander. It should be dressed with drawn butter.

Some housewives when they eat on the porch adopt the comfortable trick of serving the entire meal on a huge platter.

To roll a jelly cake successfully the edges should be pared off.

SUCCESSFUL FRENCH COUNTER ATTACKS

THE LOST TRENCHES AT VERDUN RE-CAPTURED

FRENCH SCORE IN A COUNTER ATTACK RECAPTURE NEARLY ALL LOST GROUND

Germans Driven From Communicating Trenches and From Nearly 500 Yards of First Line Trenches Between Haudremont Woods and Fort Douaumont---Many German Prisoners Were Taken and Two German Aeroplanes Captured.

LATEST DETELOPMENTS IN SUB. PROBLEM

PARIS (French Official), May 8.—French troops have recaptured a large part of the ground lost on both banks of the Meuse yesterday in a most violent German attack, believed by the French military critics to signal the fourth great assault on Verdun. A successful French counter-attack last night drove the Germans from the communicatping trench they had occupied in yesterday's heavy battling east of Hill 304, on the north-western front of Verdun. In a series of night combats the French threw the Germans out of the greatest part of the five hundred yards of first line trenches they occupied between Haudremont woods and Fort Douaumont, the War Office announced to-day. With grenades and bayonets the French last night attacked this sector captured by the Germans earlier. Before the Germans could organize their defences they had been driven out of nearly the entire 500 yards, the French taking many prisoners. A violent battle continued throughout last night on the west bank of the Meuse, northwest of Verdun, and was still in progress early to-day. Hill 304 was the centre of the most desperate struggles, the French resisting most stubbornly and checking repeated enemy advances. Two German aeroplanes were captured.

Wilson's Decision Is Expected To-day

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 8.—President Wilson may make known his decision on the German note to-day. The only thing now in question is what disposition to make of the so-called "condition" of the Kaiser's note—namely that the permanent effectiveness of the new order to U-boat commanders may depend upon the President's breaking the British blockade. A majority of the President's advisers take the position that so long as the new German order meets the President's contention, he should accept that part of the German reply, which covers the orders, and ignore entirely the balance of the note. There is every indication that this is the thing the President will do. President Wilson will make no move in the direction of European peace at this time. The veiled suggestion that the time for such a move might be opportune, conveyed in the German note, will not be heeded by the White House. It was learned on highest authority to-day that acting on the advice of the Embassies at London and Paris, the Administration will make no move in the direction of peace proposals until the promised grand offensive of the Allies shall have been made.

Berlin Satisfied Controversy Is Over

Special to the Examiner:

BERLIN, May 8.—A direct word from Washington that President Wilson will accept Germany's submarine concessions, has caused the greatest satisfaction here. The public now believes the German-American controversy definitely closed. The newspapers are now discussing the possibility that President Wilson may prove acceptable to Germany as a peace mediator when the time comes to end the world war. Certain of the papers, commenting guardedly, point out that the peace reference in Germany's reply affords the American executive an opportunity to take a definite move for peace. The majority of the German papers do not emphasize the peace reference in the German reply, possibly fearing that English journals will accept such editorial comment as an indication of Germany's weakness.

LONDON, May 8.—James M. Sullivan, prominent New York lawyer, former United States Minister to Hanto Domingo, who was arrested in connection with Irish riots, has been set free.

DUBLIN, May 8.—John McNeill, president of Sinn Fein volunteers, who disappeared the day rioting began, has been arrested and is now awaiting trial. He was a professor in the National University.

LONDON, May 8.—Sir Roger Casement will be formally arraigned this week before a police magistrate on the charge of treason, and be committed for trial at the Assizes. Lord Chief Justice presiding.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The supposed "German raiders" which the Fabre liner Venezia, outron off Azores, were probably British or French cruisers at target practice, said Captain Gaunt, British naval attache ta-day.

GERMANS CLAIM 1,320 FRENCH TAKEN.

LONDON, May 8.—Berlin Official statement to-day says that in the renewal of the drive on Verdun from the northwest Germas troops have captured the entire trench system on the northern slope of Hill 304 with 1,320 French prisoners.

93rd BATTALION FULLY MOBOLIZED AND READY FOR CAMP

Men Who Were Out on Farm Leave Reported This Morning ---Sergt. Harry Ward Who Left With the 39th is Home on Furlough---New Military Camps in Ontario---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

With the calling in of the soldiers who have been out on farm leave, the 93rd Battalion is now fully mobilized and to-day Peterborough has more active soldiers in her midst than at any time in her history. Nearly all the members on leave reported this morning, with the result that there were nearly 1,000 soldiers around the armouries this morning. From now on hard training will be the order of the day so that when the 93rd goes into camp, it will be a battalion that the citizens of Peterborough county will have every reason to be proud of. No information as to the date of departure for camp has yet been received, but it is not expected that the battalion will leave here until after May 24th, for which date a big demonstration is being arranged.

Sergt. Harry Ward, who left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion early last year, and is now attached to the headquarters staff at Folkestone, Eng., arrived home on Saturday on a few weeks' furlough, reaching Quebec on the Corinthian on Saturday. Sergt. Ward, who is looking the picture of health, was a caller at the armouries this morning. He states that nearly all of the men of the 39th are in the trenches with the exception of the non-coms. and staff, who are doing instructional work at Sandling Camp. Sergt. Ward also brings the word that Pte. Cecil Shaw, a Peterborough member of the 39th, who lived at 525 Romaine street, has died as a result of wounds.

Corp. N. Hartshorne of the 93rd, who has been attending the special course in physical training and bayonet fighting at Montreal, did not return with the other members yesterday, remaining in Montreal for an operation on his nose.

Another special course in physical training and bayonet fighting is to be held at London, commencing May 15. A dozen N.C.O.'s and men of the 93rd will take the course.

TORONTO, May 8.— Ontario is to have a new military camp that will far surpass Valcartier in every respect as an ideal place for the training of troops for overseas service. It will supersede Niagara and other camps in the western part of the province. The new camp will be at Pine Plain, in Simcoe County, some ten miles from Barrie, where the Government has acquired a site of 20,000 acres, approximately 28 square miles. Construction work is to be started immediately and rushed with all possible speed. Everything must be ready for the reception of 25,000,000 troops by June 1 next. This was the definite announcement made by General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, last night on his return to the city after making an inspection of the property.

It is about equi-distant from Barrie and Alliston, west and south from the village of Angus. The soil is of a sandy nature, and was formerly heavily timbered with pine. It has good natural drainage and two rivers, the Nam and Pine, and Bear Creek, run through it. It is approached by the Grand Trunk Railway, Collingwood branch, and the company will construct additional tracks and sidings into the camp. There are a number of farms on the site, but it is not anticipated there will be any difficulty in getting the owners to vacate immediately.

The new camp may also be reached by the C. P. R., which is not far from its western boundary, but, according to the present arrangements, the Grand Trunk will be the only company having direct access to it.

Fine Training Ground.

Sir Sam Hughes said it would be possible to carry out manoeuvres on and other big centres of population, would be invaluable in the training of the troops and rendering them fit for service immediately they were sent overseas. He said the property was not too far away from the city and other big centres of population, and yet far enough to prevent the men from running to those places daily. The object of the Government in acquiring the property was to provide facilities for the training of men under conditions similar to what they would be under when in Europe.

A member of the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire received the following communication from Pte. E. Nuttall, prisoner of war:

Ohrdruf, March 6, 1916.

Dear Madam, — I wish to thank you very much for the splendid parcel I received from you 3 or 4 days ago. Everything was in splendid condition, thanks to your good packing. I have already tested the good old Canadian bacon which I appreciated very much. I suppose that you learned of my address through Pte. Crozier, who was here with us, and should you ever see him, give him my kind regards. Well, space is limited.

I wish you everything good; it is very kind of you to send such an excellent parcel to.

Yours sincerely,

E. NUTTALL.

Capt. Marling, Quartermaster Sergt J. Williams, Sergts D. Loomis and E. Brown and Corps. B. C. Carpenter and W. Miller of the 93rd Battalion, returned yesterday morning from Montreal, where they have been taking a special course in physical training and bayonet fighting. Speaking of the work of the class, a Montreal paper says:

"The one hundred and fifty men who have been taking the special school of physical training and bayonet fighting at the Grenadier Guards armoury during the past month will be as fine a body of instructors as there are in Canada if they all come up to the standard they showed yesterday in an exhibition. The first section of the display was devoted to physical exercise, and there was a burst of applause when eighty men, in white shoes and white vests marched into the hall in column of fours under the command of Sergt. Major Limbrey who has come over from Aber-

French-Canadian Educational Association Has Issued a Warning to its Friends to Be Present in the House.

THE SHELL INVESTIGATION

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 8.—The French-Canadian Educational Association of Ottawa has issued from its office the following "Declaration of war" for publication in the newspapers: "The French Canadian Association announces that the Ontario bilingual case will be discussed in the House of Commons to-morrow. All members friendly to the cause are invited to be at their post."

The item is laconic, but none the less significant. It is believed to be designed to force the issue on the Federal Parliament. The items is a summons to "all members friendly to the cause." And it is believed that the summons will be obeyed and that the Commons galleries to-morrow will be packed in anticipation of the introduction of the resolution and demonstration on the question. The question is liable to provide developments as interesting as any during the present session.

SOME SARCASM FROM A LOCAL BOY ON FIRING LINE

Some Peterboro' Men Would Need a Trench in the Back Yard to Make Them Realize There is a War On Says Pte. R. Kendry

A LETTER FROM THE FRONT

Pte. Howard Hall of the 93rd Battalion has received a very interesting letter from Pte. Roscoe Kendry, a Peterborough boy who has been at the front ever since the 2nd Battalion went there. Pte. Kendry says: "Was very much interested about the doings of the 93rd Battalion, and glad that they have been making such good headway. Yes, I guess there are some in the old town who should be in uniform to-day, but prefer "safety first." Some of them would need to have the trenches put in their back yard before they could be made to realize that a war was on. But we should worry. For some time now we've been on the move from one place to another, in the trenches for so many days and then away again to another part of the line. So you can see it's a case of any old place we can hang our hats is home, sweet home, to us. Except when we go for a bath, the rest of our clothes are always on. In the trench we have our equipment on always, even go to bed with it on, but one can become accustomed to almost anything. Can't tell you at what place we are, but it is, and always has been, considered one of the hottest spots on the western front.

One night, not long ago, we were up on a "working party" repairing trenches, etc., and right in the open. Fritz and Co., at that place, were about 60 to 80 yards away, and as the moon was very bright he took pot shots at us—only rifle fire, though. We could see the flash of his rifle plain, but kept right on working until about 2 a.m., and then went back to where we were staying when out, and reached same about 4 a.m. Each night we went up (five miles) and worked, and then back before dawn. Of course we did our sleeping in the day time. Must say that we were lucky, as we only had one or two casualties, one of which I heard since has died of wounds. At one place near us there were numerous dead lying around, and rifles, etc.

Gee, but the time sure flies around. Does not seem that it is going on fifteen months of trench life and that it would soon be two years since I left Peterborough. Have had some close shaves of being "fluffed out" in that time, and am mighty thankful that I am still alive and kicking.

Did you see Noel Clarke since he went back? The morning he was hit I was only a few feet from him, and he was in our dugout at the time. I was outside cooking our breakfast when the grenade came over and hardly realized what happened more than a blinding flash, and "home" for my wounds did not amount to much and were all in the face, hand and right side. Small pieces of shrapnel. After being inoculated against tetanus, I was able to return to duty two hours after being hit. Eye canteens, rifles, etc., were riddled like a sieve.

C. P. R. Wreck At Sharbot Lake

Three Pullman Coaches Left the Track—Train Nearly Three Hours Late in Reaching Peterboro'

The C. P. R. train leaving Ottawa last night at 11.10 o'clock and due to arrive in Peterborough at 5.05 this morning, was wrecked about a mile east of Sharbot Lake at 2.15 this morning. Three Pullman coaches on which there were many Toronto and Ottawa passengers, left the track and rolled down a twenty foot embankment. A fourth coach was prevented from leaving the track by striking a rock projectile in a short cut about one hundred yards west of the wrecked coaches. All the passengers on the wrecked Pullman miraculously escaped serious injury, and the prompt assistance of Conductor J. E. Elliott, Conductor Angus Carmichael and the porters was the means of releasing the passengers from their positions of imprisonment in the wrecked coaches.

The train did not reach Peterborough until nearly eight o'clock.

MR. CAMPBELL'S RETIREMENT

It will be seen by announcement in another column, Mr. Peter Campbell, city manager of the Bank of Toronto, will retire from that position at the end of this month. This announcement will be heard with deep regret by the banking, business and commercial interests of the city. Mr. Campbell has occupied the post of local manager of the Bank of Toronto continuously for twenty-five years, a length of service which argues not only efficiency of technical service, but tactful relationship to the patrons of the Bank, and the general public. In his quarter of a century of banking experience in Peterborough Mr. Campbell has seen the city make a striking general progress, to which his bank, under his wise management, has materially contributed. In his relations as a citizen, Mr. Campbell has been public-spirited, and actively interested in many movements for the benefit of charitable and other city interests, and shown himself a good citizen of the Empire, as testified by the fact that he has reared two wholesome-lived and high-principled boys, one of whom, Lt. Gordon Campbell, is doing his duty in the ranks of the Canadian Army, overseas. From the city and public point of view the redeeming feature of Mr. Campbell's retirement is that while his official business relationships cease on May 31st we shall not lose the benefit of his citizenship, and that of his family. They will continue to be residents of the city, where, it is hoped, they will remain many years to be a benign element in our general and social citizenship, and happily enjoy many well-earned years of restful life.

RESIST BEGINNINGS.

It's the little sins practised that make big sinners; it's the white lie persisted in that makes black liars, and it's the little sins of grammatical and verbal inaccuracy that corrupt our writing and speech. Reputable journals, and, as ranking goes, first class newspapers, persist in using such an expression as "we forecast of recent occurrences." Should we write "forecasted" or "forecast?" If we say "forecasted" we might by analogy say "foresed, instead of foreknew, foreknowed, for foreknow, foretelled for foretold. We would not say the sun casted a shadow; he casted a boot at a cat. "Forecast" is a compound of "fore" and "cast"; the preterit and past participle of cast is cast; the preterit and past participle of forecast is forecast, at least that is what the Imperial Dictionary gives it. That is not bad authority, and if we disregard logic, analogy and grammar we commit the logical and verbal heresy of saying and writing "forecasted," along with foresed, foretelled and foreknowed, which we have just as good warrant for doing.

This is a small matter, perhaps, but little disregards for the proper use of words are the thin end of a very large wedge. The tiny erosion, individually small enough to be molecular, caused by every wave lap, is what washes away the cliffs of Albion and little and often-repeated solecisms by people who should know better, in time will reduce our language to a patois. A "solecism" is defined as "an impropriety in the use of language arising from ignorance." The improper use of words, due to ignorance is, in regard to the act itself, excusable, but inexcusable in this age of educational opportunity; but impropriety in the use of language by those who know better, or should know better, is a literary crime. We look to the educationists, our writers, our professional men, our teachers, to preserve the heritage, combat the corrupting influence of ignorance, and what is worse, the priggish conceit of self-constituted language "reformers." An educated man and an ignoramus are known respectively, by his speech; but, often in the use of language, the "educated" man or woman misses few distinguishing marks in this regard from the ignorant man or woman. Even some of the teachers in our schools, some ministers of the gospel, to whom children and others should look as models, are not free from the vice of slang and ungrammetical colloquialisms. The educated man or woman who ignores the cultured employment of the English language cannot be expected to be obsessed with ambition in respect of other forms of culture. To resist bad beginnings is a good thing in morals and manners as well as in the use of language. An ambition for purity, in the one case, will naturally extend to the others.

MOTHERS' DAY.

Yesterday, in all the churches, announcement was made that next Sunday would be devoted to the observance of "Mothers' Day"—devoted to recognition of the merits of the most devoted, and self-sacrificing characters and personalities in human relationships. Having regard to what we all owe mothers and regard also to what we pay mothers, the observance of the day will be, to many of us, an act of contrition. How many of us appreciate, or have appreciated, from day to day, what we owe to the tireless devotion, ever-present and ever-active love of our mothers—till we, perhaps, become fathers and mothers, ourselves, and then, as likely as not, the dim reflected light of our past obligations, is very largely absorbed in the selfish consideration and exaggeration of our own responsibilities.

We can this year regard "Mothers' Day" with new interest. Millions of mothers' hearts are aching and breaking over the awful home and heart havoc of this war; and this ghastly Gethsemane should open our hearts in a new impulse of tenderness towards motherhood. Thousands of Canadian mothers have sleepless nights and keen heartaches, and the most the most of us, and the least all of us can do, is to give them our practical and heart and voice sympathy.

Our observance of "Mothers' Day" will be a mere formality and a floral mockery if it does not awaken in all of us new impulses to atonement for past forgetfulness of our duty to them; and awake new resolves to be more recognizant, more grateful, more thankful, and more loving towards our loving mothers. Love and duty and devotion that find expression in words are good; but far better are they when they are spoken in deeds of thoughtfulness, help and comfort. We shall all the better honour "Mothers' Day" if we make mother's days brighter, mother's toil lighter, mother's comfort greater, and mother's devotion and love better recognized and repaid in kind. We have given her many a heart-ache; many an anxious moment; we have been undutiful and ungrateful, and, when we remember that all our lives her love has compassed us about as an atmosphere; that she has stopped at no sacrifice, our welfare has demanded at her hands; that she has planned and toiled long hours of the day and deep into the night for us—we should make amends for the past; should help to our utmost to make her future more comfortable, materially and morally—make every day mother's day. If we cannot come to a point of decision like this we shall have no true part in "Mothers' Day"—which, otherwise can be only empty form. We are enjoined to wear the carnation flower next Sunday in honour of "Mothers' Day." That is not enough. To be honest, we should make mother's days, as well as "Mothers' Day" bright with flowers—real flowers, and the flowers of devotion, kindness and of our love, that should enfold her as a garment.

"Mothers' Day" is, by some, considered a commercial matter, to promote the sale of carnations. If it is, it is beautiful commercialism; the blessed antithesis of the sordid kind, when it is used to turn our thoughts to the noblest of created beings whose relation to us from the cradle to our grave, in all the chances and changes of life, in sickness and health, in prosperity and adversity, is the spirit whose tenderness and love and sweet solicitude in their myriad forms of expression are typified and forecast in the homely significance of the simple rhyme:

Who ran to help me when I fell,
And would some pretty story tell,
Or kiss the part to make it well?
My Mother.

MR. ROWELL'S POSITION.

Mr. Rowell in the Ontario Legislature has set an example to politicians elsewhere, both provincial and federal. Since the commencement of the war he has refrained from purely partisan strife in the legislature. In this, and in his long struggle for temperance reform, he has shown the utmost sincerity. This has been particularly emphasized during the last few weeks. There are a number of points in the temperance legislation introduced by the government and just put through the provincial House which were open to serious question. There was opportunity in plenty for criticism by the Liberal leader. At the very least such criticism would have had the effect of lessening the credit that will go to the Conservative government for the enactment of temperance. But Mr Rowell has not sought political aggrandisement. His aim has been to secure the abolition of the liquor evil and he has given his sincere support to the government that has moved in that direction, even though the legislation of the government is not all it might have been. Mr. Rowell has played the part of a statesman rather than that of a politician.—Ottawa Free Press.

VOLUNTARY CONSCRIPTION.

A highly political, self-governing people will not allow the logic of events to be imposed upon them by any intelligence other than their own. They insist upon finding it out for themselves. Then to accept it becomes an act of faith. So the English have come voluntarily to the logic of compulsory general military service. This, it was once thought, could never happen in England. Mr. Asquith until a very recent time had continuously said that he could not remain at the head of a Government that should adopt that policy. But what was impossible has become inevitable, and he embraces it, and all the explanation he deems himself called upon to make is that the project, after long and acrimonious discussion, has obtained the imperative sanction of the nation. He expresses the hope that the bill to be introduced by the Government will end the long controversy. That is greatly to be desired. The turmoil over "conscription" has been extremely distracting, unseemly, and wasteful of time. That is the other side of the picture. There is compensation for everything.—New York Times.

The German Reply Is A Tissue of Lies And Pleas For Postponement

The German reply to the United States on the submarine warfare question is intensely characteristic. It is one long tissue of lies and pleas for postponement. "The German Government begs to reserve further communication about the Sussex until certain points are ascertained which are of decisive importance for establishing the facts of the case." "The German Government still stands by its offer to come to an agreement along these lines"—that is to say, upon the American Government consenting to abandon its position regarding submarine warfare. For the rest, Von Jagow's note is simply lie upon lie, lie upon lie; excuse upon excuse, excuse upon excuse, here a little and there a little.

The German Government emphatically repudiates the assertion that the Sussex incident is to be regarded as but one instance of a deliberate method of indiscriminate destruction of vessels of all sorts, nationalities and destinations by German submarine commander. However, it thinks itt of little advantage to enter into details is its present stage of affairs. For heaven's sake, how many more stages of palaver does it expect the American Government to endure? According to the veracious Von Jagow no such considerattion has ever been shown to neutrals by Great Britain and her allies as has been shown by Germany. Still, we have not heard of any neutral sinking unarmed neutral ships and there have been some hundreds of complaints against Germany in this connection. Then the brute has the impudence to talk about the importance the German Government attaches to the sacred principles of humanity, and has the magnificent audacity to reproach the British Government for having ignored all accepted rules of international law and extended this terrible war against the lives and property of non-combatants. This from the baby-killers of Scarborough, the butchers and Cabberal wreckers of Belgium and Northern France, and the assassins of the Lusitania and hundreds of other non-combatant ships.

Von Jagow gives the show away when he tries to justify the German excrimities by the success of the British blockade of Germany, after the German blockade of Great Britain had so signally and ingloriously failed. He whines because the sentiments of humanity which the United States Government extends with such fervor to the unhappy victims of submarine warfare are not extended with the same warmth of feeling to many millions of women and children, "who, according to the avowed intention of the British Government, shall be starved and who, by suffering, shall force the victorious armies of the Central Powers into ignominous capitulation." Thank Heaven there is no such pitiful whining and whimpering and squealing on our side. Why do not "the victorious armies of the Central Powers" force the rest of humanity into acceptance of their conditions? It is gratifying to note that the German Government is prepared to go to the utmost limit of concession—provided, always they stop short of ceasing the submarine murders to which the American Government is so unreasonable as to object. One of the funniest things in the German note is the attempt to justify the war on neutrals, by the plea that Great Britain has succeeded where Germany failed, after a good deal of bragging—in the blockade business.

There is a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry trees in the back yard of the German Embassy.—Montreal Herald.

SOME UNITED STATES PRESS COMMENT ON THE GERMAN ANSWER

NEW YORK, May 5.—Commenting editorially on the German note the Evening Sun says:

"We cordially hope our Government may find in this note the solution of our own difficulty, but as a general indication as regards the prospects of peace it fills us with gloom. Plainly Germany is not in the humor yet to heed the counsels of wisdom or humanity. She is still world drunken."

The New York Globe says: "The reply is thus not to be accepted as a settlement of the matters in dispute between the United States and Germany. There is no completeness or substantial compliance. The little that is conceded is conceded conditionally. No choice would thus seem open to our Government but to carry out its declared intentions to sever diplomatic relations."

Some of the editorial comment throughout the country follows:

Boston Traveler: The note is an amazing combination of evasions, denial irony, and lust. It is an invitation to the President to begin a new series of communications and "the services of humanity" is dragged in after the President's own fashion, as if to make him wonder whether the Kaiser is patting him on the back or poking fun at him.

Pittsburg Leader: The German note leaves plenty of ground for hope that a working understanding will be reached with a lessening of friction between the two Governments.

Louisville Times: The unofficial text of the German note serves notice that the the United States must either force England to end her blockade of foodstuffs, or acquiesce in a continuance of Germany's methods of submarine warfare along the lines already laid down. This xxxx means either the United States must recede xxxxx or it must break with Germany. The President has announced what his course would be under these conditions. The country stands with him.

Baltimore News: The United States demanded the establishment of a certain course ago. Germany has established it. How long she can or will maintain it is another question. But for the time being we are left nothing to complain of.

Chattanooga (Tenn) News. The German note is about as satisfactory as could be expected. The immediate issue is whether or not the concessions made are sufficient. We believe they will cause a better feeling among the American people.

Providence Bulletin: "The note is a brutal mockery of the wounds again and again inflicted upon us. It is a long inventory of injuries it amounts to an elaborate and deliberate defiance of a nation whose restraint under persistent provocation has been the world's wonder."

shot in order to act as chief instructor at these schools. Their marching was perfect, every man swinging his arms at the same moment and bringing his foot down exactly in time with his fellow. They are all well built and were in splendid physical condition, very much better than many of them were when they started the class a month ago.

They wheeled as a man, and then broke up into four squads and were put through a long course of physical drill, which gave an idea of the multitude of exercises necessary to bring into play every muscle of the body and develop strength where it is most essential to a soldier who has to carry a lot of equipment on the march. These exercises were all done with a sprightliness which evoked much admiration from the watching officers in the gallery.

Many Quick Changes.

One of the most interesting and amusing exhibitions of the afternoon was the quickening exercises. Sergt. Major Limbrey would rush out to the centre of the hall, and the whole of the class would pelt after him like a pack of wolves, and start to form up in rank facing him. Before they were complete he would be off somewhere else, twisting first one way and then another, and the men had not a moment to lose in going after him. Then he would give an order to them to rush to a wall and before they had got a dozen yards he would shout another order and the whole crowd would suddenly flop down, turn on their backs and starting doing some physical exercises. Before one had time to get a breath there was another order and the men were up and away somewhere else, only to suddenly drop in their tracks and do some other stunt. It was cleverly done and showed the alertness of the men who were able to translate thought into action in an instant.

The bayonet fighting exercises were of a varied character. While one squad was doing the guard, parry long and short thrust, butt and recover, another squad was jabbing at a wad of paper on poles which were dodged about by the men in front of them so as to train them in quick action. A third section using the spring bayonets were charging at men in masks and padded coats who, armed with poles, sought to ward off the charging bayonets, who gave an illustration as to how to thrust the enemys bayonet aside and with the same movement send their own bayonet home.

The exercises concluded with charges at dummies, each guarded by a pole. They were in two ranks, and the charging men had to knock the protecting pole aside, bayonet the first and then rush on to the second line and repeat the performance.

One of the instructors at the special school of bayonet fighting and physical training at Montreal, which was attended by a member of the 93rd Battalion, was a Peterborough man, Sergt.-Major Sam. Worrall, formerly of Carlisle Avenue, East City. Sergt.-Major Worrall left Peterborough with the 39th Battalion, a year ago, as a private, and has made rapid progress, coming to the front quickly in courses at Aldershot, and elsewhere in England. He has developed into a splendid instructor.

There will be a red-hot football game in Central Park to-morrow evening at 5.15 o'clock, when the team representing the Battalion Cooks will tackle a team picked from the Chenzong Indian members of the Battalion.

The Kingston Whig says: Great care is taken by Col. T. D. R. Hemming, D.O.C., that every man who is enough of a man to offer his services to the Empire will be used in some capacity if he is in reasonably good health and can do certain kinds of work.

There will be at the camp this year a fatigue party of possibly 150 men who will do guard duty, police duty, etc., which would otherwise have to be done by eligible men. The men for this work will be chosen from those who have been rejected for overseas service, but who wish to do something to assist the country in the great struggle.

A medical board will go over every man in uniform at the camp, and those who are considered as unfit for the strenuous training necessary to prepare them for the work in France will be turned over to the fatigue party and given that duty, so that they will still be able to return home and say that they have done their bit, and they should receive every consideration for so doing.

The 136th Battalion, Port Hope, is making an effort to secure recruits in Pontiac County, Quebec. This county is included in the area of the 3rd Military District.

"I'll give a pound for every German killed," shouted the enthusiastic young sub, as he gave orders for the charge.

Two unfortunate Irishmen were left behind after the assault. "Just let me slape awhile. Kick me when the Boches come again," said one.

The kick soon came as the Germans counter-attacked.

"How many are there, Mike?" was the anxious enquiry.

"About thirty thousand."

"Thank Haeven; our fortune's made."

On Monday last, Mrs. Armstrong, of Lakefield, received a telegram stating that her son, Pte. Charles Armstrong, who was reported missing, and believed to be wounded, last week, was in a hospital in France, wounded in the arm. From private information it was learned that Pte Armstrong was among a party of bombers of the 21st Battalion, who had been ordered to re-capture a British trench that had been taken by the Germans. All the Lakefield boys in the 21st participated in the attack and all came out safe and sound with the exception of Pte. Armstrong, who received a rifle bullet in the wrist. He became separated from his companions but was picked up by a party from another Battalion and taken to one of the clearing hospitals. His whereabouts was unknown for several days which caused the report to be sent in that he was missing. Pte. Armstrong is getting along well and it is expected that he will be out of the hospital in a short time. The trench was recaptured from the Germans and is now strongly held by the British.

Review of the Market Situation

Further Advances Are Predicted in Sugar—Advance in Hogs

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer:

Trade and public alike have been accustomed for some time to hear of an advancing market in molasses. This has been an advancing market for the past three or four months and for a whole year it has been very firm. A further increase took place this week and fancy Barbadoes are now offered about two cents higher to the trade. All other prices are in proportion. Little is coming forward, only odd cars are being received in Montreal. Spot stocks are light and there is hardly any molasses for immediate delivery on hand. It is hoped that cargoes will arrive later on during this month, but there is no assurance of that, and even if it does materialize it will only be a drop in the bucket of demand. For the size of the trade done in it, there is no foodstuff which has suffered more greatly from the existing freight conditions than molasses. In the West Indies they are tied up for boats; even old sailing vessels can scarcely be got. Room which has been reserved for some months is often cancelled at the last minute and the exporters are at their wits' end to know what to do. This has been the chief reason why molasses is high. As a secondary reason, molasses is being used for munitions purposes and there has been therefore a greater demand on that account.

ADVANCE IN HOGS.

Probably the feature of the market this week is the startling advance in hogs and all pork products. Hogs are exceptionally high and show no sign of easing up. There has been a big export demand and domestic account is unable to procure all it needs. Hog products are being exported to a great extent and the supply is not over-large, considering the exports, although for home purposes alone it would be ample. All bacons, dry salt meats, cooked meat, pure lard and hams are higher; in some cases as much as 2c to the retailer. This is a condition which will affect the consumer, inasmuch as Lent has only just lapsed by two weeks and the trade in cooked meats has materially improved, as it always does after the Lenten season. There appears to be no reason why the market should sag at all and from coast to coast hog products are reported to be very firm.

Further advances are predicted in sugar. The highest point yet touched was reached by raws in New York this week and increases in refined are freely prophesied.

Corn syrups all advanced this week.

Railway Girl As Orator

IT is not often that the Canadian Club of Montreal asks a woman to address it, but the fame of Miss Kathleen Burke, the special delegate to America of the Scottish Women's Hospitals for Foreign Service, had preceded her and when her address was actually delivered no one regretted the invitation. A great grandniece of Edmund Burke, whose "dagger speech" was perhaps the most theatrical incident in the history of the British House of Commons, this lady has a wonderful gift of oratory and her descriptions, humorous and pathetic, of the hospital conditions in Servia during the typhus epidemic and of the magnificent heroism of the British nurses in the Balkans and in France during the war, moved her hearers to the very heart. What Miss Burke, however, is most proud to be is that she is a railway girl. She is the daughter of the late Thomas Francis Burke, Continental Manager of the London & North Western Railway, and until she became a nurse lived, talked and thought of railways. In her present mission she has achieved extraordinary success, raising in a few weeks over $250,000 by her oratory. After addressing some recruiting meetings in Montreal, she plans to tour the United States, but later in the year hopes to visit the Canadian West where she will probably address the leading Canadian Clubs on the subject which she has so much at heart. The hospitals to which Miss Burke has herself been attached as a nurse were originally started by a group of Scottish political women, but now include nurses and women doctors from all over the Empire. Their work has been enthusiastically endorsed by both the French and British Governments.

BIG PROGRAMME OF BOXING AND WRESTLING

There will be a big programme of boxing bouts in the armouries on Thursday night that will provide plenty of amusement. The contestants will be selected from the ranks of the 93rd Battalion, which contains a number of clever boxers and wrestlers and the programme will be one of the most interesting of its kind ever held here. There will undoubtedly be a big crowd on hand for these events.

PASS THE WOOD— I MEAN THE BREAD

NEW YORK, May 8.—The steamer Noordam of the Holland-America line, came in from Rotterdam by way of Kirkwall and Falmouth, bringing the latest war story—wooden bread. This, according to Mr. Edward Roentgen, a musician, nephew of Professor Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen, perfector of the X-ray, is one of the means of subsistence that have been devised by necessity in the scarcity of food in Germany.

Mr. Roentgen says in all seriousness that this wooden morsel is prepared from the pulp of some species of trees. This is ground into a mash, and with it is mixed a quantity of wheat in such proportions that the presence of the pulp is hardly noticeable. This is baked in the usual baker's ovens, and can then be served by cutting either with an ordinary knife or a saw or an axe. Mr. Roentgen says that it is quite an acceptable substitute for the regular bread, although he does not think that it will be very popular after the war ends.

The Noordam brought 368 passengers and had an unusually long trip because she came around the north of the British Isles instead of running the risk of being sunk by a mine or a torpedo in the English channel. Her passengers were regaling themselves on a fine voyage as they saw the snowclad mountains of Norway and had a fine view of the Orkney Islands. At Kirkwall the British authorities took from the vessel 1027 bags of mail.

Other passengers told of the preparations that have been made in Holland if the country is forced into the war. The inhabitants generally fear an invasion from Germany, but they have 750,000 men in arms and ready for immediate service. The border has been strongly fortified with trenches and barriers and a special force is ready at a moment's notice to let loose the dykes if the German forces ever start toward the smaller nation.

Also on board the Noordam were 80 pairs of magnificent Holland swans. They are the first to be shipped here since the war started and they are Dr. D. G. Tilley of Darien, Conn., who has a fine bird farm and houses birds from all parts of the world.

How Can Mankind Be Indifferent To The Suffering of Christ?

Powerful Sermon By Rev. T. T. Shields at Murray Street Baptist Church Sounded This Question That Challenges Every Person

A LARGE CONGREGATION

The large congregation that attended the evening service at Murray St. Baptist church yesterday, its seventieth anniversary, heard an eloquent and profound withal a simple appeal to stop and heed the import of the supreme sacrifice of Jesus Christ by which he expiated the sins of mankind and gained for us eternal salvation. Rev. T. T. Shields of Toronto proved an excellent choice as the speaker for this important event in the history of Murray Street Baptist church, the beginning of its seventy-first year in God's work and worship. His sermon was most appropriate to the occasion, his message so clear and explicit that it must have impinged upon the comprehension of the children present as forcibly as upon the minds of the adults. The richness of phrase and imagery, the simplicity of illustration served to reinforce the power of the central idea that by His death Jesus secured our redemption, but by our indifference to Him we imperil our share in that redemption.

Rev. Mr. Shield took his text from the lamentations of Jeremiah, 1:12.

Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of His fierce anger.

Jeremiah lamented the fall of Jerusalem. The walls of the palace are in the hands of the enemy, the gates are sunken, the king and princes taken captives, the law forgotten, the prophets without a voice from God. Jeremiah sees and hears the Gentiles as they pass by. They clap their hands and hiss and wag their heads at the city and its people so affecting the prophet's soul that he voices the sorrow of the people in his cry, "behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow". He looked on a scene somewhat similar to that which Belgium presents to-day. Rev. Mr. Shields touched upon its prophetic aspect, did not our Lord say "I will destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up". When I regard the temple of His body rent for us, I take these words from Jeremiah's prophetic lips and give them to Him to whom they most appropriately belong.

By thus re-echoing Jeremiah's plaintive cry ringing out from the cross Rev. Mr. Shields gave to his text a vivid introduction and proceeded to accentuate its impression by resounding what the Cross represents for man kind.

NOT A HUMAN SORROW

The sorrow of Jesus was not the sorrow of a man. It was the sorrow of a God. The capacity for suffering, is perhaps the truest indication of character. It is the most reliable index of the measure of a man. Jesus was in every respect the greatest of all human characters. But the measure of His matchless humanity was infinitised by union with the depths of His divinity. He sorrowed with the capacity of a God.

Rev. Mr. Shields illustrated the degrees and differences of sorrow by referring to the emotion of a child that loses its doll and the husband who is bereft of his wife. The latter sorrows as a man and with the strong, deep feelings of a man. And as his sorrows are keener than those of the child so do the sorrows of Jesus surpass all human woe.

THE SON OF GOD'S SUFFERING

"Jesus was the son of God" the speaker emphasized. "When I remember that it was into the face of God that sin did spit, that it was the incarnate God who was knocked and buffeted about, that the heavy nails were driven into the hands of God, when I remember that the soldiers' spear with all the wait and malice of a world of sin behind it was driven into the heart of God, I know there is no sorrow like the sorrow of God, It must have been a deluge of grief that broke His heart.

Mr. Shields said he read of the vengeance of eternal fire. He had no rule to measure these words. He did not know their meaning, but he saw that modern evil had no end. Its potentialities were so immeasurable as to be infinite. One sin propogates itself, multiplies itself indefinitely. One eternal sin what is it when multiplied by the continents and the isles of the sea, multiplied by the heart throbs of every man who ever lived, multiplied by the generations, the ages, the centuries, what an awful weight of iniquity is here? One sin, I read the awful record of one sin thatt had been traced through three generations and which has been responsible for seven hundred persons being placed behind the bars.

Further illustrating the suffering of Jesus, Mr. Shields said, supposing one thousand men were sentenced to forty-nine lashes each and one man volunteered to receive on his person the punishment that would have been visited upon the other nine hundred and ninety nine.

"Impossible" you say. "He would have died before one half the punishment has been visited upon him." And so he would. Oh you men and women of Unitarian tendencies who speak of the man of Nazareth as though he were a man, if He had been only human your forty-nine lashes alone would have killed him without mine, or my forty-nine would have killed him without yours. Because He was God He endured the iniquities of us all. He died for everyone of us.

By contrast, the speaker illustrated the awful ignominy Jesus suffered. The depths to which Jerusalem had sunk were made the more abysmal by the very exalted position she had previously held. So with Jesus. No other brow could have been wounded on which the diadem of heaven had rested.

No other hands could have been pierced that controlled the earth and shaped its hills and valleys, that held the seas in their palms.

CHRIST MUST HAVE MADE DIFFERENCE

Rev. Mr. Shields concluded his sermon by a direct appeal that there be no passerby. What difference has the cross of Christ made in our lives? What is your attitude toward the sin that crucified God? There are men and women to-day willing to climb into prominence on the very things that crucified Christ. As the British women will always hate the Prussians so should we detest sin. Christ must be everything to you. He is nothing to those who do not show the difference in their office or in their home life. They are no different from other people although they may profess to be different.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF INDIFFERENCE

To the unconverted, to those who have never made a confession of faith why are His sufferings nothing to them? Why have you never felt the arresting power of the cross of Christ: Mr. Shields gave an explanation of the philosophy of indifference.

When a crime has been committed the papers announce it in big headlines. Newsboys cry out in the streets "All about the murder". Men passing by eagerly buy up the editions. But one man passing through the crowd shows no interest in the papers or the cries. He is anxious to get through the crowd. And reaching a side street he is lost in the alleys. This man does not need to read the papers. He knows more about the crime than any of the crowd for it was he who committed it. He wasn't as indifferent to the calls of the newsboys as he seemed. He that believeth on the Son of God hath everlasting life. "May the cross of Christ mean all this to you."

SAYS THEY ARE BETRAYED.

Ottawa Paper's Open Letter to French-Canadian Soldiers at Front.

OTTAWA, May 8.—Le Droit, the local French newspaper, has addressed "an open letter to the French-Canadians in the trenches," telling them that their rights have been violated during their absence, their children deprived of educational facilities, and their wives forced to mount guard over their schools, because of the persecution levelled against them by the Ontario Government.

The letter declares that the confidence of the French-Canadian soldiers has been betrayed, while they are unable to give protection to their loved ones at home, and concludes: "You wil soon find your wives and children and sisters in the trenches in Canada, for the defence of their language and schools against the might of a persecuting government. You can, therefore, say with reason: 'Of what use is it for us to fight against Prussianism and barbarity here when the same conditions exist at home?'"

Limestone may be applied at any time of the year and it is immaterial as to whether it is applied to ploughing land or applied first and then ploughed under.

BRANTFORD IS USING LESS WATER

The Decrease is Attributed to the Use of Meters

BRANTFORD, May 8.—With the increase of water meters in the city the consumption of water appears to be on the decrease. This decrease in the water pumped is attributed to the saving made where meters have been installed. During the past month 82,364,000 gallons of water were pumped the daily average being 2,450,136. For the corresponding month of a year ago, 115,239,764 gallons were pumped, and the daily average was 3,773,286. The figures show a very large increase in the saving caused by meters.

EIGHTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Rev. Dr. McCrae, of London, Preached Both Morning and Evening — Services Were Well Attended — "The Christian's Hope" Formed the Subject of the Morning Discourse.

The eighty-third anniversary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church which was observed yesterday, was marked by two inspiring addresses delivered by the Rev. Dr. McCrae of London. Both morning and evening services were well attended.

The address given by Dr. McCrae at the morning service was based upon that portion of the Scripture found in the second Epistle of Paul, the Apostle to the Thessalonians, 2nd chapter, 16th verse: "Now our Lord Jesus Christ, Himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, everlasting consolation and good hope, through grace."

"The God-given impulse of the Christian's hope is one of the greatest and most priceless things of this life, said the speaker.

Hope Springs Eternal.

In the words of the poet, "Hope springs eternal." It inspires and enables mankind to surmount all manner of obstacles, and when it is grounded on faith in Jesus Christ, is one of the sweetest and most satisfying things in this life. The Christian's hope is a good thing. It rests on a very strong foundation. From the depths of the grace of God there springs hope.

Faith is a Standard.

"Faith," said Rev. Dr. McCrae, is the standard of hope. Someone has said that faith is the mother of hope and hope is the eldest born daughter of faith. When hope is lost, everything is lost. If Britain and her allies lost hope now nothing would remain for us but defeat. It is hope that keeps a man's head above water. It represents one of the greatest needs of the world to-day, said the speaker, in conclusion.

The Presbyterian section of the 93rd Battalion were present at the morning service. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. Treneer, rendered special music at both services.

Courage of French First Line Troops Saved Verdun

Frank H. Simonds Gives Survey of Brilliant Work of Soldiers—How the Fortress Was Preserved From Isolation Due to the Cutting Off of the Two Railways

Primarily Verdun was saved by the courage and devotion of the first line troops, who had held the trenches when the attack began. They performed their full duty; they held the line until the reserves came up. They did precisely what the German troops had done in Champagne last fall with approximately the same losses and with courage and devotion which will remain memorable.

But the defending of the Verdun sector was made possible by the preparation that had actually been made long months before. The civil authorities, asked by the military to supply a new railroad, had failed miserably. As I pointed out earlier, there was only the single track, narrow guage line, which in point of fact was used almost exclusively to evacuate wounded, but there was the motor transport, and this was the miracle of Verdun.

Months before the military authorities, recognizing the dangerous position of the Verdun salient, reconstructed one great railway running north from Dizier and Bar-le-Duc to Verdun. The existing highway was doubled, trebled in width, proper turnouts were made, and Verdun was bound to France by a magnificent road going north beyond the range of the German artillery all the way to the outskirts of the city itself. In addition, Gen. Herr, who commanded the sector, had worked out an intricate and marvellous system of motor transport.

When the blow fell it was only necessary to mobilize the motor trucks, and in an incredibly short time thousands and thousands of these trucks were in operation. Coming north as I did from St. Dizier to Verdun for more than fifty miles the road was a continuous line of trucks. Over almost the whole distance they were marching in single file, with scarcely a break in the procession. Going up heavy laden, they passed through the region behind the front, discharged their contents at the appointed place, and returned empty by smaller side roads. On all the course I never saw a block or a delay. Rarely, very rarely, a camion was upset or broke down and was turned to the side of the road and temporarily abandoned. In every village there were repair stations, but day and night steadily, fairly rapidly, this endless chain of motor trucks filed past, bringing men, munitions, supplies.

By this method perhaps a quarter of a million men were brought fresh to the firing line; innumerable guns, heavy and light, were kept supplied with ammunition; armies were rationed; the whole intricate and enormous domestic economy of a great army was handled without friction or disorder. In the cities, such as Bar-le-Duc, the squares and the turns were marked by signs, telling the road to Verdun. Even in tiny villages, traffic policemen, soldiers, instructed the drivers, kept the traffic separated, for in addition to the Verdun sector the St. Mihiel and the Argonne sectors were fed in part by the same route.

All night long in Bar-le-Duc it was possible to hear the endless rumble of the wheels of the great trucks. On the road Paris 'buses, laden with fresh meat, lumbered steadily on. It was rather like a huge torrent than like vehicular traffic, and it was the real salvation of Verdun, for it preserved Verdun from isolation, it remedied the essential defect due to the cutting off of the two railroads, it replaced two useless arteries by a third, which was absolutely sufficient.

In this war the world has talked mostly of German efficiency, preparation, foresight. Yet to see this never ending procession, these thousands and tens of thousands of motor vehicles proceeding on their way, assembled from somewhere, from everywhere, without delay, without difficulty, mobilized and put into operation travelling with all the regularity of express trains, was to realize that the Germans were not the only miracle-compellers, and that France, in her own way, was also working miracles. For this system I was told that General Herr was responsible.

When the attack began Herr commanded at Verdun. Almost overnight he was replaced by Petain, but more than one officer spoke to me of the manner in which the old commander turned over his army and became a mere superintendent of traffic, resigned the glorious for the useful, and made room for one his junior in service and in rank. For myself, I shall remember nothing of what I saw at Verdun longer than this stream of motor transports, this interminable procession flowing on in an unvarying rate of perhaps twelve miles an hour, the tide which made it possible for the men who defended Verdun to hold their ground and finally to match artillery with artillery and numbers with numbers.—From "The Battle of Verdun as France Saw It," by Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews for May, 1916.

Scampers Up Broadway With Reporters' Money

One Man Proves That There is No Honour Among a Certain Class by Actually Stealing Pay Envelopes of Ten Newspapermen

NEW YORK, May 8.—There was an attempt at robbery in Herald square recently that for sheer audacity, shameless optimism and clear miscalculation compares favourably with any of the more hair raising crimes of recent centuries. A bold, bad daylight robber tried to take money belonging to ten reporters. He was caught by the hatband, neck, waistcoat, knees, cravat, cuff links and Adam's apple, and will undoubtedly plead insanity when brought to the bar or placed behind some. Why—the idea!

At twenty minutes to five o'clock Walter Keene, who is twenty-three years old and has been short of money for twenty-two years, walked into the rotunda of the Herald Building and devoted himself to waiting for something to turn up. To his left, looking from left to right, he noticed the cashier of the Herald business office counting what appeared to be the Mexican national debt, in tens. The eyes of Walter Keene, who lives at No. 242 West Forty-eighth street, flashed. He saw the cashier repeatedly count large sums—200—210—218, etc., fold the crisp, dewy, luxurious bills into neat manilla envelopes and write on each the name of a reporter. He saw that for some it was pay day, while for him it was merely Thursday afternoon. He gritted his teeth—both of them—and exhaled thoughtfully.

Walking briskly up to the treasury department, he reached in, took ten of the envelopes and began running, one of the most primitive methods of escape in the annals of crime. The cashier, having swallowed a non-leakable fountain pen which fitted his windpipe exactly, said nothing, but one or two public spirited persons fell in behind Walter and determined to pursue him a few blocks, just to see if anything developed. They called to Policeman Dan Rinn, of Traffic B, that they were chasing a robber, and Dan fell in and began to puff. He called upon Walter to stop, in the name of the law, at Broadway, and made it in the name of heaven when they reached Seventh avenue. The final appeal fetched Walter.

He was searched, and, it is alleged, the police say, it is charged, it has been asserted and it is feared that they found the ten envelopes close to his heart. He could not explain it at all. Something, he said, had just gotten into him that moment. The police believe it may have been avarice, so they locked him up at the West Thirtieth street station.

Irish Play "Rule Britannia" When Germans in Trenches Tell Them of Revolution

LONDON, May 8.—Immediately after the outbreak of the Irish revolution, Germans soldiers in trenches opposite the Irish division fighting on the western front put up signs inviting the Irish to join the Germans, according to news received by John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, from his brother, Capt. William H. K. Redmond, now at the front.

One notice read: "Irishmen in Ireland are now in revolution. English guns are firing on your wives and children. Sir Roger Casement persecuted. Throw away your arms. We give you hearty welcome."

Another sign read: "We are Saxons and if you don't fire we won't."

The Irishmen replied by playing an Irish air and "Rule Britannia," on mouth organs.

BOOTS BY THE MILLION.

British Factories Turning Out Supplies for Many Armies.

No less than $1,000,000 worth of boots a week are being turned out by the Northamptonshire factories who are supplying not only the British army with footwear, but are also making boots for the French army and navy, the Belgian, Serbian and Italian armies. And now there is a likelihood of an order for three million pairs of high-legged boots for the Russian army being placed in England.

It is pointed out that if this order should be placed, it will have a remarkable effect on the leather trade, for each pair of legs will cut into nine feet of leather, and each pair of fronts will take another two feet. It would, in fact, absorb well over thirty million feet of upper leather, in addition to 280,000 hands for the soles and 200,000 hands for repairing, the leather altogether being equal to 300,000 hides.

Many curious boots, by the way, are being turned out by the Northampton factories. There is a thigh boot for sailors in which he can almost float; short-footed boots for Gurkhas; sandals for West African soldiers; special boots for the Flying Corps; and last but not least, mosquito boots for our soldiers fighting in tropical countries.

It is a mistake to try to bring all kinds of trees to the same shape. Different varieties naturally branch out in different ways. To prune all to the same form may badly cripple the bearing qualities.

Flea-beetles have in recent years been quite destructive to young cabbage, radish and turnip plants. Tobacco dust applied freely will drive the pests off. Lime flavoured with paris green or slug shot will also help. Lime and tobacco dust freely applied will dispose of the radish, cabbage and onion maggot.

"A hoe set at the right angle of your back saves many an ache," says the Practical Farm Journal. "If your hoe needs changing a bit the blacksmith stands ready to do the job. Ten cents will do it and help you and him, too."

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF MOTHER SUPERIOR OF MOUNT ST. JOSEPH

Celebrated To-day When Mother Clotilde Received Many Congratulations Upon Her Long Service in the Sisterhood

PONTIFICAL MASS CELEBRATED

The golden jubilee of her reception into the sisterhood of St. Joseph was celebrated this morning by the Rev. Mother Clotilde, the Mother Superior of Mount St. Joseph. On the 8th of May, 1866, in Toronto, she took her final vows of obedience, poverty, and chastity, and has spent the intervening fifty years in an unbroken round of service as a teacher at St. Catharines and in Toronto, as Mother Superior of St. Joseph's Hospital in Port Arthur, and finally in the charge of which she is the present incumbent. The Sisters of St. Joseph came to Peterborough in 1899, with Mother Austin as the superior. Following her death, in 1892, Mother Clotilde was elected as her successor in the same year, and at each recurring elections every three years the honourable and responsible position has been unanimously returned to her.

Rev. Mother Clotilde was born in the County of Derry, Ireland. To-day she exhibits the energy, alertness, and kindliness that has characterized her life's work and her friends this morning showered their congratulations upon her with many wishes from all over Ontario that she may be spared to longer service.

In connection with the jubilee His Lordship Bishop O'Brien celebrated Pontifical High Mass this morning at 9 o'clock in the chapel at the Mount, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and lights. Monsignor Casey of Lindsay was the Archpriest, Rev. Dean McColl, deacon, and Rev. P. J. McGuire, subdeacon. Rev. V. J. McAuley, Master of Ceremonies, Rev. Thos. O'Donnell of Toronto, President of the Church Extension Society of Canada, preached the sermon, taking as his subject the religious life. After the last gospel, Bishop O'Brien also spoke a short adress, congratulating the jubilarian upon her anniversary. The Sisters' choir sang Battmann's Mass in F, giving it a splendid rendition.

Among the clergy present were Monsignor Murray of Cobourg, Rev. E. J. Devine, S. J., of Montreal, Dean Murray of Brockville, Father McBrady, C.S.B., of Toronto, Father Collins, C.S.B., Sandwich, Rev. D. A. Casey, editor of the Kingston Freeman, and Rev. Fathers Phelan, J. J. O'Brien, F. J. O'Sullivan of Port Hope, J. J. O'Sullivan, Victoria Road, J. J. Guiry of Kinmount, P. J. Galvin of Downeyville, Scanlon of Grafton, Meagher of Lakefield, Scott of East City, and McHugh of the Cathedral Staff. Bishop Scollard of North Bay did not arrive in time for the mass, but is expected to visit Mother Clotilde during the day. The Mother Superior of Toronto and several of the sisters were also present. When Mother Clotilde was first elected Superior of the sisterhood in this diocese which then comprised that of Sault Ste Marie and Peterborough there were eight convents and 81 sisters, to-day the diocese of Pembroke and Ottawa have been added to her jurisdiction with seventeen convents and 260 sisters.

Mother Clotilde received numerous floral remembrances from many friends in Peterborough.

German People Are Not Excited Over The Note

Press Comments (by Wireless) - Only One Berlin Paper Shows Disposition to Criticize Germany's "Doubly Difficult Sacrifice"

BERLIN, May 8.—The text of the German reply to the American note was printed in extra editions of the newspapers, but caused hardly a ripple of excitement to crowds gathered around the newspaper offices, and the people in general showed marked calmness. Noted restraint was shown in the limited comment made on the note in the papers. Even Count Von Reventlow, usually a cautie critic of German-American relations, disposes of the matter with a single line referring his readers to previous editorials for his opinion. The Kuenz Zeitung also contented itself with referring to previous discussions.

On the whole the German press appears satisfied with the tenor of the reply, although there are indications that the attitude of the newspapers is not wholly uninspired.

A Sincere Wish.

The Vossische Zeitung says: —"The note is inspired by a sincere wish to avoid a break with the U. S. The Government, in ignoring the tone of President Wilson's note, has gone straight to the point wherein there is a possibility of an agreement by offering to conduct the submarine campaign within the limits of antebellum international law. This is the last and the furthest concession that Germany can make."

The Taegliche Rundschau, while expressing the opinion that the note should have taken a different character, urges that the expression of divergent views is unwarranted at this moment, and that everybody should subordinate his own judgment and stand behind the Government. "After Germany has undertaken this doubly difficult sacrifice," says this paper, "Germans are entitled to expect America to keep her promise to restore the freedom of the seas as against all belligerents. It is now up to the American people to show before all the world whether their purpose was to protect the rights of humanity or to act as England's ally with a view to cripple us and frustrate our victory."

The Berlin Tageblatt expresses the hope that the note will attain its aim in preventing war with America.

THE RUSSIANS HAVE A MOBILE FIELD FORTRESS

Since the outbreak of war new problems in defensive and offensive weapons have been continually arising.

As a result, quite a number of devices have been invented in the nature of shields, armor, etc. One of the earliest of these is the entrenching spade. It is constructed to be used, also, as a shield, and provided with a hole through which a rifle barrel may be thrust for firing. Another is the sectional armor plate of a certain type of auto, so made that each section may be taken from the machine and carried by a soldier, and used as a body shield, such as in the ancient days when lances, swords, and shields were the principal implements of war.

Then, a little later, came the steel helmets to protect against shrapnel bullets, and shell splinters.

Recently, the Russian infantry has developed a large movable steel shield, made in duplicate sections, with steeply inclined front face provided with ports or rifle openings, each section large enough to shelter and protect six men. The rigid part of the shield is about three and a half feet high, and its lower edge is about two feet from the ground. To this lower edge is hinged a bottom section which is free to swing rearwardly and upwardly, so that, as the shield is moved forward it will pass freely over any unevenness and the lower section will swing down as soon as the rock, hummock, or other obstruction is passed.

Each section has two large wheels, one at each end, and a set of smaller rear wheels with a push bar between them, and extending practically the full length of the section. In use, the squad of each shield grasps the push bar and rushes the shield forward into alinement with the other sections, thus forming a steadily advancing steel field fortress. Each section is provided with an extension by which it may be connected to an adjacent section, thus forming a continuous stationary fort, when desired.

It is a very valuable equipment when attacking an entrenched enemy across open level ground, as is frequently occurring in the present war.

Northcliffe's Impression of Leader of French Army

Says Gen. Joffre Likes the Canadian and Australian Soldier—Has the Health of a Country Squire Who Rides to the Hounds

(By Lord Northcliffe in the London Daily Mail.)

When on a previous occasion I had the honour of being received by General Joffre his office consisted of a small bedroom in an hotel very well known to English people.

When I visited him the other day I found that he had exchanged that very humble apartment for a room rather more suitable for the working quaters of a man who has to receive commissions and deputations as part of his daily routine. It is even yet a simple milieu for the head of one of the mightiest forces in the world, I emphasize this fact because there appears to be some sort of curious, all-prevailing belief in the public mind that army headquarters are abodes of luxury.

My friend Stanley Washburn, the wise and war-learned correspondent of the Times with the Russian armies told me that such rumours were current in Petrograd about the Grand Duke's quarters. Numberless whisperers made the same suggestions about the British General Headquarters, all quite untrue, as I happened to know from personal observation. In Paris there have been newspaper hints about grandeur at the Grand Quarter-General at —.

The surroundings and habits of General Joffre are, I know, as simple as it is possible for a man of his position to maintain with dignity.

General Joffre likes punctuality. On my former visit I was received to the minute, and this time we arrived a l'heure, and were escorted at once past one or two sentries and secretaries to the modest chamber in which he works. Joffre is dressed exactly like any other general in the French army, with the simple three stars that denote his rank. There are many who think that it would be better for his position as generalissimo if he were made a Marshal of France. That, however, is a matter for the French themselves. It is certainly anomalous that a generalissimo should have to give directions to field-marshals.

THE GERMAN ARMY TO-DAY.

I have already described General Joffre in another newspaper, so I will be brief as to his personality. He is of medium height, is largely made, has a massive head ("such wonderful blue eyes," an ecstatic American girl said to me in Paris), heavy eyebrows, and deliberate movements in manner and speech. The war has upset all the ridiculous opinions we entertained for many years of French people, chiefly doubtless as a result of caricature. The great soldier always gives me the impression of an English north-countryman. He has a chin whose width will test to the uttermost any politician who tries to trip him.

In front of him on a table were, as he told me, the German communiques. Also, lying there, was a long list of the goods entering Germany through neutral countries. We discussed a great many matters in connection with the war, which I am not at liberty to print, but he will have no objection, I am sure, to my stating that he expressed satisfaction and confidence in Sir William Robertson and Sir Douglas Haig, and that he spoke warmly of the development of the British Army, and equally warmly of the Canadians and Australians. The large, firm hands that rested on the table as he leaned forward and talked quietly and confidently as to the war are those of a man of immense determination. "Pere" Joffre, as his soldiers affectionately call him, has no underestimation of the enemy, but like all the allied soldiers of the western front he knows by all sorts of signs that the German army of 1916 is not the German army of 1914.

ENORMOUS INDUSTRY.

Joffre made many private enemies and thousands of public friends by the remorseless way in which he got rid of inefficient generals, many of them personal acquaintances, at the outset of the war. He has continued that policy, with the result that today the officers of the French army are probably the youngest in the field. There are many lookers-on at the present war among ourselves and our allies, who wish that the process could be extended to our own lines. It does not need any great powers of observation, even while waiting at Victoria Station for incoming officers home from the front, to realise that in our wonderfully improving army there are still many to whom the milder activities of Cheltenham, Bath and Southsea would be more suitable than the strenuous life of the torturous lines of trenches familiar to the public in the newspaper maps.

The industry of General Joffre is enormous. He rises every morning before six, lunches at eleven-thirty, walks a good deal, dines at halfpast six in the evening, and is asleep at eight-thirty. He knows every kilometre of the whole of his vast line by personal investigation and constant inspection. He has frequently travelled as much as two hundred and fifty miles in a day in his car, and so that there may be no delay his own motor-car is always followed by another in case there should be a breakdown.

"How is he bearing the war?" people asked me in Paris. I can truly say that General Joffre in the heat of the battle of Verdun looks strong, well, and cheerful. On my previous visit I thought he was showing signs of war fatigue. To-day in the midst of the colossal series of battles that has lasted for weeks the head of the wonderful French war machine has the healthy look of a country squire in those good old days two years ago, when men rode to hounds a couple of days a week.

Fined For Exceeding The Speed Limit

Detective Newhall Was Aboard Street Car That Was Outdistanced by a Motorcycle

At four minutes after six o'clock on Saturday, April 29th, Harry W. Ristow was journeying southward on a motorcycle. Travelling in the same direction on a street car was Detective Newhall. The latter swore that Ristow was travelling at a greater speed than fifteen miles an hour. The speed of the car was estimated at twelve miles an hour. According to the evidence of Detective Newhall, Ristow passed the car at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets, and when the street car reached the C.P.R. station Ristow had reached Perry streets. That is to say Ristow is alleged to have covered about five or six blacks while the street car travelled a distance of two city blocks. Detective Newhall said that Ristow was travelling at a speed not less than twenty miles an hour.

Magistrate Dumble closed the case with a fine of five dollars.

Blacklister Fined.

A local blacklister pleaded guilty to a charge of being under the influence of liquor while on the blacklist. He paid the usual fine of ten dollars. Defendant narrated the circumstances by which he came in possession of the liquor. It appears that he ordered a keg of lager by telephone to be sent to a boathouse along the river. When the driver arrived late Saturday evening he found a lamp dimly burning in the boathouse. On a table beside the lamp was sufficient money to pay for the suds. The driver took the money, left a receipted bill and departed. During this proceeding defendant concealed himself behind a couple of canoes that were in the boathouse.

"Why did you hide?" enquired Chief Thompson.

"It was to my advantage to do so," replied defendant.

Too Many Doctors Joining the Army

Such is the Opinion of London Paper—Fears For Civil Population

Danger is Seen in Case of a Serious Epidemic.

The demand made by the Director-General of England to induce some 5,000 more doctors up to the age of 45 to join the ranks of the Royal Army Medical Corps and go out to the front has, says The London Chronicle, "raised a storm of protest in medical circles, where it is felt that the form of semi-compulsion now adopted by the local committees set up to deal with this question is anything but fair to a body of men who have already responded in the most noble manner to the call of the War Office—no fewer than 10,000 out of 23,000 doctors have already joined the Royal Army Medical Corps.

"What is even more important is the fact that the controversy that this problem has provoked has begun to wake the public up to the extremely serious state of affairs since the civilian population of some 40,000,000 souls have been left to the care of 10,000 doctors, who, beside their ordinary duties, have to undertake a great deal of extra insurance work, as well as to tend the numerous sick and wounded from the front who are filling the wards of our great civilian hospitals all over the country.

"Medical men to-day represent one of our most precious national assets; one that cannot be replaced for many years to come, owing to the fact that the great majority of medical students have already gone to war, leaving few, if any, to fill up their diminished ranks.

"What is more, medical officers of health have likewise, with wanton waste, been pressed into the service of the Royal Army Medical Corps in much numbers that one dare hardly contemplate what would be the fate of our huge civilian population (which, incidentally, includes many thousands of munition workers) were some widespread and contagious epidemic to break out at the present moment."

Graduate Nurses Raise Rates to $21

One of Last Cities in Canada to Make the Increase—Officers Elected

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Chapter of Graduate Nurses Association of Ontario was held Wednesday, May 3rd at 3.30 p. m., in Public Library. The President, Miss Deyell, occupied the chair.

As it was the annual meeting the most important business was the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President—Miss Dixon.
Treasurer—Miss Ferguson.
Secretary—Miss Simons.

On account of the high cost of living and all other graduate nurses in surrounding towns and cities raising the rates, the Peterborough Chapter Graduate Nurses have decided to charge $21 per week, to take effect in the month of June.

Peterborough is the last town to raise rates. All the other towns and cities in Canada have been charging $21 and $25 per week for some time.

Mr. Peter Campbell, Manager, Retires From The Bank of Toronto

The commercial and business public will learn with a sense of both regret and loss, that Mr. Peter Campbell, city manager of the Bank of Toronto, will resign that position at the end of the month of May. Mr. Campbell retires after 29 years of banking experience, 25 of which have been passed in Peterborough, a continuous length of service, that speaks volumes for his efficiency and judicious discharge of his duties. Mr. Campbell will be succeeded in the local management by Mr. E. J. H. Vanston, of the Hastings street, Vancouver, branch of the Bank of Toronto

Preached On Needs of Home Missions

Rev. Thos O'Donnell of Toronto President of the Catholic Church Extension Society of Canada, delivered special sermons at St. Peter's Cathedral Sunday morning, and in the evening at the Church of the Sacred Heart, dealing with the question of Home Missions. He particularly emphasized the need a of struggling missions in the West and in New Ontario. In both churches movements were inaugurated for systematic giving for this work.

FIND BODIES OF INDIANS.

Excavation in Oregon Unearth Remains of Red Warriors.

While excavating for a basement near the river bank at Oregon City, Ore., men employed by Frank Busch have uncovered twenty skeletons of Indians in one hole.

The bodies are supposed to be the remains of Indians killed in battle, for in one or two cases arrowheads have been found caught between the bones.

The first trace of the bones was found early in the week, when the workmen uncovered a skull. It was buried by itself, and Mr. Busch, who has studied the find carefully, believes that it belonged to a chief or leader.

To prevent disturbing the bones the workmen began excavating in another place and they found a hole with a radius of about six feet which Mr. Busch estimates contains the bones of at least twenty Indians. The skeletons are lying like the spokes of a wheel with the skulls in the centre. Over the top of the grave was a thick, hard crust of baked clay that was hardened like a stone.

T. R. CALLS IT RO-ZE-VELDT.

Colonel's Name Has Three Syllables, Accented on the First.

Chauncey M. Depew, who has known T. R. from babyhood, says "Rosa-veldt," with the accent on the first half of Rosa, declares a writer in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The dictionaries say "Ro-se-velt," the accent on "Ro." It is beyond me why nine persons out of ten persist in pronouncing the last half of the colonel's name as if it were spelled Rose-felt. That "felt" is abominably wrong. The ex-President himself says Ro-se-veldt, all spread out nice and soft like, with none of your Roosey or Rosy "felts" about it. There are three distinct syllables in his name, instead of two. As T. R. himself, like Henry Clay, would rather be right than President, although his cohorts declare he was both and will be again. I assume that the men who vote for him ought to know how to call their hero.

To the Editor of the Examiner

Dear Sir,—Was glad to see "Yankee's" letter in the paper. Would like the poisoners to work down this way, or better still, if the dog tax was trebled, it would help the revenue and maybe that would help to stop the number of dogs loose on the streets, destroying gardens, etc., half of them with no tag or old ones on.

Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper.

Yours truly,

FISHING FOR SUBMARINES

Germans Fail to Blow Up New Type of Submarine When Caught.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The following story is sent from Paris by Herbert Cozey:

"It was like a Christmas pantomime," said the Englishman, "to see the lid of the conning tower on the submarine pop open and all the Germans spurt out. Like ginger beer, they were." The Englishman told the story to a few persons at a certain Embassy the other day. He had just returned from a tour of duty on one of the vessels that fish for submarines. He was a bit cheery and talkative, this Englishman. The solid land felt so pleasant beneath his unaccustomed heels that he expanded.

They were on the lookout for the new German submarines — the big new boats which can travel 5,000 miles without revitualling.

One morning they sloped lazily down the channel, a net stretched between them, as though they were the innocent but nasty fishers they seemed to be. Except that the net was of steel chain, and the fish they sought carries torpedoes in its head.

There came a heave at the net, and before the submarine could back out it had been caught in the meshes. This net has its own secret.

"We hauled in," said the Englishman.

The operation seems to have been quite simple. Windlasses were set going and the underseas boat was brought to the surface of the water. The allies have been particularly anxious to catch a specimen of this particular sort of fish, so to speak.

It is presumed to have many new devices— one which enables it to lie on the floor of a shallow channel, for example, and send its men out through a door to lay mines, and a new mirror to take the place of the old periscope —which the allies wish to examine closely.

"The conning tower came up," said the Englishman, "and then — whoosh!"

Its lid flew open like the top of a trick box. Germans began to boil out of it. Then they swam to the fisher boat and asked to be taken in.

The submarine itself began to sink. The last man out had opened the sea-cocks and the boat was filling with water. As it filled its weight became too great for the light net which held it. It broke through the meshes and sank to the bottom.

At the bow and stern of each of the new submarines a bomb is placed, said the Englishman. Wires run from these bombs to the conning tower, and it is the duty of the commandant to explode these bombs and sink the boat rather than permit it to fall into the hands of the enemy.

"I regret greatly," said the commandant of the submarine, "that something had gone wrong with the wires. I tried them, but the bomb would not explode."

As a last resort he had opened the sea cocks and not until the water was splashing about the knees of the men inside had he permitted them to open the lid of the steel coffin and escape.

He laughed in the faces of his English captors as he told the story. He thought the secret of the submarine was safe. He told them it was sunk 100 fathoms deep and that it could not be raised.

"But the water was only 10 fathoms deep," said the Englishman. "We'll have it up inside of a fortnight."

A Lack of Bait.—The teacher of a Sunday school class tells the following story: The superintendent, who believed in developing the reasoning powers of the children, asked one of the smaller classes how Noah would be likely to spend his time on the ark. A little hand in the rear of the room was raised, and the superintendent requested the child to tell how he thought Noah would pass the time. The boy stood first on one foot and then on the other, and at last said: "Fishin'!" Just then another small boy snapped his fingers. "Noah boy snapped his fingers. "Noah wouldn't fish very long," said the boy. "Why not?" asked the puzzled questioner. "He couldn't, because there were only two worms on the ark."

Judge Huyche this morning heard the argument in connection with the action entered by Mr. Arthur Kingdon against Leader Bros., alleging an infringement of their patent on an illustrated war service picture. The Leader Bros' work has been exhibited on the market on recent Saturdays, and has attracted considerable attention. It has an opening for the picture of a soldier with an inset position for his name, regiment and other facts of service. There is a battle scene and other patriotic touches.

The White Star Liner "Cymric" Torpedoed By Submarine

SANK EARLY THIS MORNING BUT NO LIVES WERE LOST

Cmyric, Torpedoed Yesterday Sank While Attempting To Make An Irish Coast

All the Officers and Crew Were Saved---Apparently No Passengers Were Travelling on the Liner

LONDON, May 9.—The White Star liner Cymric, torpedoed yesterday afternoon by a German submarine, sank at 3 o'clock this morning, while attempting to make her way into an Irish port.

All the 150 officers and crew of the Cymric were saved, according to Lloyd's despatch from Queenstown. An earlier message said that several vessels were proceeding to the Cymric's assistance, and it is assumed that the rescue steamers took off the crew. The Dutch steamer Grotina sent the following wireless message via the Valentia, Ireland Station: "Cymric sank three this morning. All hands safe."

Prophet On Liner Sees The United States In War

The course of the French liner Chicago, which reached New York, a few days ago from Bordeaux, was more or less affected by planetary influence, according to one of the cabin passengers. Prof. Wilhe de Kerlor, a magnetic Pole, who in addition to other psychic activities established the Occult Club in Paris. Prof. Willis admits that he is merely an instrument in the cosmic grip of the inscrutable, which, he intimated, has a habit of playing favorites in war time. He looks upon himself as of the preferred stock of planetary bosses.

He does not deride astrology and he distinctly declared that he believed not only in the planetary directing forces but also in palmistry. He translated the lines of the ship news reporters' palms flatteringly, perhaps hoping to see his name in the papers this morning.

Capt. Mace of the Chicago was a bit impressed by the professor when the palmist announced that the liner would not sail from Bordeaux at midnight on Saturday, April 8, but would get away at 7.30 the next morning. The professor said this was entirely in accordance with the juxtaposition of certain planets on the psychic job of working out his prpheeies. The planets have these little personal preferences, as is well known in planetary and psychic circles.

WHY THE SKIPPER HID

Well, the Chicago did not get away at midnight and did sail at 7.30 a.m., Uranus being the chief planet arranging the schedule. Furthermore, the professor said, the trip would be pleasant except the last day and the liner would dock early Thursday evening, and if she did he would kiss the skipper. She did, and that is why, maybe, the skipper hid himself after warping the Chicago in and leaving the bridge.

The professor came to America to lecture and take a post-graduate course in psychology at Harvard. A dispassionate review of the planets and other nearer things convinces him, he said, that the war would last two and a half years more and that the Allies would win. There was a strong force working for peace but it would be ineffective; Germany would continue her submarine warfare despite the representations of the United States, and all the portents pointed to this country entering the conflict. However, great men had been known to rule their stars, and perhaps that might be the case in this climacteric period.

Yes, the professor had been overcome by a planetary vision affecting the destiny of the United States. He had seen letters dancing in the stellar spaces, juggled by the hands of Destiny. He saw the letters forming a name, or making an effort to do so, as in a movie show announcement. The first letter of the name, that of the next President of the United States was R. He could not say that this meant any particular person, as the word jugglers were too swift to permit him to see clearly all the letters. He distinctly noted L and T, however, and the ship news men might make of this anything that suited their fancy.

ARREST WAS A SURPRISE.

Gen. Soukhomlinoff Submitted Quietly to the Police.

LONDON, May 9. — The morning newspapers publish long accounts concerning the arrest of Gen. W. A. Soukhomlinoff, former Russian Minister of War, who is a prisoner in the fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul in Petrograd. The exact nature of the charge against him is not known. The arrest was made by a large number of officials of the Public Prosecutor's Department, accompanied by police, whose appearance at the general's home took the ex-minister by surprise.

After preliminary examination the authorities searched the home of the general and cised four chests full of documents.

General Soukhomlinoff submitted to arrest calmly, saying that he was acting in obedience to law.

A diary seized by the authorities indicates that the general recently had been living very frugally, in order to save money for his wife, who is much younger than he.

German Offensive Again Stopped Before Verdun

Battle of Hill 304 Cost Germans Ten Thousand Men—Enemy Driven From Trenches in Flanders

WASHINGTON, May 9.—President Wilson in his note to the German government in answer to the submarine policy, declares he will not drag Britain into the controversy.

PARIS, May 9.—The German offensive again has stopped at Verdun. The battle of Hill 304 cost the Germans ten thousand men.

PETROGRAD, May 9.—In the Caucasus region the Turks retreated, evacuating the whole of their front line trenches.

LONDON, May 9. — The Germans were driven from trenches in Flanders by the British at some points.

SWISS BELIEVE CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER CASES

Once Condemned U. S. For Selling Munitions to Allies

BERNE, May 9.—Switzerland has, in the main, stopped criticising the United tates for selling ammunition to the allies.

In the northern part of Switzerland four months ago life was unbearable for an American citizen. Pro-German Swiss used to say: "It's a shame for you Americans to sell ammunition to the allies. If you would only stop it the war would end. You are keeping murder alive."

TIMES BECOME HARD.

All of that talk has now become a thing of the past. At the beginning of the war Switzerland decided not to sell any ammunition to either side. was changed. Times became hard. Factories closed; thousands of men were out of work. The pressure on the government became so great that finally it was decided to sell ammunition.

RUSHING TO MAKE AMMUNITION.

To-day there are seventy-five factories in Switzerland turning out ammunition. Both ally and German contractors swarm the leading hotels in the large cities buying ammunition. Godo times have come again, and an American citizen may walk the streets unchallenged and uncriticized.

The talkative pro-German Swiss are making ammunition for Germany, and the western and southern workingmen are making their factories hum in the effort to fill French orders for shells.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Kaiser So Anxious To Bring An Early Peace That He Will Make Proposal Himself

If Neutrals Will Not---United States Reply to Germany Says Relations Will Not Be Severed While Germany's Orders to Sub. Commanders Are Obeyed.

LONDON, May 9.—A despatch says the Kaiser is so anxious to bring an early peace that he will make the proposal himself if neutrals will not.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—It is understood the United States reply to Germany says relations will not be severed while Germany's orders to submarine commanders are obeyed.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The British steamer City of Lucknow, Alexandria for Liverpool, was torpedoed without darning April 30th, sinking in ten minutes. The crew was saved.

LONDON, May 9.—It is officially announced that Australian and New Zealand troops have arrived in France, and have taken over a portion of the front.

LONDON, May 9.—Financial Secretary of the Admiralty in the Commons said England is building dirigibles of a Zeppelin type. The number constructed is unknown.

Torpedoing of "Cymric" Puts New Submarine Policy To The Test

WASHINGTON, May 9.—With President Wilson's acceptance of Germany's new altered policy of submarine warfare, only to-day received in Berlin, that new policy may already have been put to the test by submarine commanders. The torpedoing of the liner "Cymric," if it was without warning, apparently violates the very orders against attacking merchantmen which the German Imperial Government has declared are in effect. The fact that no Americans were aboard, Washington officials said to-day, does not enter into the case. Germany has declared her orders now to submarine commanders, who are intended to confine the operation of the war for the rest of its duration to the fighting forces of the belligerents. The "Cymric" was not of the fighting forces. What effect the "Cymric" incident may have is problematical.

If Americans were aboard, quick disavowal of the attack and proper reparation would be expected. The United States Government has made maintenance of friendly relations with Germany contingent on abandonment of such attacks as that reported yesterday.

Berlin's Streets Are Silent Few People In Hotels

Few Motors or Taxis--Small Menus in Restaurants---Rubber Goods Practically Unobtainable

LONDON, May. 6.—The Daily Express publishes the following, written by a Russian correspondent who visited Berlin as a neutral.

I walk up Friedrichstrasse, then along Leipsigstrasse right up to Leipziger Plats, and then through Wilhelmstrasse and other streets to Unter den Linden. I have noticed already the remarkable scarcity of people and the untidiness of the principal streets, and now I was struck with the small number of people between the ages of 20-40 whom one meets in civilian dress.

Excluding the women and the grey military figures, those I met in the street on my first evening were almost exclusively elderly people and cripples. From the hotel to the corner of Friedrichstrasse. I counted four hunchbacks, one dwarf and about a dozen paralysed and lame people not invalids, but deformed from birth).

The absence of motor cars and of carriages in general makes the streets of Berlin unusually quiet and unpleasantly silent.

I noticed another innovation—the nightwatchmen have been substituted by women. There are women on the trams as conductors and drivers. Women and old men drive the omnibuses—and there are a good many women cabbies.

The Unter den Linden is silent and deserted, although the lights of the cinema shows and various cabarets are on.

DESERTED CAFES

Here are the two famous Berlin cafes patronised by foreigners—the Cafe Bauer and Cafe Victoria. Formerly between 10 and 11 o'clock in the evening one had to wait about half an hour for a place at a table. Now in each of them there are not more than ten visitors engrossed in reading their papers.

I walk on and enter one of the large beer restaurants. Here—the same gaping emptiness, and instead of the usual waiters dressed in white—waitresses. I am served with an omelette and some dish of potatoes. For the first time I make use of my bread card. Two little squares of 25 grammes each are torn off, and I am handed a parchment bag bearing the inscription. "50 grammes bread, against delivery of bread card only."

The bag contains a little roll half the size of our corporal "rogue". This little roll is just as grey, raw and unpleasant in taste as the bread in the restaurant car; the beer its the same, only it has gone up in price and is now 45 pfennig a tankard instead of the former 30 pfennig.

500 ROOMS—30 GUESTS.

By the time I leave the restaurant it is nearly midnight. The streets are quite empty; the cafes and automatic restaurants are beginning to close.

Berlin has left its old habit of night life, and goes to bed early. I direct my steps to the hotel.

I go into the lift, and again an innovation—instead of a life-boy there is now a "Hausfrau" (this is the new name for the Hated English lift). On the table in my room there is a list of visitors staying in the hotel I count, and see that out of 500 rooms in the Central Hotel only 30 are occupied, and this during the Christmas holidays, when Berlin is usually full of visitors, especially from the provinces.

UNRECOGNIZABLE

Even in the daytime, when the flow of everyday life is at its highest the city is unrecognisable. There are of course more people about than in the evening, but the absence of motors, taxis, buses, and of the usual noise and bustle of the traffic raises a queer, almost oppressive, sensation especially in one who knew the Berlin of old. It was unheard of in Berlin that even in rainy weather one should have to wear goloshes, but now the slush and the dirt in the streets and on the sidewalks equally that of a provincial Russian town.

A DEAL IN RUBBER.

I had left behind in Copenhagen my Russian goloshes as a precautionary measure, and I had therefore to go to a shop and get some new ones (American) and pay 102½ marks for them.

I was surprised at the high price asked, and to my query the lady shop assistant informed me that Germany is now suffering an acute rubber famine that the import of rubber articles was stopped (British blockade), and that the stocks of raw rubber had long ago been requisitioned.

"We are selling the last pairs of goloshes, and shall not be able to get any more. Why, we cannot even get rubber suspenders in the whole of Berlin! You read that!" explained the shop assistant and pointed to a bill that was hanging over the pay-desk, and which one can see in every large shop in Germany and Austria. The bill read:

"On account of shortage of rubber, benzine and labor, the firm cannot deliver goods to addresses of purchasers."

WHAT CITY DOES NOT SEE

There is an apparent absence in the town of any wounded soldiers, both in the streets, cafes, restaurants, bier-halles and other public places. Nowhere that I went did I come across any wounded soldiers or cripples I subsequently discovered that most of the hospitals are situated close to the fighting lines, and all convalescent soldiers are sent to the heart of the country; the Berlin hospitals and other places of medical assistance for soldiers are carefully hidden and screened.

The secret of success with early planting of such crops as peas, beets and beans is to sow the seed at only half the depth of the later sowings. That is particularly the case on heavy soils. Seeding on light soil should always be at a slightly greater depth than on heavy soil.

CAN'T CHEW TOBACCO; ASKS $5,000 DAMAGES

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 9.—Alleging that he was deprived of the ability to chew tobacco by injuries he suffered when a waggon on which he was riding and a street car collided, Hubert Bowman, a teamster, is suing the Indianapolis Traction and Terminal Company, for $5,000 damages.

Bowman was driving a load of sand. He was thrown off to the pavement and his lower jaw was dislocated. His complaint says he had used tobacco for years and since the accident has been "deprived of the pleasure and enjoyment" he formerly had.

Mrs. Mary Soper Cisco, the original "Bloomer Girl," died in Passaic yesterday. She was sixty-eight years old. Her husband, Joseph Cisco, died a few months ago. She was a daughter of the late Rev. Benjamin Soper. Mrs. Cisco attempted to enter a church in bloomers one Sunday morning, but was stopped at the door. On one occasion she appeared in a male dress suit, silk hat and cane. Mrs. Cisco said her continued health was due to the fact she never wore corsets.

DOCTOR SAYS

Take Iron For Your Blood, Phosphorous For Your Nerves

People have been suffering untold agony for years destroying for their nerves when there real trouble was, want of phosphorus in their system.

Doctors are surprised after many years of experience to find that they were unable to find that the real cause of nervous weak run down people was due directly to lack of phosphorus for the nervous system and iron for the blood circulation. The moment that phosphorus is given you can notice the nerves beginning to tighten and you begin to get control of your energy once again. Without phosphoryl the system becomes weak and your stomach is unable to digest the little food that you eat, your liver becomes torpid, the kidneys start to pain you, the blood becomes clogged with impurities, the color of your face is muddy, then your hands, head and legs begin to shake through loss of control of your nerves. One in taking medicine for kidney trouble another in taking laxative every night, others taking poisonous spring tonics, some can't sleep for twinkling nerves and some give up all hopes thinking they are too old and there is no hope for them. You have almost ruined your system and vitality by taking all these medicines for something that never relief you and you have no person to blame now but yourself if you do not start at once by going to your druggist and get a few cents worth of Ironized Phosphorus with iron and take one or two tablets after each good meal. Give yourself a good fee cold bath every morning, rubbing yourself well, eat plenty of good wholesome vegetables, fruit and drink plenty of water every time you think of it. Here is good advice which millionaires are paying specialists thousands of dollars for to look well, eat well, sleep well, work well, digest well. As we are here only for a short stay at why not be healthy, strong, vigorous and enjoy our short, sweet life. People can talk as they like about all the wonders, life and death, stories about medicines that have cured them, but when you come right down to scientific proofs, hard facts, there has been nothing in medical science to compare with just ordinary Ironized Phosphorus with iron to restore wrecked systems, put vigorous life in old people, color in your cheeks, clear thinking, strong nerves and strength like a giant.

Ironized Phosphorus with iron does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine or any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. It is easy to take, does not upset the stomach and is taken up by the system immediately making you feel better at once. It is dispensed in this city as either at F. C. Webber's store at the a box.

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"
BY EWART WILLIAMS

CHAPTER VIII.
JIMMIE THOMAS'S STRATEGY

On a chart the island of Grande Mignon bears the same relation to surrounding islands that a motherships bears to a flock of submarines. Westward her coast is rocky and forbidding, being nothing but a succession of frowning headlands that rise almost perpendicularly from the sea. It is one of the most desolate stretches of coast in moderate latitudes, for no one lives there nor has ever lived there except a few hermit dulce pickers during the summer months.

Along the east coast that looks over the Atlantic are strung the villages, nestled in bays and coves. And it is out from this coast, that the dozen little islands lie. First and partially across the mouth of the bay where the fishing fleet lies is Long Island. Then comes High Duck, Low Duck and Big Duck. Farther south there are Ross's, Whitehead and Big Wood Islands, not to mention spits, points and ledges of rock innumerable and all honoured with names.

It was the fact of so many treacherous ledges and reefs to be navigated in a four knot tide that was agitating the half dozen "guests" at Mis' Shannon's boarding house. It need hardly be said that Mis' Shannon was a widow but her distinction lay in being called mis' instead of ma.

She made a livelihood by putting up the "runners," who made periodical trips with their sample cases for the benefit of the local traders, and took in occasional "rusticators," or summer tourists of who had courage enough to dare the passage of the strait in the tiny steamer.

The principal auditor of the harrowing tales that were flying about the table over the fish chowder was Mr. Aubrey Templeton, the young lawyer from St. John's who had arrived on the steamer that afternoon. Just opposite to Mr. Templeton at the table sat Jimmie Thomas, who, being a bachelor, had made his home with Miss Shannon for the last three years. And it was Jimmie who had held the table spellbound with his tales of danger an dnarrow escapes.

He had just concluded a yarn told in all seriousness, of how a shark had leaped over the back of a dory in Whale Cove and the two men in the dory had barely escaped with their lives.

"And I know the two men it happened to," [illegible] "for I knew one of 'em; the other's dead. Ol' Jasper Schofield never got over the scare that he got that day."

The lawyer sat bolt upright in his chair.

"Do you know the Schofield's?" he demanded of Thomas.

"Guess I ought to. I have been dory mate with Code when the old man was skipper. A finer young fellow ain't on the island."

"Do you happen to know where he is?" asked Templeton. "I came to Grande Mignon on several important matters and one of them was to see him. I've tried to locate the fellow, but he seems to have disappeared."

"Why, I seen him to-day myself in Castalia!" cried Thomas. "He's up there hirin' men to ship with him. Said that he was going to stay all night. I know the very house he's in."

"You do?"

"Yes."

"Do you think I could get there to-night?"

"You might." Jimmie looked at his watch. "The Seal Cove mail wagon's gone long ago, but I'll take you down in my motor dory if you'll come right now."

Templeton did not even wait to finish his supper but went out with Thomas immediately. A few minutes' walk brought them to the little beach where the dory was drawn up and they were soon on their way. But before they left Templeton scribbled a message on a piece of paper and left it with Mrs. Shannon to be given to Nat Burns, who, he said, was to call for him at half past seven.

Thomas kept the nose of his dory pointed to the lights of several houses that gleamed across the bay. They were not however the lights of Castalia, which were almost invisible farther south. But Templeton, who had never been on Grande Mignon before, sat blissfully ignorant of this circumstance.

Later, however, he remembered that his accommodating guide had chuckled inexplicably during most of the trip.

Twenty minutes ride in the chill night air brought them to a long, low pier that extended out into the black water. Above on the hillside the windows of the big fishing settlement on Long Island gleamed comfortable and yellow.

Thomas ran his dory close to the landing stage and then reversed the engine so that at the time most convenient for Templeton to step off the boat had lost all motion. The lawyer landed but Jimmie did not shut off his engine. Instead he turned it on full speed and backed away from the dock.

"Hey, you, where are you going?" called Templeton, vaguely alarmed for the first time.

"Back to the village," answered Thomas, sending his motor into the forward speed. "I've got something very important to do there."

"But in which house is Schofield?" cried the other. 'You said that you would show me."

There was no reply and it is possible that due to the noise of the engine Thomas had not heard the protest at all.

Nat Burns arrived at Shannon's boarding house slightly in advance of the time named and read Templeton's note saying that he had gone to Castalia to nab Code while he had the chance.

"Who did Templeton go with?" he asked fearfully of the landlady.

"Mr. Thomas," replied that worthy.

"My God!" rapped out Burns in such a tone of disgust and defeat that she shrank from him with uplifted hands. But he did not notice her. Instead he rushed out of the house and along the road toward Freekirk Head.

The boarding house was a full half-mile from the wharfs of the village, and after a hundred yards Burns slowed down into a rapid walk.

The fool took the bait like a dogfish," he snarled. "Lord knows where he is by this time. I'll bet Schofield is at the bottom of this."

He had not as yet found out where Code was and his first step when he reached the village was to go to the Schofield cottage and verify Templeton's note.

Josie, the orphan girl, was there alone, and was on the point of tears with having been left alone so long, with night coming on.

When questioned the girl admitted readily enough that Mrs. Schofield had taken a bundle of Code's clothing and gone to Castalia in the afternoon, she having overheard the conversation that took place between her mistress and Pete Ellinwood.

When he had gained this information Burns hurried from the house, and toward the spot on the beach between the wharfs where his dory lay. He had not the remotest idea what had become of Templeton, but he was reasonably sure that if Thomas had taken him to Castalia, Schofield was no longer there.

What Thomas had really done did not occur to him and his one idea was to get to the neighboring village as soon as possible and ascertain just what had taken place.

His dory was beached alongside the pier where the charming Lass had lain for the past week. Now, as he approached it he suddenly stopped, rooted in his tracks.

The Charming Lass was gone.

CHAPTER IX.
ON THE COURSE.

"All dories aboard! All hands set tops'ls! Jimmie Thomas, ease your mainsheet! Now, boys, altogether! Yo! Fine! Stand by to set balloon jib!"

It was broad daylight, and the early sun lighted the newly painted, slanting deck of the Charming Lass as she neered through the gentle sea. On every side the dark gray expanse stretched unbroken to the horizon, except on the starboard bow. There a long gray flatness separated itself from the horizon—the coast of southern Nova Scotia.

There was a favorable following wind and the clean new schooner seemed to express her joy at being again in her element by leaping across the choppy waves like a living thing.

While the crew of ten leaped to the orders Code [illegible] stood calmly at the wheel easing her on her course so as to give them the least trouble. Under the vociferous bellow of Pete Ellinwood the crew were working miracles in swiftness and organization.

The sun had been up for two hours and now as Schofield glanced back at the wake that foamed and bubbled behind them his eyes fell upon the white sails of a vessel far astern. Even at the distance it was plain that she was of schooner rig and probably a fisherman.

"Wonder who she is?" asked Code, pointing her out to Ellinwood.

"Don't know. Thought perhaps you had seen her before, skipper. I've had my eyes on her for an hour. Fisherman, likely; you'll see 'em in all directions every day afore we're through."

The explanation was simple and obvious and it satisfied Schofield. He promptly forgot he, as did everyone else aboard the Lass. And reason enough. The cook, sticking his head out of the galley, hawled:

"Ding-up. First up-a-table!" and the first table made a rush below.

When the five men sat down it was the first time they had been able to relax since the evening before, when, without lights, and under head sails only, the Charming Lass had stolen out between the reefs of Freekirk Head to sea.

"Wal, boys, I cal'late we're safe!" ejaculated Ellinwood with great satisfaction. "The Lass is doin' ten knots steady, an' I guess we'll have left Cape Sable astern afore the sleepy heads at home find out what's become of us."

"You picked the day, Pete. If it hadn't been for you I would never have got beyond St. John's." It was Code who spoke.

"And you pretty near spoiled what I did do," rumbled Pete.

"How's that?" interrupted Thomas interestedly. "I don't know everything that happened to you fellows. I was busy at the time givin' a friend of mine a joy ride. Tell me about it."

"It wasn't me that nearly broke up the show, Pete," protested Code. "It was mother. Of course, when Jimmie was taking her over to Castalia he told her what was in the wind. They found me at the Pembroke place and we all went into Pembroke's ice house, where I was to stay until after dark. Then ma started in to find out everything.

"She allowed it wasn't honorable to run away when the officer or lawyer was after me. She said that it proved that I was guilty, and thought I ought to stay and be served with his paper. If I wasn't guilty of anything it could be proven easily enough, she said. Poor, honest mother!" She forgot that the whole matter would take weeks, if not months, and that all the time I would be idle and discontented, and spending most of my time before boards of inquiry.

"I suppose it will look queer to a lot of people at the Head because I've gone. They'll say right off: 'Just as we thought!' All the talk that has been going around is true,' and put me down for a criminal that ought to go to jail. That's what mother said, and the worst part of leaving her now is that she will have to stay and face the talk—and the looks that are worse than talk!

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three cakes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

In some of the East Indian Islands and on the mainland of Hindustan are to be found the smallest species of honey-bees in the world. These dwarf honey collectors are known to entomologists as Apis florea. Their honeycombs are no longer than a child's hand and the cells are about the size of a small pin head. This honey is excellent, as is the wax. The little creatures build the comb on the branch of a low tree, and as they have not to provide for winter they work all the year through, raising broods like themselves.

In the same land there is a species of giant bees, Apis dorsata, as large as a gold cricket. These monsters of the bee world build honeycombs that are from six to seven feet in length, four or more in width, and weigh from 200 to 400 pounds each.

Ancient Portent Solved.

The "Wee Water" at Croydon, Surrey, otherwise known as the Bourne Flow, is for the fifth successive year running down the Caterham Valley between Whyteleafe and Purley. The history of these visitations, extending over 600 years, gives an average interval of about five years between them. In ancient days the Flow was regarded as a mysterious portent of "dearth or pestilence, or great battle," to quote a chronicler of 1479. The prosaic explanation is the flooding of underground water channels.

Grand Duke a Sportsman.

The Grand Duke Nicholas is famous as a sportsman. Coursing wolves with borzois may be regarded as a national sport in Russia, and it is one which the Grand Duke has made his own.

HAD WEAK HEART
HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Bay, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HINTS ON DARNING STOCKINGS

Holes in the knees of stockings are usually enlarged and after they have been washed it seems impossible to many users, to darn them. They may be mended easily, however, if after the stocking is taken off, you wet the place where it is torn, then lay the stocking over some flat surface, where it will dry quickly, and pull the threads together with your fingers while it is still wet.

The most efficient way to darn runs in stockings is to cross-stitch them on the wrong side. One should be taken to bring the point of the needle back to the preceding stitch, and if th estitches are taken through the loops of the stockings stitch on each side of the run they prevent farther dropping of the stitches.

For the larger holes, where the stocking supporter has torn, darn diagonally across the hole from both sides instead of straight, as it gives a neater and firmer darn.

PINEAPPLE PIE.

Pineapple pie is as unusual as it is good. To make it chop canned pineapple into fine chunks add a cup of sugar sifted with two tablespoonfuls of flour, two beaten eggs, a cupful of the juice add a pinch of salt. Add also a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of melted butter. Bake with a lower crust and criss-crossed strips of crust on top.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Crystal Ball

By Phillip Kean.

Copyrighted, A. by Associated Literary Press.

"The trouble with me," Antoinette announced, "is that I am too commonplace."

Charmian laughed, "You funny little thing!"

"I haven't any individuality," Antoinette insisted. "I dance pretty well and sing a little. I have a fairly good complexion. I know how to do my hair, but when other girls scintillate I'm in the shadow. What I need is to be different."

"What you need is to be your own dear self," Charmian stated. "Everybody loves you."

"Everybody doesn't." Antoinette contradicted. "At least"— She stopped suddenly.

"Well, Dickie does," Charmian teased. "You know you are the only girl in the world to Dickie Beveridge, and Dickie's the salt of the earth."

"Oh, Dickie!" Antoinette flared. "Dickie's as insignificant as I am. He has a nice little figure and a nice little way of saying things, but there isn't anything great or grand about him."

"Who wants to be great or grand?" Charmian questioned.

"I do." Antoinette sat up among the pink couch cushions. "I want to be distinctive, Charmian."

"In what way?" Charmian's eyes were smiling as she lounged in the big chair by the open fire, for the October days were cool.

"Well, like you, for example," Antoinette said—"your red-gold hair and your grey eyes and your black lashes and your way of wearing things. Now, what would I look like in that black kimono you have on? With the gold figures it gives you an atmosphere of mystery—like a seeress or something."

Charmian laughed again. "Dear girl," she said, "it's much better to be a woman than a seeress."

"That's all very well for you to say," Antoinette grumbled. "You have a voice like a siren."

"Oh, Toinette," Charmian protested, "a seeress and a siren! I'd so much rather be just a woman and lovable and precious like you."

Antoinette dimpled and then sighed. "But I'm not lovable to everybody."

Charmian reached over and took one of the small, plump hands in hers. "Now, who is that sigh for, baby?" she demanded. "And who doesn't love you?"

"Otis Singleton," said Antoinette unexpectedly.

Charmian's eyes returned to the fire with an unfathomable expression.

"So it is Otis Singleton?" she said softly.

"Yes," Antoinette nodded. "I think he is perfectly fine, Charmian. But he doesn't pay a particle of attention to me. And I am positively tongue-tied when I try to talk to him. Do you feel that way?"

Charmian smiled inscrutably. "Not exactly," she murmured.

"Of course you don't," Antoinette went on. "You're not commonplace, and I am not going to be any more. I am going to create an atmosphere. Otis is interested in occult things, and there's that crystal ball that father brought from India."

She rose, crossed to a table and brought back the translucent sphere which gave out opal flashes as it caught the autumn sunlight.

"Father says the queer men over there used to gaze in it," Antoinette explained, "and tell what had been and what would be."

"How strange!" said Charmian, handling it curiously.

"I am going to set up this den," Antoinette recited as she flung herself once more among the cushions, "with dark, mysterious hangings, with a dado of peacock feathers, and a bust of Pallas over the door, and a black cat on the hearth, and I'm going to dress myself in a smoke colored gown, with a snake bracelet, and I'm going to put the crystal ball in the middle of my teakwood table and tell fortunes. And after awhile everybody will say, 'How interesting,' and then I won't feel so insignificant, and perhaps Otis will come, and—now, Charmian, what's the matter?"

For the other girl was laughing uncontrollably.

"Oh, you funny child!" she gasped.

"It's not a laughing matter." Antoinette reproved her. She reached over and took the crystal ball from her friend and gazed into it. "I shall be a great singer crowned with laurels," she said.

Charmian snatched the ball from her. "Don't," she cried; "don't prophesy fame for me! Tell me of a future of love and marriage and home. I've been so lonely all my life."

The young girl laid her cheek against that of her friend. "But you know I love her, Charmian," she said.

"You precious child!" was the grateful response, and after that there was a long silence.

Then Antoinette said, "But I'm going to fix up the den, and I'm going to invite Otis Singleton."

"Better invite Dickie," Charmian urged.

"I shall never invite Dickie again," Antoinette stated. "He always asks me to marry him."

"And are you sure you don't love him—sure?" The older girl's gaze was compelling.

"Well," Antoinette hesitated, "I do like Dickie, Charmian, but when I think what a commonplace couple we would make"—

"You would make a dear couple," Charmian stated, "and your laughter and brightness are not for such men as Otis Singleton."

"Why not?"

"Otis needs a woman who has suffered as he has suffered. He has had a hard life and a lonely one—a life like mine, Antoinette." She caught herself up quickly and glanced at her friend. But Antoinette was absorbed in her plans.

"Anyhow, I'm going to invite him and read his fortune in the crystal ball. Who knows but he will find his fate?" And she flew up to her own room to dress.

All the week that followed Antoinette was busy transforming the den into an abode of black art. Charmian, watching somewhat wistfully, made invaluable suggestions.

"I shall never fit into it as you would," Antoinette said one morning despairingly. "I'm too chubby. I hate that word, Charmian, but it fits me. And it fits Dickie Beveridge. He proposed again last night, and he looked like a little fat Cupid, oh, dear!" And she smiled ruefully.

"Marry him," was Charmian's prompt suggestion, "and don't think any more of Otis Singleton."

"But Otis is so fine and splendid," Antoinette protested.

"Yes, he is fine and splendid," Charmian repeated, and something in her tone made Antoinette stare.

"Oh, my goodness!" she said to herself later as she fed the black cat on the hearth to get her accustomed to her new environment. "Goodness, I came near making an awful mistake. And, after all, I simply couldn't live without Dickie."

So she sent for him that very afternoon, and he came, beaming.

"Do you really mean what you said over the telephone," he demanded—"that you'll marry me, Antoinette?"

Antoinette nodded. "I've been a little goose, Dickie," she said briefly as she let him hold the tips of her fingers, "and now I want to talk about Charmian."

Two heads being better than one, Antoinette emerged from the interview radiant.

"Your brains aren't chubby if your body is," was the praise she bestowed upon Dickie, "and I never should have thought of that way of bringing them together."

"He loves her desperately," Dickie said, "but he thinks she is wedded to her career. He told me once that he wouldn't dare ask such a woman to share his moderate income."

"And she is longing to share it, only, of course, a woman has to wait until a man asks her. Oh, well"—and Antoinette smiled on her chubby squire ecstatically—"oh, well, Dickie, we shall see what we shall see!"

Two nights later Otis Singleton, coming into the transformed den, with an amused smile curving his lips, found a small, plump seeress in smoke colored crepe, with jade ornaments at her neck and on her wrists, presiding over the crystal ball, which was mounted on a silver dragon.

"So this is the new fad," he said as he seated himself.

Antoinette shook her head at him. "It's not a fad," she said. "This crystal ball has told me some things lately that have almost made me shiver, and the role of prophetess has been forced upon me."

Otis threw his head back and laughed heartily. "Antoinette, you are a glorious little fraud," he said, "but that ball is wonderful." And he reached out his hand to take it.

But Antoinette's white hands waved him back.

"Let me read what it says," she murmured softly, "and you will think it still more wonderful."

Otis lounged in his big chair lazily.

"Proceed," he said, then teasingly, "Have you told Dickie's fortune?"

Antoinette nodded. "Dickie is to marry a plump blond on the 14th of December, and he is to live happy ever after."

Otis sat up and stared.

"By Jove, you don't mean that you've really said 'Yes' at last?" he gasped.

Antoinette smiled. "I see that you recognize the small, plump blond," she murmured.

Then for a time she was silent, gazing into the depths of the crystal ball. At last her voice came feistly. "I see a woman in white"—

"Blond or brunette?" skeptically.

"She is neither fair nor dark," went on the voice. "Her hair is a crown of red gold, and she is very tall. At her feet is a wreath of laurel."

All the indifference had left Singleton's face. "Charmian," he breathed.

"Now the crystal is clouded," the voice went on, "but in the dimness I can still see the shadowy figure in white. She tramples on the laurel wreath, but her hand is on her heart. She seems to say, 'I want not fame, but love.'"

Otis' hand came down heavily over the ball. "You are making it up," he accused.

The little lady's eyes met his steadily. "I am not making it up."

"You mean that it is true?"

"As true as that Dickie and I are going to be married, Otis."

So seriously did she say it that Singleton stood up with a quick laugh of resolution. "Where is she?" he demanded.

"In the library," said Antoinette. "But, oh, Otis, if she should ever guess how I told your fortune!"

"She shan't guess," he said. "I'll tell her you saw money bags and a rich widow"—

And with that he was gone, while the seeress in smoke color flew down the hall to hunt up her chubby cherub.

"And, oh, Dickie," she said as they took refuge in the breakfast room, "I expect she's saying 'Yes' this very minute!"

"And all because of the crystal ball," was Dickie's comment as he folded her to his fond embrace.

BEWARE OF ANGER.

When we are pleased, the pulse is strong; when displeased, weak. The same holds for breathing. If an experience is pleasant, we breathe more deeply; if unpleasant, less deeply.

"In joy we breathe in great breaths, in sorrow, our breathing is short and weak. When we are pleased we are stronger muscularly—we can put out more strength—than when we are displeased. We feel stronger," and are stronger, than usual when we are heartily and justly angry (pleasant anger).

"Grief bows us down, crushes us, leaves us physically weaker than ever."

Thus say Dr. E. B. Tichener, in his "Primer of Psychology," and his views are partly borne out by Dr Maurice de Fleury, the well-known authority on brainstorms.

His view is that every time we are angry our vitality shrinks so much in proportion for every outburst. In fact Dr. de Fleury asserts that each burst of anger, each rush of evil passion, cuts off a certain portion of the life we should enjoy if it had not happened. "Every time a man gets angry," he says, "he shortens his life by so many minutes, or days—perhaps even years. A great deal depends on the intensity of the anger."

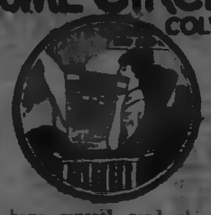
The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN



We have several good objects in view and many good reasons for the prettily appearance of the Home Circle Department in the columns of our paper. We believe it carries sunshine and good cheer into all the homes it enters. In it are found encouraging words for every good act and discouraging words for all that is ill. During the year we have just entered we hope to make this department of unusual interest to every member of the Home Club. As Mrs. Hemans has said, "There's beauty all around our paths, if but our watchful eyes can trace it 'midst familiar things," and through their lowly guise." In this department this week we give our readers helpful and encouraging words from our greatest and best men and women. Read them carefully, storing them in memory's casket and 1916 will be a brighter year for you for having been a reader of our Home Circle Department.

Friendship by its very nature consists in loving rather than in being loved. In other words, friendship consists in being a friend, not in having a friend. H. Clay Trumbull.

Let us learn to be content with what we have. Let us get rid of our false estimates, set up all the highest ideals—a quiet home; vines of our own planting; a few books full of the inspirations of a genius; a few friends worthy of being loved and able to love us in return; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring no pain or remorse, a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion empty of all bigotry, full of trust, hope and love—and to such a philosophy this world will give up all the empty joy it has.

David Swing.

INSTINCT

The faith of immortality depends on a sense of it begotten, not on an argument of it concluded—Bushnell. Our hopes are God's written guarantees of immortality.—Agassiz. There is, I know not how, in the minds of men a certain presage, as it were, of a future existence and this takes the deepest root and is most discoverable in the greatest geniuses and most exalted souls.—Cicero. I never spoke with God nor visited in Heaven, yet certain am I of the spot as if the chart were given.—Emily Dickinson. It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a bubble cast up by the ocean of eternity to float another moment upon its surface and then sink into nothingness and darkness forever. Else why is it that the high and glorious aspirations which leap like angels from the temples of our hearts, are forever wandering abroad, satisfied?—George D. Prentiss.

SCIENCE.

The denials of immortality lose their force under scientific inspection. The sciences clear the ground of objections and open the way for the fearless affirm. "for of man's immortality.—David Gregg. Immortality is what philosophers call an ontological fact; it belongs essentially to the being of man. To my mind this is the great proof of immortality. The fact that it is written in human nature, written there so plain that the rudest nations have not failed to find it, to know it. What is thus in man is writ there of God, who writes no lies.—Theodore Parker.

HISTORY.

The monuments of nations are all protests against nothingness after death; so are statues and inscriptions; so is history. — Law Wallace. The arrow heads and earthern vessels laid by the side of the dead Indian; the silver obolus put in the mouth of the dead Greek to pay Charon's passage money; the furnishing of the Egyptian corpse with the Book of the Dead, the papyrus roll containing the prayer he is to offer and the chart of his journey through the unseen world, all testify of immortality.—Bartlett.

TO HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Preserve sacredly the privacies of your own house, your married state, and your heart. Let no father or mother or sister or brother ever presume to come between you or share the joys and sorrows that belong to you alone.

With mutual help build your quiet world, not allowing your dearest earthly friend to be the confident of aught that concerns your domestic peace. Let moments of alienation, if they occur, be healed at once. Never no never, speak of it outside; but to each other confess and all will come out right. Never let the morrow's sun still find you at variance. Renew and renew your vow. It will do you good: and thereby your minds will grow together contented in that love which is stronger than death, and you will be truly one. Anonymous.

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get musified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

EXTRAVAGANT DRESSING

Government Pleads With Woman to Curtail Their Luxuries

The National Organizing Committee for War Savings has already drawn attention to the use of motor cars for pleasure and to wasteful domestic establishments. It now issues an appeal against extravagance in women's dress.

Many women have already recognized that elaboration and variety in dress is bad form in the present crisis, but there is still a large section of the community, both amongst the rich and among the less well-to-do, who appear to make little or no difference in their habits.

New clothes should only be bought when absolutely necessary, and these should be durable and suitable for all occasions. Luxurious forms of, for example, hats, boots, shoes, stockings, gloves and veils should be avoided. It is essential, not only that money should be saved, but that labor employed in the clothing trades should be set free.

PHANTOM BABES

Col. Lee's Sarcastic Reply to Critic of Medical Service

To an "unsparing attack" by Mr. Ronald McNeill on the medical services of the army, Colonel Arthur Lee made a vigorous and amusing reply in the House of Commons.

"I cannot help remembering that the hon. member was the discoverer of the two million war babies early in the war, which were eventually whittled down to two false alarms and one case of twins," said Colonel Lee, amid shouts of merriment. Colonel Lee spent nine months in investigating the medical service on the spot, and was through the battles of the Aisne, the first and second battles of Ypres, Neuve Chapelle, Festubert and Loos. As a result of that experience he utterly failed to recognize the "harrowing conditions" described by Mr. McNeill.

On the night of October 31, at the battle of Ypres, he saw 1,600 wounded evacuated in one night without a hitch, an achievement which reflected the greatest credit on the army Medical Service. "I challenge Mr. McNeill, or any other man, to prove that there has been anything even approaching a breakdown in the medical service at any of those great battles."

COUNTESS MARKIEVICZ SENTENCED TO LIFE

Woman Leader of Irish Rebels Is Connected With Many Great Families

LONDON, May 9.—An official statement tells of Irish rebels' trials as follows:

"The following further results of trials by the field general courtmartial, are announced:

"Sentenced to death, but commuted to penal servitude for life by the general officer commanding-in-chief, Countess Georgina Markievics and Henry O'Hanrahan.

"Sentenced to death, but commuted to ten years' penal servitude, Geo. Plunkett and John Plunkett."

It is stated unofficially that the death sentence imposed upon Philip Cosgrave, after a trial by the courtmartial that is passing upon the case of the Irish rebels, has been commuted to five years' imprisonment, and the sentence of thirteen others to three years.

The Countess Markievicz, whose maiden name was Constance Georgine Gore-Booth, is a daughter of the late Sir Henry William Gore-Booth, 5th baronet of Lissadell, County Sligo, Ireland, who married Georgina Mary, only daughter of Colonel Charles John Hill of Tickhill Castle, Yorkshire, and niece of the 8th Earl of Scarborough.

When her brother succeeded to the peerage, Colonel Hill's wife was granted the precedence of an earl's daughter. The Countess is a first cousin, once removed of the present Earl of Scarborough, of the Marchioness of Zetland, of the Countess of Bradford, of the Baroness Bolton, and of the Countess Grosvenor, whose second husband was the late Right Hon. George Wyndham, chief Secretary for Ireland. She is a grandniece of the late General the Honorable William Lumley, K.C.B., who commanded the British cavalry at the Battle of Albuera in the Peninsular war. It is interesting to note that three of the leaders in the recent insurrection are of mixed English and Irish parentage. The Pearse brothers are the sons of an Englishman who married an Irish girl, while the Countess Markievicz is the daughter of an Irish baronet, who married an English girl.

The Plunketts mentioned are sons of Count Plunkett and brother of Joseph Plunkett, who was executed

PERFUME SOOTHES LION

A new method has been discovered for curbing the temper of lions. It is simple and safe, and, according to Charles Smith, boss of a Chicago menagerie, it is highly effective. It consists merely of permitting a lion to whiff attar of roses.

Smith gave a demonstration at the Coliseum, when he sprinkled the perfume over a handkerchief and entered the cage of King Leo. Leo was sleeping, but when the cage door was opened he prepared to spring. Smith dangled the handkerchief in front of the lion's nose, and Leo sniffed heavily. Then he buried his nose in the cloth. He seemed more contented than when sleeping, and permitted Smith to brush his mane and head and pat him on the back.

Smith said he had been experimenting with perfume with the lions for several months, and is convinced the aroma has a remarkably peaceful and soothing effect on wild beasts

Girl A Nervous Wreck At Eleven Years of Age

Was Tired Out, Pale and Sallow—Would Tremble Till the Bed Would Shake—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured Her

In the school of to-day there is found an alarming proportion of weak, nervous children who have little chance of developing into healthy, useful men and women. Nature requires the assistance of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help them over a trying period and set them on their feet.

There would be fewer wearing glasses if the nerves were invigorated less irritation in the school and home, more robust health and a greater pleasure in the school tasks.

This letter bears a cheering message to parents whose children are weak, puny, and nervous. It shows you what may be expected from the use of this great restorative.

Mrs. Stephen Hartman, Italy Cross, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:

"My little sister at eleven years of age became nervous, irritable and seemed all tired out. She had no appetite, was lifeless and drowsy, and her complexion grew pale, and sallow. Finally she had to keep her bed and had somebody with her all the time. She was afraid of everything, would get excited and tremble till the bed would shake. As she seemed to be getting worse under the doctor's treatment, mother decided to try Dr Chase's Nerve Food. After she had used about four boxes improvement was noticeable, and it was wonderful to see how much brighter and stronger she grew week by week. She used ten boxes altogether, and they cured her. She got fat and rosy, and went to school every day with an ambition that she never seemed to have before. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to anyone, for it was indeed wonderful what it did for her."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This reproduction of lady's dress reminds us that simplicity of line will not retire in favor of extreme or extravagant fashions, but will be made becoming and win admiration by the blending of new style ideas in the trimming features.

In this illustration—No. 7,726—the arrangement of a small collar over a large one gives the popular cape effect to the blouse; tiny revers are of contrasting material, matching the color scheme in the collars. A vest effect is given the front of the garment by the clever stitching of the right and left sides, simulating straps that continue their lines to form pockets of good size in the two-gored skirt; this is a most noteworthy feature. Buttons are used decoratively above and below the outside belt, which hides the joining of the parts. A tie is another detail which adds to the smartness of the dress; closing at the left side of the front is invisible. Linen, cotton gabardine, chambray for a tub dress, or silk or serge for better wear, will give excellent results. The sleeves may be made in long or short lengths.

The pattern is cut in sizes:—36-42 inches bust measure. To make in size 38 you need only 5 yards of 36 inch goods and ¾ yard of contrasting goods.

If you will send 15 cents to the office of this publication the pattern will be promptly forwarded to you.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A Railroad Novelist

PERHAPS the best known of the younger literary critics in America is Archie Bell of the "Cleveland Leader." For that reason his tribute to the work of a C. P. R. official is well worth attention. That work is a work of fiction, "Hearts and Faces" by name, and is as remote from Canadian railway life as anything could possibly be imagined. Here is what Archie Bell has to say:—

John Murray Gibbon was born in Ceylon. His father is a titled Scotchman. He is a graduate of Oxford, and he has taken special courses in philosophy at various German universities. And despite some of these things popularly considered handicaps to "getting on in the world," he came back to London and was soon editor of the well-known illustrated newspaper, "Black and White."

Realizing that he did not know as much as he wanted to know about art, a realization that came home to him each day as he sat at his editorial desk he resigned and went to Paris to become an art student.

He lived in the famous Latin Quarter at night and spent the days in Colarossi's Atelier. Then he went to Italy and Algiers, Japan and China, and to many other countries.

Then one day, an official position was offered him by the Canadian Pacific Railway. At the age of forty-one he has achieved distinction as a practical railroad man, despite all those years of preparation that were spent in pursuits so popularly believed to unfit a man for the practical life.

The busiest men are the ones who find the most time. In the past two years, John Murray Gibbon has been attending to his railroad duties with one hand, and with the other hand has been writing a novel, which has just been issued by the famous publishing house of John Lane in England and S. B. Gundy in Toronto.

"Hearts and Faces" is the story of an artist it treats of the artistic temperament as it sallies forth into the warmer world from the somewhat unpromising environment of Scotland.

George Grange is found amid rather commonplace surroundings in the first few lines of the novel. There his character, or at least the foundation for his character, is being formed. He never escapes from this environment, because he carries its effect with him wherever he goes.

Delightfully true pictures of Scottish ideals are sketched in the earlier chapters, and then with the first fling at the biting satire which frequently illuminates subsequent pages, George Grange throws aside his university studies. He longs for freedom and life, and falling in with a lovable old character, a Scottish painter, he also learns to paint.

He goes to London in the great quest of success and gradually climbs the ladder by discouraging and diligent toil, until a committee waits upon him and offers him a commission to paint a portrait of the king for a fashionable club. Gibbon draws a steady and grim picture of the intriguing London society folk—whom he knows well enough—and occasionally he pays his respects to the American "climbers" in the smart set. There is no venom in his satire of his own people, nor of the foreigners, but he paints portraits in words that are carefully chosen and forceful.

His hero is thrown into this pulsating, human pot pourri, and "keep his skirts clean" up to the great moment of his life, when he falls a victim of a designing woman and loses all

Again Scotch pluck to the rescue, however, and he goes to Paris, where many of the scenes are doubtless somewhat autobiographical. It is the Latin Quarter life of reality. Not that musical comedy version which we too often mistake for the reality, and not even that fascinating life sketched so delibly by Henri Murger, which did more to popularize "Latin Quarter life" than any of the pictures ever painted there. But life on the banks of the Seine, as it is lived by the students of art and the girls who know no other world.

Sometimes these pictures are gay, sometimes sordid; but they are never vulgar. Through them move many characters with whom the reader has become acquainted in the earlier chapters. Amid these scenes, as in London, and later in Germany and Italy, George Grange moves as the most important figure. It is the adventure of a soul. And each adventure is traced with a canny knowledge of life as it is, rather than as many writers would like to believe it should be.

And it was written by a railroad man! Still, there are enough examples of versatility in the art world to prove that such an achievement is possible. A merchant of Russia composed music that is now sung in the opera houses of the world. It does not lessen Paderewski's ability as a pianist because he is a hotel keeper in Warsaw. John Alden Carpenter, of Chicago, is a "business man" yet he composed "Adventures in a Perambulator," which caused the staid music critics of the country to prick up their ears in the last two years. Caesar Franck was a school-teacher, even when he was writing his most famous symphony.

Roumania Ready To Join Allies At Proper Time

Statesman "Admires Roosevelt's Courage and Foresight and Wilson's Tact."

BUCHAREST, Roumania, May 8.—Up to the present neither the King nor the Government has uttered a definite word regarding their attitude toward this world war. All that they declare is that they are "neutral." Not a word more. There remains only one man in Roumania who can speak, and speak authoritatively about the present policy of Roumania and the steps to be taken in the future, and that man is Mr. Take Ionesco.

Many times Minister of the Interior and Minister of Foreign Affairs, the leader of the Conservative-Democratic Party, Mr. Ionesco, is no doubt the most popular man in this country. He was the statesmtn who, during the Balkan war, so successfully guided the policy of his country and added Dobrudja to the Roumanian territories. To-day he has united around him all the opposition parties and also some of the Liberals—the ruling party—and formed the National Federation, whose avowed aim is the achieving of the liberation of the Roumanians residing in Transylvania and Bukowina by participating in the war on the side of the Entente powers.

Mr. Ionesco said, in an interview granted to the correspondent of The World:

Roumania's Fate in the Balance.

"Our nation is aware that the fate of Roumania will be decided, no matter whether she takes an active part in this war or not. The nation knows perfectly well that her supreme interests lie in the victory of the entente powers, Roumania, like any other race, wants to be united; that is, her aim is to liberate the millions of Roumanians who are subjected to Hungarian tyranny. Can this be achieved without the final defeat of Austria-Hungary? Even then her national aspirations are not realized unless she takes part in the war and wins her rights by the shedding of her own blood.

"Our people are also aware that if the central powers should be victorious—which in my opinion is absolutely impossible—the Roumanians in Hungary would be more oppressed in the future even than they have been in the past. In that case they would renounce their allegiance to the nationhood of Roumania and be lost to Roumania. Moreover, we would be left to the tender mercies of the Hungarians and Bulgarians, who would fall on up and crush, first our economic life, and then our political independence. In a word, a German victory would mean the permanent humiliation of Roumania. Our people is general are democratic and want to live under free institutions, but if Germany should win, that would mean the triumph of reaction and the destruction of political freedom throughout Europe, and more especially in Southeastern Europe.

Will Join Allies Eventually.

"The nation wished to see Roumania taking the side of the entente powers long ago. There were meetings, agitations and demonstrations against the Government. At the present moment, however, a great calm exists. This is because everybody has made up his mind, and the people are awaiting the very first opportunity of entering the war. The Government constantly aver that they are 'neutral'—nothing more. But they know perfectly well that nobody, absolutely nobody, will be able to bring Roumania on the side of the Teutonic Powers. Sooner or later, therefore, the Government will have to yield to the national will and take their stand alongside of England, France, Italy, Russia and others. And if Roumania is provided with munitions as amply as Russia is provided by the Allies, she should stand a long war."

Faith in the King.

"As regards the King, he is a constitutional monarch, and therefore he has neither the right nor the desire to impose his will upon the people in order to follow a personal policy. His Majesty has stated most emphatically that he is just as good a Roumanian as any of us, notwithstanding his German origin, and we have no reason whatever to doubt his royal word of honour.

To my question as to whether the King could dissolve Parliament and form a new Cabinet in case the present Government should decide to enter into the war, as King Constantine did twice in Greece, Mr. Ionesco replied:

"I would rather not discuss the subject, as I cannot for a moment imagine that our King would attempt to execute a coup d'etat. The King has done nothing to justify such a calumny; besides, it would be useless, as such a policy would be absolutely impossible to our country.

Would Mean War With America.

"As to myself, I have given my opinion from the first days of the war. I have fought for those opinions and I shall never cease to fight for them, because I believe life would be intolerable here if the Germans should get the upper hand. The people here have been much amused at a remark that I made recently. I said: 'I would rather be a waiter in Chicago than be the head of the Government here if the Germans and Austrians were to become our masters.

"German predominance would mean the end of individual liberty and freedom of speech and voluntary exile to America would be the only hope of every liberty-loving individual. This exile, however, would not be for long, because the Germans' victory would mean a war with the United States within a period of seven years. It is for this that I admire Mr. Roosevelt's courage and foresight and the tact of President Wilson, with whom I am personally acquainted. I have no right to speak about American politics, but I am much astonished at Mr. Bryan's attitude, since, in my judgment, he is a Utopianist, who is a hundred years before his time, and therefore isolated from the rest of the world.

"Germans Will Never Win."

"Happily, however, such a calamity as victory of the Germans will never happen. The Germans will never win; it is an impossibility. Unfortunately, we shall have to register the loss of many mor emillions of lives, a terrible amount of destruction and more crimes like those of Belgium, Serbia and the still worse one of Armenia—a nightmare without precedent in the whole of history. But mankind in the twentieth century will never submit to be the slaves of the German Emperor and his military clique.

"I have a great faith in the final triumph of moral ideas. Never in history have such undertakings as those of the Germans in the present war been successful. If I have striven and am still striving to bring the army of my country on the side of the entente powers it is not because I imagine that they cannot succeed without us; by no means; but because I feel that it is the duty of all civilized nations to take a share in this conflict, whether materially interested or not."

I then asked Mr. Ionesco regarding the agitation of a faction of the Conservative Party, led by Mr. Marghiloman, who are endeavouring to force the Government to go against Russia, with the object of conquering Bessarabia. Marghiloman, at a recent meeting, declared that the Government is negligent in respecting the decisions of a council of notables held under the Presidency of the King.

Mr. Ionesco said:

"At the meeting held under the Presidency of the King the first question was our treaty with Austria and Germany. It was then decided that that treaty put on us no obligation of any kind other than that of neutrality. Considering the circumstances at the beginning of the general war we could not do anything else, but remain neutral, but that does not mean that we are bound to be inactive forever. However, nobody is bound to the decisions of a meeting of ten men, whoever they may be, as there is no such law in our constitution. The Will of the nation rules here. The Marghiloman agitation has no significance at all. It is enough to state that at the "Action National" meeting, in which all the opposition parties as well as some of the Liberals were participants, they termed Mr. Marghiloman a 'traitor.'"

In answer to my question as to whether Roumania was bound by treaty or otherwise to help Serbia, Mr. Ionesco said, with an expression of sorrow, that he could not answer that question.

You may save the life of a good cow or horse by taking a little trip down to the barn just before bedtime. You will also sleep the better for making the round of the stables at that time.

WHEN CLERGYMEN SPEAK

In favor of a remedy, it is safe to conclude that the remedy has more than usual merit. Clergymen who have used Zam-Buk have found it so excellent, that they have not hesitated to give their opinion.

Amongst them is the Rev. A. D. McLeod of Harcourt, N.B., who, in a letter written recently, refers to the remarkable popularity which Zam-Buk enjoys in the homes of the people of his parish. "Really," he writes, "I know of nothing that can compare with Zam-Buk! Having charge of an extensive mission, I meet with many sick and afflicted people, and have been amazed at the good which Zam-Buk is doing daily. For bad ulcers, old wounds, eczema, and skin diseases of all kinds, the healing powers of Zam-Buk are simply marvellous! For piles, also, it is excellent. I have known Zam-Buk give almost instant relief, and am confident if Zam-Buk were kept in every home it would save many a doctor's bill."

For injuries, Zam-Buk is equally good. Nothing ends pain, stops bleeding and draws out soreness so quickly. Being highly antiseptic, Zam-Buk prevents wounds from festering.

THE FRENCH REGAIN ALL GROUND LOST

Five of Cymric's Crew Are Killed

GERMANS WERE THROWN OUT OF THE FEW POINTS WHICH THEY STILL HELD

Violent Attack on Hill 34 Was Completely Repulsed and French Counter Attack Which Resulted in French Securing All the Ground They Had Lost in Sunday's Heavy Assault---Enemy Suffered Great Losses---French Capture a German Post Near Boland.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 9.—A violent German attack on Hill 304 at 3 o'clock this morning was completely repulsed, the War Office announced to-day. On the east bank of the Meuse, northeast of Verdun, French counter-attacks during the night in the region northwest of Thiaumont threw the Germans from a few points in the French first line trenches they still held as the result of Sunday's heavy attack against the French front. The Germans suffered the heaviest losses in frontal attacks on the northern slopes of Hill 304. After capturing the French trenches Sunday they were exposed to terrible fire from the French guns mounted on the summit, which spouted death all Saturday night. The dawn broke on Sunday over bloody hillsides and piles of German bodies scattered before the wrecked trenches. The German attack on Hill 304 made early to-day followed a night of heavy bombardment. The Germans played shells upon the French defensive positions on the hill until nearly dawn. A French curtain of fire brought the charge to an immediate halt. On the east bank of the Meuse, the Germans made no attempt at a vigorous offensive, contenting themselves with bombarding violently the Douaumont-Vaux front. The raid by which the French recaptured lost ground was the only important infantry action on this side of the river. French troops carried a German post near Boland in the Argonne last night, capturing all the occupants.

Five of Cymric's Crew Perished

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Official details of the sinking of the Cymric received here say explosion killed five out of the crew of 107 men, which it is inferred here that the vessel was attacked without warning.

Five out of the crew perished, according to a cablegram from Consul Frost at Queenstown, to-day.

Will Investigate Sinking of Cymric

Special to The Examiner:

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, May 9.—American Consul Frost will leave for Bantry Bay, Ireland, within a few hours to learn whether the liner Cymric was warned by the German submarine that torpedoed her, whether she was armed, and whether she attempted to escape. He will interview the Cymric's officers.

Lloyd Harris Testifies Before Shell Committee

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 9.—Mr. Lloyd Harris, representing big manufacturing plants in Toronto, Brantford and other points in Ontario, was a witness before the Shell Commission this morning. He said that when he was in the United States on other business he heard the shell committee was giving out an order for five million fuses to United States concerns. He saw Sir Sam Hughes in Colonel Allison's apartments in New York. Sir Sam told him to see the shell committee. Carnegie of the shell committee told him he would have to see Colonel Allison, the United States promoter, and this made Mr. Harris rather wrathy. Finally he did get a portion of the contract through the interposition of Premier Borden and General Pease.

WARNS AGAINST EAR BOXING

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 9.—If kids could vote the next President would be Dr. Samuel G. TWENTY DROWNED IN THE LOSS OF A LAKE STEAMER

"Kirby" Lost During 60 Mile Gale Which Swept Over Lake Superior Last Night

ONLY ONE MAN SAVED

Special to The Examiner:

SAULT STE MARIE, Mich., May 9—The steamer 'Kirby' is reported to have been lost during last night's gale with all but one on board. She carried a crew of twenty-one men.

The steamer went down off Eagle Harbour in Lake Superior, in a sixty mile gale that has swept the Upper Lakes for twenty-four hours. One man of the Kirby's crew of 21, is reported rescued by the steamer Joseph Block. The barge Hartwell, the tow of the 'Kirby,' was picked up by the steamer Berry.

BILINGUAL DISCUSSION

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 9.—The introduction of the discussion on the bilingual issue promises to make this one of the most interesting days of the session.

The resolution to be moved by Mr. Lapointe of Kamouraska will point out that the British government has always followed the custom that the language of any country falling under its sovereignty shall not be interfered with, so that the Ontario government's rule 17 is contrary to this and that the Ontario Legislature be respectfully memorialised to change it or words to that effect. The suggestion that the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's is jeopardised by the situation is ridiculed by prominent Liberals here.

Sportsmen's Patriotic Association Putting On an Athletic Evening---Proceeds For 93rd Battalion--Promotions Announced---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, the big athletic programme in the Armouries on Thursday night promises to be a great success. The object is to obtain funds to provide athletic material for the 93rd Battalion, and on this account, to say nothing of the merit of the programme, there should be a crowded house. There will be half a dozen boxing and wrestling bouts, exhibition of bayonet fighting by the 93rd non-coms just back from the special course at Montreal, an exhibition of card tricks by Pte. Thomas and other interesting features. The Band of the 93rd Battalion will be in attendance. The admission to any part of the Armouries will be only 25c. A big attendance is hoped for by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association.

The programme will be as follows:

Boxing.

Pte. G. Lilie vs. Pte. Simson, 3 rounds.
Pte. R. Emery vs. Pte. Smith, 3 rounds.
Pte. S. Rootes vs. Pte. West, 3 rounds.
Pte. Markwick vs. Pte. Thomas, special bout, 5 rounds.
Other boxing bouts.

Wrestling.

Pte. Bradley vs. Pte. R. Godoua.

Bayonet Fighting.

By the men who have recently returned from Montreal.

Card tricks, by Pte. Thomas.

That the tobacco from the Overseas Tobacco Fund is reaching the boys in the trenches, and that they appreciate it, is shown by the following letetr received by Miss M. Hanlon, Aylmer St., a local subscriber to the fund:

Dear Miss Hanlon, — Received some cigarettes, tobacco and a card with your address. You don't know how much we boys appreciate what you are doing for us in Canada. I was in Peterborough four years ago now. My friends are all in Lakefield, Ont. I enlisted with the 3rd C.M.R. at Medicine Hat, on Dec. 18, 1914. We have been in France over 9 months, and I have met friends from all parts of Canada. I hope you can excuse this writing. It is hard to write under a bombardment like there is to-night, although I am quite used to shell fire now.

PTE. H. HAMPTON,
No. 109967,
1st C.M.R. Battalion,
9th Brigade, C.E.F.

Mr. Chas. Duggan, Peterborough, has received the following letter from Mr. John H. Foster, of Nottingham, England, a gentleman who has greatly befriended Pte. Patrick Duggan, a local boy with the First Canadian Contingent, wounded some weeks ago. Mr. Foster writes:

"You will be glad to know that I have been able to see the brave lad, Pat. He is at the Wharncliffe Military Hospital, just outside the city of Sheffield, which is about 40 miles distant from Nottingham. The hospital nurses here, kindness itself, and allowed me to stay from 11 noon until 6 o'clock in the evenings. The lady who came round to dress the wounds permitted me to have a glimpse at Pat before binding them, and from what I saw he is getting on splendidly, being able to move himself to sit up in bed. The lady said that Pat had a wonderful escape from serious injury, the piece of shrapnel stopping within an inch of the spine. So that once again we must recognize the Providence which has spared him. Of course the wound was rather severe, and the operation (which Pat actually had part of without anaesthetics) must have been very painful indeed, but with his usual pluck, he is making quite light of it, and in a few weeks' time I feel quite sure he will be around again. The ten days' leave which is then due he has promised to spend with us. In the meantime I am hoping that one or other of us will be able to visit him, so that you will be quite sure that we are doing our best to cheer him in this trying time."

Lieut.-Col. Stewart, Inspector of Supply and Transport, was in the city yesterday on his way to Norwood.

No. 16 (Norwood) Platoon, B Company, 93rd Battalion, hooked up with a team representing No. 2 Platoon, A Company, yesterday afternoon, and the result was a 3 to 0 beating for the B Company boys. No. 2 hadn't their regular line-up in action and drafted a number of players from other platoons. They had much the better of the play. Pte. Shaw got the first two goals for No 2, shooting the first on a pass from Pte. Hardman, and the second on a rebound from a shot by the same player. Lance-Corp. Norman secured goal No. 3, when he took a long pass and beat Corp. O'Brien. Lance-Corp. Geo. East was a very satisfactory referee. To-night, Pte. Sam. Taylor will lead his Indian team into action against the Cooks. It will be some battle.

Major E. G. Loch of the 93rd Battalion, left this afternoon for Kingston to visit Barriefield Camp and make arrangements for the arrival of the 93rd. He will select the site for the canteen and in other ways prepare for the day when the Peterborough Battalion will take up its quarters under canvas.

Major A. G. Carruthers of the 39th Battalion left at 1.35 this afternoon for Belleville. He will return to England in a few days to resume his work with the 39th Battalion.

Capt. Max Hamilton is home from Kingston for a few days. He has been successful in obtaining his captain's certificate in the recent examinations.

Prison Sentences For The German Plotters

United States Judge Sentences Lieut. Fay to Eight Years in Atlanta Penitentiary For His Part in Plot to Destroy Munition Ships

OTHERS PUNISHED

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The first prison sentences imposed upon the principals in German plots were pronounced by Federal Judge Row at to-day when he sentenced Lieut. Robert Fay to eight years in Atlanta penitentiary; Paul Daeche to two years and Walter Scheiz to four years, for conspiracy to blow up ships carrying munitions.

In sentencing the men the Judge said: "Men such as you who have no respect for human life, should know that the laws of this country are not suspended even though there is war in Europe."

TABLET TO THE MEMORY OF PTE. RUSSELL PEARCE

Interesting Ceremony at Norwood Last Night When Tablet Presented by Lt. Col. Stewart Was Unveiled by Col. J. L. Hughes

A MASONIC GATHERING

An interesting and impressive event took place at Norwood last night in the Masonic Hall when a handsome tablet, presented by Lt.-Col. Stewart, the inspector for No. 3 military district in memory of Bro. Russell Pearce of Norwood Lodge, A. F. and A. M., killed in action in France, was unveiled by Lt. Col. Jas. L. Hughes of Toronto. There was a large gathering of Masons from far and near, a number being in khaki, including Lt.-Col. Gillespie of Kingston and Majors R. P. Watt and K. G. Loch and Capt. J. E. R. Munro of the 93rd Battalion. A notable visitor was Rt. Wor. Brother W. S. Murch the Grand Z of the Grand Chapter of Canada. A number of very interesting speeches were made, in which appreciative references were made to the services of Pte. Pearce as a Mason and a soldier.

Baptist Pastor To Be Chaplain of "London's Own"

Rev. W. C. Riddiford, Former Peterboro' Pastor, to Be Appointed, Says Ottawa Despatch

A despatch from Ottawa announces that the appointment of Rev. H. G. Taylor, Ottawa, as chaplain of the 142nd Battalion, London's Own, had been cancelled, and that Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of the Egerton street Baptist church, London, had been recommended and would secure the appointment.

It is understood that the protest of the London Ministerial Association was forwarded to William Gray, M. P., and he at once took the matter up with the militia department.

The name of Mr. Taylor was struck from the list, and that of Mr. Riddiford substituted.

The latter announcement will come out in orders shortly.

SITUATION IS SERIOUS

United States Calls Out National Guards of Texas and New Mexico

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Closely following more border raids by the Mexicans, and the reported disagreement between United States General Scott and the Mexican General Obregan, relative to the further pursuit of Villa, came to order to-day calling out all the National Guards of the States of Texas and New Mexico to patrol the border. In addition three additional regiments of Federal troops are leaving the northern States posts today for the Mexican border. It is agreed the situation is very serious.

CASEMENT TO APPEAR.

Will Be Given His Preliminary Trial on Wednesday.

LONDON, May 9.—Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested on the west coast of Ireland after he had landed from a German ship with the intention of heading the Sinn Fein revolt, will probably be given a preliminary hearing before a police magistrate on Wednesday. At that time he will be formally charged with high treason and remanded for trial before the Lord Chief Justice and a jury.

Small Piece of Explosive Hit Him On End of His Nose

Miraculous Escape of Pte. Howard Curtis Told of, in Interesting Letter to His Mother

Mrs. Geo. Curtis has received a letter from her son, Pte. Howard Curtis of the second battalion, who was recently wounded for the third time. Pte. Curtis has been confined to No. 3 Canadian General Hospital, France. He writes under date of April 22 as follows:

Dear Mother,—I am able to hobble about now, so I came down to the Y.M.C.A. to write a few lines to you. My leg is sure getting along well. In about another week I will be able to walk alright. I will be a little lame for some time as some of the muscles of my leg were cut with the bullet. I few days before I got hit in the leg I had a very narrow escape. I was on sentry looking over towards Fritz when bang went an explosive bullet in front of my face and a small piece hit the end of my nose. If it had of been a few inches higher I guess I would have had a place in R. I. P. park or what you would call a place in the graveyard.

A year ago to-morrow we had a hot time with the Germans. I'm glad I have pulled through long enough to celebrate the anniversary of the second Ypres battle. I suppose the boys up the line will send a few over just to let Fritz know we are not all dead yet. It is a pretty good hospital here, but I liked No. 24 General better than this one. However, a fellow has to be thankful for the good care and attention the nurses and doctors give us out here. They sure do their best to make us comfortable. They call it 'Sunny' France, but I can't see it that way, for it has been raining here every day for the last week. We have a Russian army over here now. The Huns will have a hot time when they all get going. I don't think it will be very long before we start a big offensive, and I expect we will not have to put in another winter out here.

Miss Ethel McKay, New Teacher at May's School

Miss Ethel McKay yesterday commenced duties as teacher of the Junior room of May's School. A vacancy was caused some time ago by the resignation of Miss Flossie Fife, who was recently married, and at the opening of the Easter term eighty-five pupils comprised the junior room. The school trustees lost no time in engaging a new teacher. This will relieve the lower form and make for efficiency in the teaching. Miss McKay was formerly principal of the Norwich school, but has been residing in Peterborough of late.

INSULT ADDED TO INSULT.

Is German diplomacy idiotic enough to think that the United States would be idiotic enough to protest in Germany's interests against the British blockade policy as a condition of Germany refraining from wholesale marine murder? The United States has protested in her own interests against certain features of the British blockade, but ineffectively, because Britain has been acting according to the principles and practices of international law. Will Uncle Sam stand the new German insult? He must have as many cheeks as a polygon if he has another cheek to turn to the buffets of the Hun.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Do the considerations constituting contempt in our ordinary courts apply to the Royal Commission now investigating charges against the Shells committee? If they do, then several newspapers of both parties are guilty of contempt of court. They are discussing and prejudging the results of the Commission according to the bent of their views, making blak white and white black. We can wait, trusting to the justice of the distinguished judges who are presiding. Their decision will be no doubt according to the evidence. If it clears the skirts of the Shell committee the news of it will be all the more welcome for a little waiting; if it condemns, we are in no hurry to hear such a verdict.

FULFILLING THE SCRIPTURE.

Has Germany gained anything by submitting to the will of the military caste—by the wide swing of the mailed fist? It has lost. Germany diplomacy might have decided against the outrage of Belgian neutrality, but the military caste decreed it and brought upon Germany's back Britain with her invincible financial strength, with her invincible navy, with her contemptible little army," now grown to millions. German diplomacy may not have sanctioned the sea murder of innocents, as exampled by the Lusitania, but the military caste decreed it, and by this inhuman policy and practice Germany has alienated the world of civilization, and all but come to blows with the greatest neutral nation of the world. If Germany had been civilized and had refrained from outraging the neutrality of Belgium it might not have had Britain for an enemy and Italy for any enemy. If Germany had invaded France direct, it might not have had to fight two of the most powerful nations of the allied entente. It might have had Verdun and even Paris, and perhaps Petrograd, long before this. Now it is in extremis and "the day" of "Downfall" is dawning for her. Germany's "force," Germany's "frightfulness," Germany's dominating military spirit are the agencies of her undoing. Germany is, or will be, a fulfillment of the spirit of the saying of the Apocalypse, "he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword." From what we have seen of Germany for the past three years, we should not expect her to fulfil the Scriptures in any beneficent way, but in her will be fulfilled the woe of the Scriptures—the dregs of the cup, which divine justice is mixing, will be bitter in her mouth before long.

HUMANITY THE BOND.

It is not politics, or the national sense, nor even the appeal of democracy, that has brought the new and unwritten entente cordiale between the people of the British Empire and the people of the United States of America. It is something higher than either: it is the common sentiment of humanity. Belgium was overrun by the Germans and ruthlessly laid waste, crushed and subjected by a tyranny unmerciful in forms and [illegible] relentlessness and heartless [illegible]

Seven [illegible] Belgians were doomed to starvation and would have starved had it not been for the joint action of the British and United States people. At a recent (the first annual) meeting in London of the National Committee for the Relief of Belgium, generous tribute was paid by Premier Asquith to the United States cooperation; to

The splendid humanity, generosity and quick action of the great American people who rose to the occasion so characteristically and without whom it would not have been possible for the Allies to rescue from starvation seven million Belgians, including women and children."

It is stated that through this committee nine million people are being fed daily in Belgium and northern France. The bond that unites the two greatest and freest nations in the world is the bond of common humanity in whose highest interests the Allies are fighting to-day.

There is felt no surprise that the people of the United States, neutral in other ways, are fighting the noble battle of humanity, side by side with the British people and their Allies.

This condition illustrates the contrasting ideals of the Teutons and civilized nations. Germany overran Belgium and reduced its people to destitution which Britain and her Allies and her Dominions hasteped to relieve. Germany seized the means of subsistence in Belgium and let women and children starve. It is reliably related that the German officers of the army of occupation, feast sumptuously every day with stolen wines and stolen food, while all around them the people whose meat the inhuman oppressors are eating, the women and children, are starving and would starve to death but for the relief which Britain and her Dominions and her Allies and the United States are bringing.

It is no wonder that a common bond of human sympathy unites the two peoples. It is no wonder that the sympathy of the real people of the United States is with the Allies—brought together by drawing of a common humanity. It is no wonder that a few days ago five hundred leading Americans — business men, clergymen, university professors — signed a manifesto of sympathy with Great Britain and her Allies, and called upon the people of the United States, in the name of freedom and humanity, to help defeat the arch-enemy of both—Germany.

It will be vain for the Germans to try to coerce or coax the United States, as is being attempted, into moving for peace. There can be no peace thought of by the warring allies till the power of Germany to destroy peace and outrage the fundamental rights of humanity, is destroyed. The United States, in its present temper, cannot be a party to suggesting or negotiating peace while the power to outrage the principles of humanity remains, undestroyed. Political considerations, the difficulties that complicate the discharge of national responsibility, may indicate that the United States is neutral; but there is no doubt that the mass of the people, the great heart of the nation, is invincibly opposed to German frightfulness and inhumanity, and is irrevocably in sympathy with the cause of human right and human freedom, as represented in their championship by Britain and her Allies.

WHAT'S TO HIDE?

It is bad news that the government refuses to widen the shell inquiry. Why not have the facts brought out? If nothing is wrong, why conceal the facts?—The Star.

SINN FEIN AND THE CHURCH.

It is curious to note the prevalence of the idea that the Sinn Fein is practically a Roman Catholic organization, in spite of the fact that the powers of the Roman Catholic hierarchy are arrayed against it, and are in favour of "home rule" for Ireland.—The Globe.

THE USE OF THE HIGHWAY.

In New York State there are many complaints of the conduct of those who own and run automobiles. One man writes: "Have we, the people living on the State roads, any rights to the highways? If so, how much? I have the impression that we haven't any."

What is the real trouble? There are pedestrians going at one pace, horsemen at another, automobiles at another. There has been no real attempt to determine the rights of these users of the road. Horsemen and owners of automobiles fight the matter out as they are inclined. Pedestrians have no recognized rights. If they use the highway at all, they are supposed to dodge the horses and the automobiles and the trolley cars. They have no road and no rights.

The matter will never be settled until it is settled right. The automobile has come to stay. We all recognize that. The man with a horse has also his rights, and the pedestrian has his rights.

If we were planning out a new country to-day, we should, perhaps, lay out our roads so as to do justice to all. As a matter of fact, we live in a country which was planned out for railways and for horses. We are now faced with new conditions arising out of the invention and development of the automobile.

A comprehensive plan must be devised to meet the new conditions. It must recognize modern scientific progress, but it must also recognize human rights. All the users of the highway ought to "get together" and agree upon a plan.—Toronto Star.

Were Shell Committee Contractors or Agents?

It is difficult to reconcile the action taken by the House of Commons in voting down Mr. Carvell's motion to widen the scope of the fuse inquiry with a sincere desire to discover whether the Shell Committee discharged without fear or favour the great trust reposed in its members by the Imperial Government. The statements of the members of the committee on oath and the documents submitted to the Commissioners are utterly and irreconcilably at variance with the explanation originally made by Sir Robert Borden, and repeated on Friday in the House, as to the position of the committee and its relations to the Imperial and Dominion Governments.

Speaking on April 14, 1915, on the organization of the Shell Committee, the Premier referred to it as "the committee appointed in this country to fill orders which the British Government desired to place here, if they could be placed in Canada, for the supply of munitions. A committee was formed by the Minister of Militia in the early stages of the war, consisting at that time of Col. A. Bertram, Chairman; Thos. Cantley, Esq., George W. Watts, Esq., E. Carnegie, Esq., representing the manufacturers; Col. T. Benson, Master-General of Ordnance; Col. Greville Harston, Chief Inspector of Arms and Ammunition, and Lieut.-Col. F. D. Lafferty, R.C.A., Superintendent of the Dominion Arsenal, representing the Department of Militia and Defence."

Sir Robert Borden insists that this Shell Committee was and is responsible to the Imperial Government, and that it is not the business of the Parliament of Canada to review its operations or hold its members to account for their actions. If the British Government is satisfied with the work the committee did while in existence Canada can have no quarrel with it. The only reason why the fuse inquiry was ordered was because the name of a member of the Government had been brought into the affair through the charges of Mr. Kyte.

That is the Premier's point of view. The evidence produced cannot be reconciled with it. The documents show that Messrs. Bertram, Cantley, Watts, and Carnegie were contractors who had binding contractual relations with the British War Office for the delivery of enormous quantities of shells. The contracts were awarded to them by Sir Sam Hughes at prices fixed in consultation with the War Office. Mr. Watts, in his evidence, swears that the contract is still in force in so far as the shells called for have not yet been supplied, that he considers himself bound by it, and as having a legal right to any profits derived from carrying it out. Like the other members of the committee, he affirms that there never was any intension of distributing these profits among the contractors. To the extent of $31,000,000 they had been handed over to the Imperial Munitions Committee.

Here is an issue as big as a barn door. When the Shell Committee awarded the fuse contracts for $22,000,000 at extravagant rates to Allison's American associates were they contractors letting sub-contracts for a part of the shells they had contracted to deliver to the Imperial Government, or were they a trusted board of advisers who were playing ducks and drakes with the money of the British taxpayer? They could not be both. If they were contractors, prepared to accept any losses that might arise from their own improvidence or mistakes of judgment, there can be no suggestion of illegality no matter how large a rake-off Allison and his friends obtained. If they were—as Sir Robert Borden still asserts—a committee of public-spirited citizens labouring without reward in the public service there should be no refuge in their "contract" from inquiry as to the way in which they discharged that trust.

Having admitted the "contract" and the evidence of the "contractors" as to their anticipated liabilities, their actual profits, and the disposition thereof on the advice of a "high personage," it is difficult to understand why the Commissioners did not permit the fullest cross-examination on the documents and on the evidence admitted, so that it might be tested and sifted. The fuse contracts cannot be entirely dissociated from the contract for shells, of which they were an integral part. The relationship of General Hughes, Col. Wesley Allison, and the American fuse manufacturers to the Shell Committee is the vital point in the inquiry. The public will not be satisfied until it is shown from the books and papers of the Shell Committee while it was yet alive that its four contracting members did regard themselves as contractors and not as trustees for the British taxpayers. If they were trustees in any real sense their treatment of the overtures of Canadian manufacturers who desired to make fuses on this side of the border seems to have been such as to warrant the presentation of the amazing facts to the people of Canada as they have been presented during the past week. Had Canadian manufacturers desirous of making fuses been victims of the plague they would hardly have been more sedulously avoided than they were by Col. David Carnegie, the Shell Committee's technical expert.—The Globe.

THIS EQUINE TALKS.

Missouri Has a Horse That Speaks, Not Fluently, But Frankly.

Clarence, a horse, which speaks its mind freely, has astounded negro stablemen in the vicinity of Higginsville, Mo., and encouraged a belief that he is a supernatural hat rack. He speaks not fluently, but with discretion, and his owner, Clay Goodloe, has never yet failed to understand any statement made by the remarkable bone vault.

Recently, while engaged in beating the soul out of Clarence, Mr. Goodloe heard the animal say, "Oh! Oh!" in tones so human, patient, and withal so agonizing, that for a moment he thought seriously of stopping the current assault. Since then the weird conversationalist has clucked his tongue deprecatingly whenever he has discovered sawdust in his feed, and has said "Oh! Oh!" every time he is allowed to view the family surrey, which deserves some exclamation.

Liquor Board Chairman Says Bad Management Causes Brewers' Woes

LONDON, May 8.—Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the Central Board of Control of the Liquor Traffic, discussing the great drink problem, which "appears to affect alike all countries, new and old, and for which an entirely satisfactory solution has not yet been discovered, says:

"So far as concerns the United Kingdom, the first step to realising the true conditions is to appreciate the fact that in the years immediately preceding the war both the consumption of alcohol and the number of convictions for public drunkenness were steadily going up. In the past good trade has always coincidede with an increase of alcohol consumption, but it is disappointing to realise that in 1910-14 increased taxation of alcohol the temperance propaganda and the licensing regulations in force, which resulted in an annual diminution of about 1,000 licenses a year, had not been sufficient to counter balance the influence of good trade and high wages.

"The second point to which attention should be directed is the readiness with which the public has conformed to the drastic regulations which have been applied during the last nine months. I attribute this attitude to the restrictions being regarded as war necessities and the realization that in a great crisis personal convenience must give way to national efficiency. This patriotic view has not been confined to the consumer and to the public. It has been supported by all the better members of the trade. One of the most gratifying features of our work has been the assistance rendered in many centres by leading houses in the trade to enforce strict compliance with the orders of the Board on those who might be inclined to infringe or evade. It has been realized that such conduct by low class houses was not only detrimental to the public interest, but constituted unfair competition.

Effect of Restrictions.

"Now, as to the effect of individual provisions of the orders, it is difficult to apportion merit, but there is widespread if not general approval of those provisions which prohibit the practice of treating, which prohibit all credit in the matter of alcohol sales and which increase the permissive dilution of spirits. There has been little or no criticism of any of these measures.

"Regarding the restriction of hours more divergence of opinion exists. As you will have understood, the Board has sought to confine the consumption of alcohol to those hours which conflicted least with the working day and which coincided best with ordinary meal hours. One unexpected result appears to have occurred in many cities. That the reduction in the numbers of convictions for drunkenness with aggravations— aggravations usually representing disorder and assault—has been even greater than the reduction in simple drunkenness. No definite cause can be assigned to this effect, but it is a feature in the returns which deserves the attention of all students of the problem.

"If you ask my general conclusion I should say that the period has been too brief for any final opinion to be expressed, but that there can be no doubt that there is ample ground for belief that a vast improvement has been achieved. The drop in public intemperance and of convictions resulting from it which occurred in each area directly the orders were put in force has been steadily maintained up to date. Speaking broadly, there has been no falling back from the best level reached.

To Make Men Sober.

"It is often said 'man cannot be made sober by act of Parliament.' My belief is that under a really intelligent system of regulation three-fourths of the drunkenness which prevailed before the war would never exist again.

"Among other reasons why improvement is or should be easy is the undoubted fact that the financial results of the present system are poor. Do not imagine that the present condition is favourable to trade interests. No one who has studied the present methods of administration closely can fail to realise how ineffective and extravagant the present mode of retailing alcohol to the public is.

"Licensed houses are not only too numerous from the public order and police point of view—that every one knows—but they do not know that they are too numerous from the standpoint of trade efficiency, and that the same net profit could be realized from licensed houses reduced in number by thirty or forty per cent. Reformers have talked so much about the swollen profits of the brewing trade that many brewers do not realise how small their net profits are compared with the enormous turnover. If there was less extravagant competition and a little more intelligent adjustment and organization, gross receipts, which exceed the total takings of all railways in the kingdom by fifty per cent., should afford a very different net result from that now attained.

"Out of £185,000,000 ($930,000,000) £64,000,000 ($320,000,000) are absorbed by taxation. The cost of materials and manufacture does not exceed £40,000,000 ($200,000,000), leaving about £80,000,000 ($400,000,000) for retail expenditure and for profit — too much of the former and not enough of the latter. There is a large margin for economy without detriment to anybody.

How Money is Wasted.

"Apart from the cost of maintaining inefficient public houses to the certain prejudice of public order and the increase of intemperance, large sums of money are frittered away by unnecessary transport. A brewery in the east of London has two or three houses in the west and has to send carts and wagons to take the beer and to bring back empties. Meantime a similar state of affairs prevails with breweries in the west of London, who have to send their goods to the east. In the provinces it is worse—the railways are blocked and the roads worn by unnecessary carriage of beer that under more intelligent conditions would never leave its own district.

"Are brewers to be blamed for this? Not altogether. They have been so occupied in resisting outside attack that they have not had much inclination to improve inside organization.

"The object of reform should be, not to hit the brewer and the distiller, but to get better results from them. And that is only possible if a broad view is taken of their position, if their difficulties are recognised and if their co-operation is secured in modifying the present position and effecting economies in the existing widely extravagant and ineffective system.

"If I talk about their profits, it is that profits are convertible currency. It is easy to convert them into social reforms, public house reform, increased temperance and other things necessary to the welfare of the community.

To Make Reforms Easier.

"Assuming internal economies in the brewing trade to be accomplished it would be much easier to effect the kind of reforms which are necessary in the public interest. The present competition for trade, which is said to account for much of the drunkenness which prevails, would almost wholly disappear. Again, it would be possible to negotiate for a stricter code of management and observation in the public houses themselves. Those responsible for the management of the trade would be able to approach all such questions from a different standpoint from that adopted in the past, in that they would have a greater percentage of profit out of a smaller business because of the economies of management.

"It might be made almost impossible for the habitual drunkard to obtain more than was good for him, and the occasional drunkard could be largely eliminated if checked in time on curative lines. Very little is done for the drunkard to-day. I think he has a real grievance.

"These are the results which might flow from the suppression of unnecessary houses and foolish expenditure. Intoxicating liquor needs no artificial pushing to command a steady sale and a lucrative trade. The customers are there and the number of those who misuse the privilege of purchase is relatively small. This small minority brings discredit upon and danger to the trade as a whole.

"The public have now had an opportunity of seeing what is possible on new lines under the Board's orders, and in a readjustment of pre-war conditions we may easily find a solution of many of the more pressing problems of the evil of intemperance."

Allies To Break Into Foe's Line Via Southeast Route

When Russia Is Ready With Six Million Men, Well Equipped—May Be Next Spring When Rush Comes

LONDON, May 9.—Events have begun to advance the argument which occupies more and more the minds of critics of the war. On land the allies have not yet found their methods. They have done many things in the wrong way. When are they going to tackle the main things in the right way? Can they clean it up within any practicable period, despite the apparently interminable obstruction of their purposes on all sides? The conviction grows that they can, but only if the western powers will take a fundamentally different view of the order of the war and adopt measures once for all to link up with Russia.

Move With the Sun.

The likely plan for the allies as a whole must move with the sun, and full light must break from the east before it spreads to the west. I have repeatedly hinted at this view, but the time was not ripe until now for dealing with it at length. There have been for nearly eighteen months two schools of military thinkers differing completely in their opinion as to the sound order of expectations and the efforts.

One school, at first a minority even in England, but now strong even in France, held that the whole war should be regarded as one, that the logic of seige and seige-craft should be accepted and applied on a vast scale. The outer defences of the Central Empire and Turkey should be assailed at their weakest parts and overthrown, then the inner wall, to use a somewhat mediaeval metaphor, should be reached, and finally the German citadel should be invested and reduced by the concentrated force of all the besiegers.

Germans Great Strength.

What is the state of the problem for the allies, especially in Flanders and Artois? The Germans have the service of a wonderful network of main and light railways. Their front is within a few hours' run from their Rhine bridges and their chief centres of population. Their equipment in machine guns, trench mortars, and heavy weapons is what we know. Their output of high explosive shells is immense. It follows that the advantages of the defensive on their side are still enormous.

Too Early For Ally Offensive.

The France-British could only assail the German lines in a general offensive, with no certainty of success under present conditions, to say the least—I write moderately — and with a prodigious sacrifice of men and material which might be employed later with decisive effect, indeed when means and devices of attack had been further multiplied and increased by the allies and when other things had happened elsewhere.

Russia's Handicap.

The Russians are in a not very dissimilar position. Their railway facilities and other means of movement are inferior to those of the enemy. They are faced along their further stretched front by defensive works of the most elaborate and formidable kind, backed by excellent means of communication. The Russians' recuperation has been marvellous. But they are only half way toward the development of their ultimate strength. They are in no hurry. By next spring they will have six million equipped men with artillery and all ammunition to match. With time they can do their part of the work, and enable the allies in the West to do theirs if the latter have equal endurance.

Break in At East.

Grim and far-sighted patience enough between the North Sea and the Vosges are needed while emulating and co-operating with the Russians in sufficient activity in that common field for the operations of all the allies — the south-astern theatre through which lies the absolutely sure line of approach to the vitals of the Central Empires. Can that line nothing could stop the allies if they were resolute to do their business.

That business once thoroughly accomplished, everything else should be added unto them on the main fronts. The Ottoman Empire once completely mastered, the movement through the Balkans would be deadly to Austria, and in the end to both the Central Empires, for it would thrust in from the south between the main lines of their dispositions, east and west. In Armenia the Grand Duke has shown what can be done. If the western allies would use their sea power to co-operate definitely with him, everything could be done, and sooner than is now generally imagined.

Russians Closing In.

After Erzerum and Trebizond, the Russians are weaving their toils around Erzinjan. Once that is in their hands the capture of Kharput and Diarbakr will be sure. The Russians would be within less than 200 miles from the Syrian coast, opposite the Island of Cyprus, occupied by Lord Beaconsfield, with prophetic vision as a future base. By co-operating from that coast, Britain and France could make sure of joining hands with the Grand Duke. What then? Armenia, Mesopotamia, Assyria, and the whole Arabic world would be cut off from the Ottoman Empire. Reduced to Anatola, deprived of all the non-Turkish dominions, threatened with final disaster, the Ottoman partner would perforce withdraw.

Turkey Ready to Quit.

Even now we know for certain that Turkey has had enough and would fain negotiate a separate peace, but has probably not yet had quite enough to bring the Porte and the Young Turks once for all to the indispensable terms. Now, if the Grand Duke has shown what may be done in the near East it must next be remembered that on both sides of the sea in that region, especially at Salonika and in Egypt, the western allies, with the reconstituted Serb army, 150,000 strong, have more than 600,000 men altogether co-operating with the Russians on a definite plan of progressive advance. These forces could eliminate Turkey in Asia altogether from the struggle in the present campaign. Next they could as certainly make sure of Constantinople and reopen the Black Sea. Next the Grand Duke himself could cross the Bosphorus and take command in the Balkans. In that peninsula the troops of the grand alliance alone would number—after certain convenient readjustments—at least a million.

To Bring Roumania In.

But other things would happen. Roumania would strike in on the side would change sides and rulers. The Greeks would move with the great tide. The Italians, now blocked on the Isonzo, would recover mobility, and would be able for the first time to bring their reserves into play.

Above all, perhaps, Russia by that time would have another couple of million men equipped. Through Roumania and the Black Sea full military contact would be established between her main armies and all the other forces of the allies.

The position of Austria-Hungary would become hopeless. The whole great German system of defence in Central Europe would be broken through from the south. The Germans could no longer reinforce their front between the Vosges and the sea. Nay, they would have to weaken it. Then, indeed, the Franco-British armies would come to their own in the West, and their success would be the crowning act of the whole mighty drama of Armageddon. It is a clear plan, and I am more than ever convinced that if Russia but holds firm against every German onslaught in the coming campaign, the method I have described will have proved before the end or next year to be the allies' line of victory.

RID YOURSELF OF BODILY WEAKNESS

A DISTRACTING CONDITION THAT IS PERMANENTLY CURED BY FERROZONE. A PLEASANT REMEDY IN TABLET FORM TO BE TAKEN AFTER EACH MEAL.

All fagged out! Dear come as slow as molasses in January. You think of things just a minute or so too late. Snap is gone, and the bouyancy and strength that makes life a pleasure, that's gone, too.

The doctor would say that you are run down, and you don't eat or digest enough. Your stomach requires some aid, and probably your digestion needs a bracer. The blood should have phosphorus and iron to strengthen and purify it.

Now Ferrozone is a wonderful blood maker and nerve stimulant. It is really a food for the blood, nerves and vital energies, and will improve your run down condition in a very short time.

Ferrozone will make you strong and capable of doing a heavy day's work without fatigue. It is a marvelous Remedy and does marvellous things as the following testimonial proves.

"After my Baby was born I was left in a weak, sickly condition, totally unfit for a mother's household duties. I was excitable and nervous, and trifling things bothered me very much. I somehow would not gain strength, although I took malt extracts and tonics all the time. A lady friend recommended Ferrozone, which I used with splendid results. The first box helped quite a little, and when I had taken six boxes my former health, ruddy cheeks and good spirits, were fully restored."

You can't spend 50c. to a better advantage than on a box of Ferrozone, and the sooner you get Ferrozone, the sooner you will get well. Don't accept a substitute, but insist on your druggist supplying the genuine Ferrozone which sells for 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25.

LOVE TEST BLINDED HIM.

Until Vision of Woman Ceased Husband Swore Not to Open Eyes.

Nine months ago the wife of Walter Engelysh, of San Francisco, Cal., objected to his looking at other women, and as a love test he agreed not to open his eyes until the vision of women ceased to come before him. Engelysh is now blind.

He and his wife were arrested on charges of vagrancy in Fresno, Cal., the other day and are being held in jail pending an investigation. They have been in Fresno for a few weeks. They posed as father and daughter and were reported to be searching for Engelysh's son.

In the mystery with which the police find themselves confronted is the man's inexplicable devotion to the girl's slightest whim. She is 22 years old and looks hardly 18. The husband is 34.

GIRL QUELLS MUTINY

NEW YORK, May 9.—With a crew in open mutiny and a south-west hurricane ripping her canvas to ribbons the four-masted barque Mashona might have ended her days in Davy Jones' locker if it hadn't been for the Captain's daughter.

Seventy-seven days out from Buenos Ayres, the Mashona came into port yesterday and cast anchor off Tomkinsville.

Able seamen were scarce in Buenos Ayres when the Mashona was ready to sail, and Captain Gunderson had to content himself with a crew of six beach-combers.

They behaved as well as they knew until the fresh meat gave out. Then they began to make trouble.

It was when the Mashona was labouring in a hurricane, tossing her canvas while the crew refused to work, that Alvida Gunderson, aged only 19, braving every peril, went among the malcontents and so shamed them with her taunts and reproaches that the more sensitive among them were stung into obeying the captain's commands.

With flashing eyes she pointed out to the police when the vessel arrived in New York the four ringleaders. They were hustled over the side to the police boat.

Give a horse that kicks with his fore feet the freedom of a roomy box stall. If he still kicks in such a stall put on a breast-collar, and from the breast strap hang a number of flat pieces of lead on strings so that they will strike the animal when he starts to kick.

Wonderful progress has been made during the past year in the development of the light-weight farm tractor. There are many small machines on the market to-day suitable for a great variety of field work.

Will Your Widow Write a Letter Like This?

Will your widow have to write such a letter as follows received recently from one whose husband after taking an insurance refused to continue it?

My husband met his death on May 22nd by accidental drowning and as I am a poor widow with 5 children left without any means of support. I would thank you if you would advise me whether I am entitled to the insurance.

"A heart-breaking letter to answer," you say. It is indeed.

BUT WHAT ANSWER WILL YOUR WIDOW GET?

Ah! that's the question! Have you a policy? Is it in good standing? If not, man, see to it! See to it to-day! For to-day you may be insurable, to-morrow you may not be!

Bishop O'Brien Makes Recruiting Speech

Appeals Strongly to Young Men of Cobourg to Fill Up the Gaps

COBOURG, May 9.—Right Rev. Mgr. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough, delivered one of the most logical and convincing addresses yet heard in Cobourg at a patriotic and recruiting meeting held in the Opera House here. Upon the platform also were the following clergy: Rev. Father Ryan, Toronto, an old Cobourg boy; Very Rev. Monsignor Murray, Cobourg; Rev. Father McGuire, Ennismore; Rev. Father Scanlan, Grafton and Rev. Father McFadden, Wooler. Mayor E. A. Duncan occupied the chair.

Bishop O'Brien cited the principal objections that recruiting officers meet with in their work, and fairly, suarely and convincingly answered every one. He made a strong appeal to the young men of Cobourg to come forward and fill the gaps left by the deaths of their comrades from this town, some of whom have recently fallen in the severe fighting during April, and also the gaps left by those who have been wounded. He paid a high tribute to the heroism of the wives and mothers of the soldiers.

PRESIDENT SCOTT WILL BE HERE

Mr. Scott writes that nothing but unavoidable business at headquarters will detain him.

Berlin Shops Looted By An Angry Mob

BERLIN, May 9.—A mob gathered in Charlottenburg last night and swept through the streets, plundering two butter shops, and smashing signs and windows of a number of other butter shops and meat shops, including the municipal meat shop.

The rioting, which was soon ended, was due chiefly to indignation aroused in the last few days, by the discovery that a number of the butchers were withholding from sale meat delivered them by the city for sale to the poorer people holding meat cards or had sold it privately at prices exceeding the official maximum.

No small part of the indignation was probably due to the insolent treatment of purchasers by clerks, especially in butter and meat shops. The police have begun a series of investigations of butcher shops and already have arrested a number of butchers, who, instead of selling pork delivered to them, were salting, smoking or making sausages from it and reserving it for future sale, as the maximum prices fr these goods are much higher than for fresh pork.

A New, Harmless Way To Banish Hairy Growths

(Beauty Tepics)

By following this suggestion any woman can, in the privacy of her own home, remove every trace of hair or fuzz from her face. Wilt powdered delatone and water mix enough paste to cover the not wanted hairs, apply and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off and wash the skin. This method is unfailing, harmless, and quick in results, but care should be employed to get the genuine delatone.

Little chicks should be protected from cool, damp surroundings. Nothing is more detrimental to their health and more certain to bring heavy mortality than to let them out in the wet grass early in the morning.

IN MEMORIAM.

Lines on the death of Gordon H. Carveth, killed in action April 9th, 1916.

War is cruel and bloodshed;
The country with sadness is rife
As the messages carry the tidings
Another has laid down his life.

We know not what lives are being blighted,
Nor what bright hopes war's hand may destroy.
But we know when each message of sadness
Tells of loss—it is somebody's boy.

This time the word said it was Gordone,
How cruel a few words may be—
Let us not forget as we mourn him
He died that we might be free.

Away in the distance he's buried—
In France—'neath her sunny blue dme.
Why mourn him, without consolation
When his Father has taken him home.

His spirit now rests in Heaven,
What a change from the tumult and strife,
Let us think of him still as living
Because he has entered "Life."

—L. M. B.

AMERICAN ON GERMAN SUB. HAS THRILLING EXPERIENCE

New York, May 8—Landing in New York with $1.10 in his pockets from the Anchor liner Tuscania which arrived here from Liverpool on Wednesday, John D. Harrison, a Boer who graduate of Chicago told today a story of having been pulled aboard a German submarine in the Bay of Biscay after the ship on which he was steward had been sunk; then cast adrift on a life raft to be picked up two hours later by a Scotch patrol boat and finally landed at Falmouth wearing a rough suit of clothes which was given to him by the German submarine commander.

Everything that he owned including some high school pins and engagement rings went down in the Bay of Biscay off Finisterre, Harrison says, when the British ship Margam Abbey was sunk on April 10th. Through the United States consul Lorin A. Lathrop of Cardiff, Wales, Harrison has filed a claim with the British Admiralty for $250 for the loss of his effects.

A LIVELY EXPERIENCE

Harrison is 24 years old, but in the one month and thirteen days from the time that he shipped at Rio de Janeiro on the Margam Abbey which was laden with flour and other provisions to supply the British cruisers in the Atlantic, to the day when from the deck of the submarine he saw the British ship go down off the coast of France, he has had more thrilling experiences than usually fall to the lot of even a veteran sailor.

So far as is known he is the first American who has been inside of a German U-boat while she was in action, for at the moment he was eating his breakfast, provided by his enemies the submarine fired a parting shot at the sinking ship.

The commander was very polite to Harrison, Harrison says. He spoke English and asked me to go up on deck with the officers and there we stood until the Margam Abbey took her final plunge and disappeared beneath the waves. The Germans all took off their hats and cheered."

A VISIT TO "VICTORY" MAKES ONE REALIZE OLD ENGLAND'S SPIRIT

"I Never Felt Prouder in My Life That I Am a Britisher," Writes Capt. M. H. Park, Well Known Peterboro' Officer, in Describing a Visit to Nelson's Flag-ship.

CAPT. M. H. PARK
59th Battalion

WERE ON HOLY GROUND

Dr. H. G. Park of the Normal School, has received a most interesting letter from his son, Capt. Maurice Park of the 57th Regiment, now overseas with the 59th Battalion. The well-known Peterborough hockey player writes as follows:

Thursday, April 20, 1916.

Dear Father,—By what was to us a rather fortunate combination of circumstances, three of the 59th officers and myself were able to come to Portsmouth this afternoon from Bramshott Camp, where we have been taking a course in field entrenching.

I don't know any other place, except London, perhaps, that I would like to see more than this old seaport. As soon as we had located ourselves we took a train for the harbour. Of course you know that the old "Victory" lies there out just a few hundred yards from the quay and you may be sure that we had eyes for nothing else until we had visited the old ship.

It would be very difficult for me were I asked to do so, to describe my feelings on seeing her for the first time and on visiting what is perhaps one of the most sacred spots in the British Empire, the place where Nelson fell. It is one thing to read about it; another to see it.

There was just one other visitor while we were there, an old English clergyman; so we had lots of time and a good chance to see all that is of interest.

The old vessel lies there quietly, securely moored, while all around her the modern vessels make their way with their big crowds of people. In the distance one can see a first-class warship, a torpedo boat destroyer moving up the harbour and the patrol boats moving up and down. You can imagine that it is a very busy port just at this time.

The contrast is a striking one. When I boarded the "Victory" I think I forget about everything else except that I was on Nelson's flagship, on the very decks that he walked upon when he fought the famous fight that broke the power of France and Spain. I never felt prouder in my life of the fact that I am a Britisher, and I think, never more humble.

The first place we visited of course was the spot on the deck where Nelson fell. There is a tablet there much worn now, that marks the place. They have kept everything that could be preserved at all. Considering that she has been lying there for a great number of years, the boat is in a remarkable state of preservation. They still have many of the old guns and we saw how they were worked. They have two of the large sails that she carried at Trafalgar, one of them with ninety holes in it, the other with sixty.

We visited every deck and went down to the cock-pit where Nelson was carried after he received his death wound. There is a simple tablet with the words "Here Nelson Died," and three large wreaths on the spot where his body lay. I stood there quietly for a little time, not wanting to leave the spot, somehow.

As we passed along the deck one of my brother officers said: "It seems as if we were on holy ground." "Yes," I said, "it is." And, indeed, I don't know of any spot that could inspire that feeling in me any more so.

The guide who was with us showed us everything of interest. They have a small museum there with many pictures of Nelson and the battles he won. There is a picture of his death that is a most striking one. It must be very like the actual scene. I would like to have spent hours more, but we had to leave.

I tell you, as I stood on the deck of that famous old boat, I felt that I could understand a little better the spirit of old England. I thought of the thousands and thousands of her fighting sons who have given up their lives for her sake on the seas, and who are giving them now, gladly, without fuss or nonsense, keeping up the glorious traditions of the past. The old vessel lies there quietly, as she has for many years and years, but she tells you things that you could but dimly understand before. It is all there, the indomitable spirit of old England—the mistress of the seas. If I gave way to my fancy, I could see Nelson standing there on the deck as he stood when his two lines of warships came dashing through the Spanish and French column, smashing their way to victory; I think I could see him, too, looking away out from the harbour over the sea to where the great fleet lies now silent, but ever watchful, keeping the shores of his dear native country safe, as he kept them of old. And I think I could see a smile of content on his face as if the work was well done; as if England's sons to-day were carrying out, as they ever have done, what his famous signal calls for—"England expects that every man will do his duty."

"I am exceedingly incensed at these maliciously false stories, which have gained wide circulation even in responsible circles in Berlin. I appeal from these base falsehoods to the leaders of the German Government. They know that I have always done everything to maintain peace between Germany and America. Naturally I cannot say what happened at the German army headquarters, where I met the Kaiser. I cannot say whether I asked the Kaiser for an audience or he invited me to meet him. I am only my Government's servant. I receive orders, carry them out, and report as to their performance.

The breeding of horses seems to keep pace with the manufacture of automobiles, and there is no prospect of a decline in the demand for either.

EDITORS ONCE DOCTORS

Provincial Newspaper Offices Were Equipped With Medicines.

Keene's Bath Journal, which ceased publication recently, was one of the oldest weekly newspapers in the provinces, says the London Times. Known as the Bath Journal, it was founded in 1748 by Thomas Roddeley, whose portrait in wig and ruffles, by Hoare, forms a picturesque reminder of the period. His daughter married John Keene, the journal from this union passing on to and through a succession of Keenes, hence its title Keene's Bath Journal.

As was the custom in bygone days, patent medicines were sold in provincial newspaper offices, and the drawers in which the pills and medicines were kept at the Journal office were until recently in their original position. It was nothing unusual for the editor in the throes of writing his editorials to have to step down from his seat to serve a box of pills.

The pages of the Journal were for a long period largely taken up by advertisements of various 'cure-alls.'

TRIBUTE TO THE WORK OF A METHODIST MINISTER

The following from the St. Louis Christian Advocate refers to the Pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Hot Springs, Arkansas, whose Church was attended by Peterborough people on a recent sojourn in that city:

There are few men either in public or private life, who from time to time, have been the recipients of more genuine compliments as evidence of appreciation of valuable service rendered, than Rev. Theodore Copeland of Central Methodist Church. And why should this not be so since this good man has consecrated his life to the service of his Maker in the effort to point out to the sinner and to the ungodly, the path that leads to everlasting life. Would that every community had more men of this stamp as teachers and leaders and the world would be better off. The following notice written by ex-Governor Lon V. Stephens of Missouri was taken from the St. Louis Christian Advocate of recent date:

In a letter from former Governor Lon V. Stephens, to the editor, he says: "I am just home again, after a three weeks' visit to Hot Springs, Ark. I found my old pastor, Rev. Theodore Copeland, the busiest and happiest man in the city. His good people have just finished an $85,000 church building, and Bro. Copeland tells me, the amount yet unpaid upon it has been practically provided for. There is not a more beautiful or modern church in any part of Missouri, excepting only St. Louis. The Methodists of Hot Springs deserve great credit for the splendid efforts they have exerted in this enterprise, after having lost within but a few years, two of their churches by fire. The church is in a most healthful condition, and I find the members, as well as the people, generally of Hot Springs devoted and loyal to Dr. Copeland. He is popular with all classes and is considered one of the city's most esteemed citizens and loyal boosters. At each service I attended the auditorium was crowded. It seats over 800 people. Dr. Copeland delivers human messages, and they have access to the hearts of his hearers. At every service there are additions. I think within the last two months — since Conference, he has taken in about seventy-five new members. I am sure your many readers in St. Louis will be glad to hear of Dr. Copeland's wonderful success, in what has always been considered a difficult field.

Adjourned Vestry Meetings At All Saints' and St. Luke's

Progress Denoted at Both Churches —Several Organizations at St. Luke's Have Had a Successful Year

The adjourned vestry meeting of All Saints' church was held last evening, with the Rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., in the chair. The main business of the meeting was the adoption of the auditors' report, which was presented by Mr. James Edgar, and showed the various financial statements to be in a satisfactory condition.

A building fund committee was elected, composed of Mr. C. E. Sisson, Mr. R. N. Jones, Mr. J. W. Worth and Mr. Jas. Edgar.

The Rector announced that owing to the resignation of Mr. A. E. Smeaton, he had appointed ex-Mayor Buller to be his warden for the ensuing year.

A great deal of interesting discussion took place on matters pertaining to the church's welfare and the enthusiastic speeches of the various officers augured well for future progress.

At the close of the meeting a social time was enjoyed by all present.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Progress was the keynote of the various reports presented at the adjourned Easter Vestry meeting at St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, last evening. The chair was occupied by the Rector, Rev. W. H. White, who, after devotional exercises, called upon Mr. R. H. Turner, in the absence of the Vestry Clerk, to read the minutes of the Easter Vestry on April 24th, which were adopted.

Mr. E. A. Peck presented the Auditor's report, showing a clean financial sheet.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., People's Warden, gave the budget of expenditures for the ensuing year, and the amount of money required to cover the same.

A discussion as to the advisability of at present enlarging the Sunday School, took place, but action was deferred until such time as a proper estimate of the cost could be ascertained.

The Rector's report was full of interest, commenting on various branches of the work, and showing where improvement could be made.

The various organizations, through their secretaries, presented their reports, as follows:

Sunday School, by Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., (Supt.), and Mr. Arold Adams, Secretary-Treasurer, Home Department; Mr. R. B. Rogers, Rector's Bible Class, Miss Eva Crane, the Choir, Mrs. W. A. Greenslade; man's Auxiliary, Mrs. J. Butcher, Women's Guild, Mrs. D. Lawrence, Girl's Auxiliary, Miss Clara Adams, Jr. Auxiliary, Miss Ada Norris, Chancel Guild, Miss Elsie Dawson; Men's Club, Mr. F. Whitehouse; St. Luke's Parish Magazine, P. A. Crane.

Votes of thanks were tendered the various officers and organizations for the splendid work of the past year.

Following the adjournment of the meeting a social hour was spent and refreshments served.

MRS. GERARD DIDN'T PUT KAISER'S DECORATION ON DOG

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—The text of an interview with the American Ambassador, James W. Gerard, as published by the Neues Wiener Journal (Vienna), follows:

"I cannot tell about conditions in America because I have not been there for three years, nor am I sufficiently informed as to the views of the President and the Secretary of State, for the reason that communication between Berlin and Washington is very difficult, even for me. But I hope that peace between Germany and the United States will be maintained.

"I wish you would state that in this crisis and in all former crises I have attached the utmost importance to clearing away misunderstandings between Germany and America. I have always done everything to help avert a conflict between the Government to which I am accredited and my Government. I do not wish for war between Germany and America, have never wished it, shall never wish it. The accusation that I am an enemy of the Germans is absolutely untrue. I have never done anything to justify the reproach that I dislike the German people.

"It has been said of me lately, therein."

with a semblance of proof, that I have encouraged my Government to go to war, that I said the German Government could make as many concessions as it wished, but war was inevitable, because I wished it. They have said that I owned a munitions factory in America, and therefore was financially interested in the war.

TURNBULLS

Drive of the Enemy on Both Sides of the Meuse Breaks Down

With Fresh Divisions and More Heavy Guns Teutons Launch Fierce Attacks, Gaining Ground, Which They Are Unable to Hold Against Counter-Drives of Enemy

PARIS, May 8.—The German offensive on both banks of the Meuse has once more resulted in complete failure. The whole corps of fresh troops hastily summoned by the Crown Prince to reinforce the one which has already fought at Verdun merely succeeded in increasing the tremendous number of casualities inflicted by the terrific French artillery fire.

After two days and nights of uninterrupted drenching with heavy shell of explosive and asphyxiating character of the French advanced lines, which were reduced to an unrecognizable mass of debris. The Germans launched a fierce attack, expecting to break the stubborn French resistance. Wave upon wave of grey-coated men, numbering 40,000 advanced, and were blown to pieces by the impassable curtain of fire from the French 75's, supported by heavy guns in the rear.

WIDEN "FIELD OF DEATH"

How many lie dead on neutral ground between the opening trenches is now impossible to estimate, but it is certain that the victims lost their lives in an utterly futile attempt.

The net result of this new outbreak of the German offensive is merely a slight widening of 'the filed of death' that narrow strip of territory separating the French and German positions.

Not only were the Crown Prince's troops unable to occupy the front line trenches, which had been voluntarily evacuated in the early part of the battle as untenable under the hurricane of shells, but during last night and this morning the Verdun heroes succeeded in dislodging the Germans from a few advanced positions which they entered yesterday.

FIVE CONSECUTIVE ATTACKS

It is especially to the northwest of Hill No. 304 that the battle has attained its climax. Here the Germans have attacked five consecutive times in serried ranks. Battalion after battalion was launched at double-quick step to its last march, an easy mark for the French gunners.

When finally the remaining troops managed to obtain a foothold in this section of the French positions the French infantry counter-attacked with the bayonet and chased them out everywhere except in a small communicating trench of the outposts. The hand-to-hand battle, say eye-witnesses, reached a terrific paroxysm. Bayonets, knives, rifle butts and fists were equally good weapons for the fighters, who, one and all had sworn to die rather than give way.

"The Germans will not pass," said Gen. Petain on passing the immediate command of the Verdun section on to his successor, Gen. Nivelle.

FOR NOT SATISFIED.

But it would be folly to imagine that the Crown Prince will be satisfied to take the historic French fortress. Each time his artillery preparation is characterized by greater intensity and duration.

More than 1,000,000 shells of all calibres have exploded along the French front line in the last forty-eight hours, and the fact that more than 40,000 troops were employed shows that the attack was not a mere feint to mask other preparations, but was a real and desperate attempt to attain a big success, regardless of the cost in lives.

The number of French casualties, owing to the General Staff's standing policy of sparing lives whenever possible, is not to be compared with the German losses. When the figures are published the awful truth will be revealed to the world that nearly 200,000 Germans have fallen dead or wounded, or been taken prisoners during the eleven weeks of the great battle.

Thomas Kinnear, Wholesale Grocer, Died in Toronto

Mr. Thomas Kinnear, head of the wholesale grocery firm of T. Kinnear & Co. of Toronto and Peterborough, is referred to in the following obituary sketch from to-day's Mail and Empire:

One of Toronto's best known business men passed away yesterday in the person of Mr. Thomas Kinnear, of 99 Spadina Road.

Mr. Kinnear was born in Ballymena, County Antrim, Ireland, on April 15, 1846, and came to Canada with his parents at the age of 17. He began his business career in the employ of Richard Dunbar, a well-known grocer of the time, on the old market square. In 1871 Mr. Kinnear established himself in the retail grocery trade with J. W. Lang under the style of Kinnear and Lang.

Nine years later he disposed of his interest in this firm to Mr. Lang and founded the present wholesale grocery business known as T. Kinnear and Company, of Toronto and Peterborough, of which he remained the sole proprietor.

Mr. Kinnear is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Eakin and Miss Olive B. Kinnear; and three sons, Harvey S., Thomas H., and A. Roy.

In religion the deceased was a Presbyterian. He was an elder of the Bloor street church for a number of years, and prior to that was for many years an elder of Cooke's church. In both of these churches he was an earnest and conscientious worker. In politics Mr. Kinnear was a Conservative. He was a past president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, a member of the Board of Trade, and honorary governor of the Toronto General Hospital a director of the Merchants' Fire Insurance Company, and president of the Queen City Vinegar Company.

Arrangements are being made to hold the funeral on Wednesday next.

NO LOBSTER HABIT AND POWDER PUFF FOR HIS DAUGHTER

HUSBAND RELATES THEIR MANY QUARRELS, MOST OF THEM OVER HOW SHE SHOULD ENTERTAIN HERSELF.

New York, May 8th.—Rebelling against a sentence to live in Brooklyn Mrs. Ethel Van Brink, the young wife of Louis Van Brink, shattered the agreement they had reached after several exciting separations and told her husband that he could go his way but hers led to the joys of Manhattan, according to the testimony before Justice Frederick E. Crane, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn.

Although Mr. Van Brink, who is a wealthy auctioneer, has the custody of their daughter, Janet, eight years old in his home at No. 588 Bedford avenue, he applied for a writ of habeas corpus to establish his right to her permanent custody.

Mr. Van Brink, who is fifty and quite sedate, testified that his wife only twenty-six, but married nine years, was "addicted to the terrible lobster habit," and that on one occasion he had been the victim of a "frame up" on divorce evidence in which his wife had obtained $50,000 in bonds from him. She could not stay away from the dances, the theatres, the restaurants and the skating places of Manhattan, he said, and was not fit to have the custody of the child.

After Mr. Van Brink said he had had dinner in January, 1913, with a Mrs. Treest, whom he had met because he was told that she wished to sell the contents of her apartment, he testified that she had been employed as a detective to manufacture evidence on which his wife could obtain a divorce.

SHE CALLED WIFE UNWORTHY

"But after she had known me for a few hours," testified Mr. Van Brink, "she said to me, 'You have been misrepresented by your wife, who is unworthy of you. You are not the kind of a man you were represented to be. Out of respect to your gray hairs I'm not going through with the thing I was engaged to do.'

"After I had reached my home at No. 207 West Ninety-eighth street, Mrs. Treest called and we were standing in the hall discussing what she had hired me to do,' when the door was broken in and my wife's sister, and her 'star boarder' appeared, and declared that they had evidence upon which to get a divorce.

"When divorce papers had been served upon me I met a friend of mine—a man I believed was a friend of mine—D. C. Meyers, an attorney, who said that he could settle the whole thing without expense, and he became my attorney. However, I gave my wife's lawyer $1,000 and agreed to pay her $35 a week pending the divorce action, and in March I signed a paper, not knowing what it was. This turned out to be a promise to pay my wife $50,000 for her to drop the action.

"I did pay her $50,000 in bonds and we became reconciled. We went to Atlantic City for a trip, and she told me that the whole thing was a 'frame up,' and that Meyers had told her to do the thing.

"In the summer of 1914 we went to the Catskills and there my wife neglected me and was always out in the fields with a young fellow of twenty. Upon her return to the city my wife seldom was at home. She painted her face, wore big hats and short skirts and admitted to me that she was out at nights to the Broadway restaurants.

TRIED TO DIE, THEN REPENTED

"When I reproved her in February, 1915, she swallowed bichloride of mercury and the physicians had to work on her for four hours. Then she gave back to me $35,000 in bonds I had given to her and she said she was conscience stricken. After a separation again she asked to be taken back and I did so, last November, upon her agreement to live in Brooklyn, that she never would paint nor powder her face or pencil her eyebrows, and that she never would go to Manhattan except to see her mother and then would take her daughter.

"Later I learned she was frequenting a skating rink in Manhattan, burlesque shows and Broadway restaurants. When I protested she said she did not want to stay at home with a man like me, that she wanted to skate and ride and she wanted to meet men.

"I was unable to sleep one night last winter and I sat up all night in the home that I had provided at No. 845 Eastern Parkway, where she now lives. I was at a window at six in the morning when an automobile drove up with my wife and a man. They stood in the vestibule for an hour before parting."

Mr. Van Brink was compelled to give the name of that man, and he said it was a Manhattan judge.

"I told her something had to be done, and she told me to go plump to hell and do it. Then we parted for good."

The case will be continued to-day.

$400 DONATION FOR A FIELD KITCHEN

A donation of $400.00 toward the purchase of a field kitchen for the 39rd Battalion has been made by a citizen. This represents half the cost of this useful convenience to the men in the field and on the march, and it won't be long until the Peterborough Battalion will have every day opportunities of using it.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

"A street car is a public convenience and has to be kept in a decent condition. I don't think a dog would vomit in his own home." These remarks were addressed to an individual in this morning's police court, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting a street car conductor. The latter asked the culprit to refrain from spitting in the car. Defendant declined and a fracas ensued in which a couple of passes were made at Conductor Guthrie and a window in the street car broken. The accused was fined five dollars, and ordered to pay one dollar costs.

Maxwell McLennan was found guilty of assaulting Thomas Hubel, on Saturday last, and was fined five dollars and costs, amounting in all to $8.75.

CLANRICARDE WILL FILED.

Bulk of Marquis' $12,500,000 Estate Goes to Great-Nephew.

LONDON, May 9.—The will of the Marquis of Clanricarde, who died recently, has been proved at £2,500,000 ($12,500,000). He bequeaths £1,000 ($4,000) yearly to his niece, Burga Weyland, and £20,000 ($100,000 to his nephew, Mark Weyland.

The residue of the estate goes to his great-nephew, Harry Lascelles.

Lord Clanricarde was one of the most unpopular of Irish landlords. He was the owner of about 57,000 acres of land in County Galway, and it was charged in the House of Commons had evicted by force 350 families.

"This is an odd way girls have of getting into society." "How is it odd?" "Why, to get in they first have to come out."

WALKED AFTER PRAYER.

Congregational Service Was Held For a Pennsylvania Invalid.

A remarkable experience took place in the life of Walter McClickie, 70 years old, of Youngwood, Pa., following a congregational prayer service recently held at his home.

For sixteen years McClickie has been confined to a wheel chair because of an injury to his head when he fell down a mine shaft near Uniontown. Following the injury a silver plate was inserted in his skull and he suffered from dizziness. During the last sixteen years he was unable to stand.

Recently he requested that the prayer services be held at his home, and the other night the members of his church held the weekly service there. During the services he got out of his wheel chair and sang a hymn. After the service he found he was able to walk about the house. The next morning he went to the coal shed and carried in a bucket of coal for his daughter, Mrs. Ralph Rose, without experiencing any dizziness.

The orchard that is not pruned and sprayed this year will suffer from the neglect for two or three years.

Some shade trees should be planted around every farm home; also a lot of vines, roses and other flowers.

When you plant any seeds keep a record of variety, cost, etc., so that you will know where you are at.

Football Players' Final Effort Is For the Benefit of Charity

150,000 Attend Games in England—Chelsea's Double Event—Local Games and Tables—Two Players Ordered Off—A Referee's Mistake

So many enquiries have been made with regard to which club won the championship of the London Combination, supplementary competition, as to lead one to believe that there must be a great deal of controversy in the matter. The appended table shows each club having played 14 games, one more than they could do under ordinary circumstances of a single barrelled schedule. The reason for this is that the clubs took the opportunity of repeating one game each during the Easter holidays. Whether the results of these games were to be calculated as affecting league points is not known, but whether or not, it has no effect on the championship which goes to Chelsea, who have thus brought off the double event by winning both the ordinary and the supplementary competitions, an honour which the pensioners on the season's play thoroughly deserve. Tottenham made a good second and had the "Spurs" not fallen so badly to Crystal Palace on 22nd April they would have been level with Chelsea, although the latter would have got the honours on goal average.

For Charity's Sake.

Many of the clubs in England finished with their league schedules and with the special sanction of the Football Association utilized Saturday for games the proceeds of which go to charitable or patriotic purposes. A powerful team picked from the clubs of the London combination played the Arsenal at Highbury for the benefit of the widows and children of Repton, the famous Arsenal and English international player, who dropped dead in the centre of the league match with Reading on Feb. 10. A large crowd turned out to see an exciting game end in a tie, 2—2. Ten charity games were also decided, the net proceeds being given over to the war relief funds. Newcastle United and Sunderland was a tremendous attraction, 25,000 people passing through the turnstiles. Big crowds patronised all the other games, which will result in the funds benefiting to a considerable extent.

Huge Newcastle Crowd.

Most of the games being of the local Derby nature had much to do with the success. Considering the fact that Newcastle and Sunderland clubs had not played any football during the season, it is a remarkable fact that the crowd at St. James' Park was 25,000, a big tribute to the enthusiasm in that district. It is reckoned that 150,000 people, munition workers, soldiers ready for the front, and soldiers back from the front, viewed the tussles on behalf of charity on Saturday. Who said stop football? The results of the games were as follows:

Sheffield U 3, Sheffield Wed. 0.
Chelsea 2, Fulham 0.
Birringham 6, Leicester Fosse 3.
Notts County 2, Notts Forest 1.
Everton 3, Liverpool 1.
Newcastle United 1, Sunderland 1.
Manchester C. 2, Manchester U. 2.
Blackburn Rovers 9, Burnley 3.
Clapton Orient 8, Tottenham H. 2.
Chesterfield 3, Rotherdam 1.

Arena At The New Borden Camp To Seat 20,000 People

An arena to seat 20,000 people is some arena.

An arena to seat 20,000 people and built for about $3,000 is something unique.

That is the proposition Capt. Tom Flanagan, director of athletic sports in Military Division No. 2, is up against—and he will make good. He is going to build this arean at the new Borden camp at Pine Plains, Angus, Ont., where 25,000 soldiers are to encamp this summer, and will hold twenty-round fights there.

The plan of the arena is a simple one. In the centre Capt. Flanagan will erect a ring raised about a foot higher than is usual. Around this ring he will build a series of boxes for the officers, and behind these will be constructed long rows of seats for the rank and file. These seats will be two feet high and all on the same level, but every one will be able to see from any part of the arena because the ring is elevated.

The cheap construction is made possible by the fact that the lumber will be loaned to the camp by some lumber firm and will be returned to them at the end of the camp undamaged. The entire arena outside of the ring will be constructed without sawing or nailing the supports and planks. The structure will be fastened together with rope, so that practically all the cost will be for the transportation of the lumber and the rope. The arena will be enclosed by a nine foot canvas wall.

If present plans go through a battle for the lightweight championship of the world between Freddie Welsh and the next challenger will be pulled off there this summer. A dollar a head would produce a purse large enough for the contestants, and in addition, Champion Welsh is a strong friend of Capt. Flanagan and he is very anxious to do anything he can for the soldier lads. The fight pictures will also be shown there.

The new camp ground will provide plenty of accommodation for all varieties of sport. There is plenty of level ground for baseball, football, lacrosse, and kindred team sports while the swimmers and divers will find the Mad and Pine Rivers almost ideal for their operations.

LAWN BOWLING

The green Committee under the energetic management of the chairman, Mr. Read, is busily at work planning for the coming season. The lawn is being grapidly put into first class shape.

It is expected that the green will be ready to be played on about the end of next week.

The members are reminded that the fees are due on June first and that they may be paid to Mr. Mayneord or they may be left at Mr. Fitzgerald's office, just across from the green, or to any member of the executive or Green committee. They carry blank receipts and will give you your season's ticket.

It would be advisable for all the new members to enter their names early, so that suitable provision can be made to receive them.

BIRMINGHAM LIKES TROUT

The Toronto News says: The explanation of Manager Birmingham in connection with the release of Infielder Martin, who by the way, has been grabbed up by Newark, will hardly appeal to the fans generally. The Leafs' leader says that he let Martin go because in his opinion Trout is a better player. If that is the case, then the hustling ex-Canadian Leaguer has improved wonderfully over his last year's form. He didn't star to any extent under Clymer, and though he is a fine utility performer, as a third baseman it is the general opinion that he is a good catcher.

Tennis Association Opening On Saturday

What promises to be the best season for many years in the P.L.T.A., will open on their grounds at the Bowling Green on Saturday next. The courts, which are the finest in the city, are very central and have been put in excellent condition for fast play. In planning for the spring tournament, the executive of the Association is anxious to get in touch with all prospective players as early as possible. The fees this season have been placed just so as to cover the running expenses and thus to debar no lover of good tennis. Get out your racquet and keep yourself young by joining the club. Phone Mr. Walton the secretary, or Mr. Roper of the Y.M.C.A. for full particulars.

SENIOR LEAGUE BASEBALL GAME

A senior league game of baseball was played yesterday afternoon on the King Edward school grounds between the Central school and the King Edward teams. The King Edward boys won the game by the score of 12 to 6. The batteries were: For King Edward, Cunningham and Hunt; for Centrals, Cook, Carruthers and Munro.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In The "Examiner" of Saturday, May 6th, appeared a notice of an address that I am to give in Victoria Hall on Friday, May 12th, at 8 p.m.

The notice unfortuntely uses the words "after five years' 'trial'." The word "trial" should be "travel." It might be as well to run over the facts connected with the subject for the information of your readers.

In 1910 a special committee was appointed by parliament to visit all the leading countries of the world, and to report upon Technical Education as the Committee found it the world over. The report was brought in a few months ago, and as it is a report gathered by experts and at an enormous expense, and is of the utmost possible importance to the industrial life of Canada, members of Parliament decided to do all they could to bring it to the notice of those directly interested.

The United States, Great Britain and even Germany are preparing for the after-the-war revival of industry and for the struggle for the world's markets. Necessity has brought about a great change in industrial methods, and it would be a crime for Canada to look idly on when all other nations are making preparations.

The report shows just how industry is in all other countries and ought to prove invaluable to those engaged in manufacture especially. The Government knows of no better way of directing attention to the matter than by the method we are adopting.

J. H. BURNHAM.

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I cannot refrain from protesting publicly and most emphatically about the two letters that have appeared recently in regard to the poisoning of dogs. Admitting that dogs do injure and sometimes ruin newly-planted flower beds; to poison, or to put poison in a readily accessible place is to my way of thinking, a most dastardly and cowardly trick: and any one capable of such an act is beneath contempt. Not only that, but it is also an illegal act, and I should like The Examiner to kindly publish the law on the matter. The proper thing for any one to do who is constantly annoyed by certain dogs, is to take the matter up with the dog's owner, and give him a fair chance to rectify matters, or to keep his dog off the streets. Or, if the dog in question be an unlicensed one, it is that man's duty as a good citizen to see that the dog catcher is notified and that the dog is taken in charge.

By all means, clear the streets of all unowned and unlicensed dogs; but on the other hand, do give those dogs whose owners value them enough to pay for them, a fair chance to live. Raise the dog tax if you will. I, for one, would gladly pay five times as much if, by so doing, I could be assured that no cowardly poisoner were lying in wait for my dog.

And I cannot conclude this note of protest without a word of pity for those who do not know what it means to have the affection and undying loyalty of that faithful animal, the dog.

Verdun Likened To Antwerp Position Has Some Value

Hilaire Belloc now gives an importance to the military value of the Verdun position, which he in common with nearly every other military writer had hitherto denied it. He says the defence is not a capital object, and does not seriously affect the campaign as a whole, but that it must be admitted it has military importance.

He compares Verdun to Antwerp, and writes in Land and Water, April 20: "For the Germans to enter Antwerp in autumn, 1914, was economically of great importance to them. It gave them building yards, a great town for the troops, huge stocks of material, etc. Strategically it was of great importance to them, because it cleared their flanks of all menace, and if they had not blundered in neglecting to cross the Scheldt it would have given them a mass of armed men as well. Even as it was it gave them the elimination of very many thousands of their opponents at insignificant expense to themselves and a very great quantity of military stores and guns.

"The defence of Antwerp, had it been possible (and it would have been possible if the allies had cared to violate the neutrality of Holland and had at the same time been prepared with a large force to throw into the scale) would have been of the utmost value.

"Politically the entry of German troops into Antwerp was also of very high value. It decided the occupation of Belgium. It gave them what was incomparably the most important centre of civilian life within the area of their operations. It profoundly affected opinion at home and abroad.

Verdun's Value.

Economically Verdun, he says, is worthless. Politically it is a place with an old reputation of being a fortress and a place upon which the eyes of the world have become fixed, whose occupation would have an immense effect on German opinion and and even some effect upon instructed beligerent opinion.

But it is in the strategic situation its value lies.

"The sight salient of Verdun comes at an important point in the general lines. It threatens directly one of the main German communications, that through Metz, and it threatens almost equally that through Luxemburg. It lies upon the flank of that great German salient, the apex of which stands near Noyon. A French advance from this point in the future would jeopardise the German line if it could be made before that line was retired. The lines before Verdun, the "corner" which the trenches here turn, is an offence to the enemy's plan. If it were wholly eliminated, if the French line had for the future to be drawn from the Argonne right down to opposite St. Mihiel, the Germans would be in a better posture. The mere occupation of the town of Verdun would effect nothing like so much as that, but it would lose to the French something of the advantage hitherto given them by a bridgehead beyond the central Meuse. It would give the Germans the whole line of that river. To that extent there is a purely military object in the defence of the mere town."

Belloc then discusses the tactics of the French in the defence. He points out that through all these past ten weeks they have been content to hold a pure defensive. Upon very rare occasions they have launched a local counter-offensive, necessary for the temporarily redeeming of one small point which the local command found necessary for the plans of the moment, but they have never, with all their advantage in numbers, attempted a permanent regaining of ground.

"In the main the whole thing has been since February 26 a series of deliberate and cautious retirements, coupled with an equally deliberate and lengthy stand upon chosen sections of line. They gave up all the advanced positions in the Woevre without reinforcing them and before suffering serious pressure. They held Malancourt with one battalion against pretty well any odds, sacrificed the greater part of that battalion, did not reinforce it, ordered its remnant to fall back. Earlier they dealt in precisely the same way, with the advanced post of Forges. They held the eastern end of the Goose Crest with a comparatively small force and allow it to receive the ultimately successful assault of a whole division. Only when an enemy advance threatens the continuity of the forward lines which for the moment they oppose to that advance do they spend men in the temporary recovery of the area involved. And whenever they design such a recovery they invariably effect it. But take the thing in the mass, it is everywhere a strict defensive very slowly retiring before for long periods immobile before, a succession of violent and repeated movements. And all this is done with forces superior in number, easily equal in machinery and munitionment to the attack.

"That last is the capital point of the whole business.

"This strange and highly disciplined anchoring of the allies to a pure defensive, this refusal to create a diversion, though there has been ample time for that; this absolutely consistent 'blocking' for now eight weeks without so much as a sign of 'lashing out' can surely have only one meaning. It is designed to exhaust. I have seen no other tenable hypothesis put forward. There may be one, but it is certainly not apparent."

New York Stock Market

Summary of To-day's Activities on the New York Stock Exchange

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Stock Market opened with Mexican issues reflecting the border news by slight declines, otherwise the market was practically unchanged. Trading was restricted and narrow. War brides were fractionally off.

Uncertainty concerning the situation at the Mexican border depressed trading during the morning. Munition shares all declined, and Mexican stocks were weak. The whole list was irregular.

At one time Crucible Steel and Baldwin Loco. were each one and three-quarters points under yesterday's close.

POLICE DECIDE FASHION.

Costumes of Women in Germany Are Now Censored.

The Munich commandant has issued an order giving power to the police to effect the arrest of ladies who are very fashionably dressed, says an Amsterdam despatch. Conspicuous dress, it was stated, meant waste, which was not permissible in war time.

The first arrest occurred within two hours of the issue of the order, the lady arrested belonging to one of the best military families in Bavaria. She was taken to the police headquarters, but was released after a few hours' detention, after being warned to dress in a more simple fashion.

The Munich papers are unanimous in their protest against the order, under which the police are made the judge of ladies' fashions and of propriety in dress.

SEEKS REMEDY FROM SEA.

Physician Dips 30 Fathoms For Pure Salt Water.

To save the life of a patient in St. Winifred's Hospital San Francisco, Cal., Dr Winslow Anderson, accompanied by fourteen doctors and nurses, went out to sea in a Crowley launch for thirty-six gallons of the purest of pure sea water.

The ailment from which the patient is suffering will give way only to a treatment in which pure salt water from the sea forms the chief element.

The party carried twelve three gallon jugs with heavy lead sinkers, by means of which the water was lifted from a depth of thirty fathoms. The launch went nearly to the Farallone Islands, and the party did not return until late at night.

Mormon Leader Opens His Golden Wedding Season

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 9.—The golden wedding season of Joseph F. Smith, successor of Brigham Young as president of the Mormon Church, began Saturday, when he and his first wife and all Mormondom celebrated their marriage in 1866.

This is his first golden wedding anniversary, but two years from now he and his second wife will celebrate golden weddings No. 2 and then will follow in rather quick succession golden weddings Nos. 3 and 4. At the rate golden presents were recived to-day it is reasonable to assume that the head of all Mormons will be a tolerably wealthy man by the time his golden wedding season ends, aside from the vast wealth he already has accumulated in his present office.

It seems that about fifty years ago Mr. Smith, who is known to every one here as "President" Smith, and whose home, the "Bee Hive," is called the "Mormon White House," contracted or became infected with the marriage habit, and before he was cured he found himself with at least four wives. He has been finding himself with them ever since, and as a result there are forty-three children and so many grandchildren and great-grand-children that they merely are referred to by the score.

Celebrating the first golden wedding anniversary with Mr. Smith in the 'Bee Hive' were Wife No. 1 and their eleven children and thirty-seven grandchildren by one wife it is from four wives. Wives No. 2, 3 and 4 were not at the feast, but it is understood they sent to Mr. Smith their best regards and asked him to smuggle home a piece of cake in a napkin. He would have broken his back if he had tried to smuggle out a piece of cake for every one of the population he has added to the State.

Mr. Smith and Wife No. 1 also held a reception at the 'Bee Hive,' attended by about 250 prominent persons, including the high officials of the Mormon Church and the managers of the various business enterprises controlled by the Church.

BANDIT SOOTHED BABY.

A half-dollar of an early date with a large hole drilled through it is one of the most cherished mementos once owned by Cole Younger. It is the property now of Charles Younger of Kansas City, a cousin and the only surviving male relative of Younger. Younger is an electrician now.

Thirty-nine years ago Cole Younger rode up to a farm owned by Chas. Younger's brother near Lowrie, Mo. Charles then was a baby. He was fretting peevishly from cutting teeth. The dust-covered horseman swung out of the saddle, picked up the crying baby and fondly swung him to his arms.

"By golly," Cole Younger said when he could not quiet the baby, "he's cutting teeth."

The Cole Younger took out a heavy knife and slowly bored a hole through a half dollar.

When he had finished he beat the heavy blade through a piece of whang leather on the saddle and strung it through the hole in the coin. It was looped around the baby's neck and soon the youngster gnawed on the coin and became quiet. The coin remained about the baby's neck until it had got all his teeth. His parents gave it to him when he grew up

THE END OF THE STORY.

Wife's Married Life One Long Courtship; Husband Tells Why.

Must one be disillusioned after marriage? Surely not. As a girl of 16 I had for three years almost devoted sweetheart, married him at 19, and here at 36 am the happiest woman I know, with two handy big sons to love me, too. Through it all I have my love husband more devoted than ever as the years roll by.

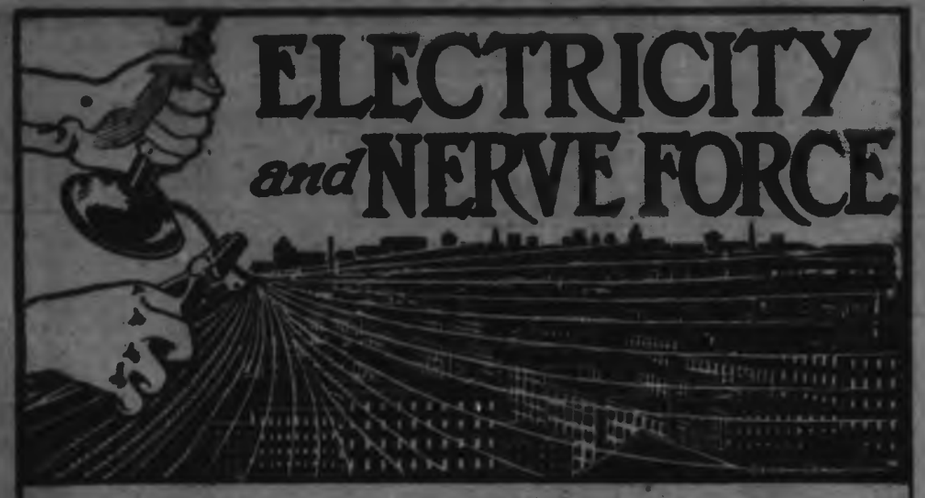
In all these years there have been just two Saturdays my candy was not brought me, and good reasons those two times. Every birthday, betrothal, and wedding aniversary remembered, and also our boys' birthdays. I receive more than they with the love that will last through the ages.

I am the luckiest woman I know, but my husband reading over my shoulder says: Just add to that story that I never say you anything but neat and dainty — that you never came to the table in a kimono, that I never saw your hair in curlers, but always combed properly; and, too, that as well as a glorious wife you are a dandy "pal."

So there you are, and we will not be disillusioned, for it isn't necessary. —A. T. in Chicago Tribune.

"Beg pardon, mister, but have you an isolation hospital in this town?" asked the newly arrived stranger. "No, not just that sir, but we've got a Carnegie library and if you want to be quite all alone with yourself for an hour or two, why just go up there"

ELECTRICITY and NERVE FORCE



Nerve Force is so much like Electricity, and the latter is so much better understood, that we have used this vivid telephone picture to illustrate what takes place in the human system when the connecting nerve fibres are deranged or something goes wrong at Central.

In the nervous system the brain is the Central where the Nerve Force is created, and whence are issued the orders which control the whole human body. Here is consumed one-fifth of the blood in the human body, and when the blood supply is deficient in quality or quantity, the brain and the nervous system are first to feel the effects.

Neuralgic pains and headaches, inability to rest or sleep or concentrate the mind, dizziness and noises in the ears, are some of the symptoms of a starved nervous system.

Just as machinery lags when the current of electricity fails, so the bodily organs weaken when the supply of nerve force runs low. Digestion is impaired and you lose appetite, the liver, kidneys and bowels are slow in performing their functions, the heart's action weakens, circulation is slow, hands and feet are cold, you are easily tired, lose ambition and grow downhearted and discouraged.

This describes the condition under which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can prove of greatest assistance to you. Forming new, rich blood it feeds the starved, exhausted nerve and brain cells back to health and vigor. The new vital, nerve force flows out through the intricate system of nerve fibres to every member and every organ of the body, carrying new vigor, energy and strength and driving out pain, weakness and disease.

ASSERT RUSSIANS IN FRANCE WENT THROUGH PERSIA

Marched to Persian Gulf to Embark Aboard Transports, Travellers Declare.

NEW YORK, May 9.—That the Russian troops which have been arriving in France had embarked in the Persian Gulf after marching across Persia was the statement made my several passengers aboard the steamship Bergensfjord, of the Norwegian-American line, which arrived here yesterday. According to these passengers, who had been in Petrograd at the time the troops left Russian territory, the expedition had been under way for months. To carry it out large numbers of camels, automobile trucks and other means of transportation had been assembled in Persia to take the troops seven hundred miles to the gulf.

Captain Irgens, commander of the Bergensfjord, said he had slipped by the British in the neighbourhood of Kirkwall.

"Thanks to some fine fogs," said the Captain, "we got by the British without being detected. And the result is that we have made the voyage in eight days and a half instead of, perhaps, two weeks or so, and, besides, we have brought 1,581 bags of mail, intact and unsearched, including letters from, Austria, Germany, Hungary, Turkey, Bulgaria, Russia, Norway and Roumania."

SEEKS TOMB IN ARCTIC.

Last Resting Place of Sir John Franklin Objective of Expedition.

San Francisco, Cal., May 9.— Mrs. Peter McK. Bayne, a bride of less than a month, will accompany her husband, Captain Peter Bayne, on a cruise in the Arctic, their goal being the tomb of Sir John Franklin, who died there in 1847 after six years spent in exploration as the head of a party of scientists. Hope of recovering scientific records and data believed to be hidden in the resting place of Sir John instigated the expedition. Bayne was with the Hall expedition which sought the Franklin tomb in 1869 and led a second party to the region in that attempt.

RECRUITS FOR NAVY AND FOR THE NAVAL AIR SERVICE WANTED

TORONTO, May 10.—Rear-Admiral Chas. E. Kingsmill, commander of Marine Service of Canada, and Commander F. P. Armstrong, R.N.V.R., arrived in Toronto yesterday morning, both on missions of enlistment for the navy. Admiral Kingsmill is on his usual monthly visit for enlisting men for the Royal Navy Aerial Service, and Commander Armstrong is paying his first visit to Toronto and Canada in the interests of the Royal Naval Auxiliary Patrol, Motor Boat Service. The Royal Naval Auxiliary Patrol is a recently organized branch of the naval service, and Commander Armstrong is anxious to secure one hundred sub-lieutenants and mechanics from Toronto alone. This manner of enlistment is being carried on throughout Canada, and it is the intention of Commander Armstrong and members of his committee to visit the largest cities in each Province in order to secure men for this service.

The British Admiralty calls for two classes of recruits: (1) Commissioned officers for command and second in command of the patrol motorboats; (2) mechanics to run the engines. The essential qualifications required of candidates for a commission are first rate experience in the handling of small craft under sail or power at sea or on the Great Lakes and a good knowledge of practical seamanship. Some knowledge of elementary navigation is desirable. Officers have no engineering duties to perform. The selected candidates will be provisionally entered in Canada and sent at once to England, where their entry being confirmed they will commence their training forthwith.

Officers are granted commissions as temporary sub-lieutenants, Royal Naval Volunteer Service, and receive the ordinary pay of an officer of that rank in the Royal Navy, $1.88 a day, and other various allowances. Separation allowance is not paid by the British Admiralty to the wives and dependants of the commissioned officers. Chief motor boatmen receive $1.57 per day. Officers and men are entered for the period of hostilities, and are given free transportation to England and back to their homes on receiving their discharge.

Mr. Aemilius Jarvis has placed his offices at the disposal of Rear-Admiral Kingsmill and Commander Armstrong, and prospective recruits should make application for enlistment at 103 Bay Street, where they will be given the regulation application form which has to be properly filled out and accepted.

Commander Armstrong expects to remain in Toronto for two days, and then return to Ottawa, when he will again return to Toronto at the beginning of next week.

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHING ERUPTION

Trial Free by Mail

"My wife had, as she thought, chapped hands. Then it got on arms and then to her limbs till it got all over her body. The skin came out in big red bunches, and it was rough and cracked and bled. Her face and neck and arms were a sight. She could not have her clothes touch her body. She did not put her hands in water any more than she could help. The eruption itched so she could not sleep day or night.

"She suddenly thought of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. She washed the sore places with Cuticura Soap and then applied the Ointment. In two weeks she was completely healed." (Signed) R. W. Lovell, 13 Birch St., Galt, Ontario, December 16, 1915.

WOMAN SUFFERAGE.

Its War Time Aspect.

London, Eng. The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their savings to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given no little trouble to the government and it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of members in Parliament since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and no sufferage may even come after this horrible war is over.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of women's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day, because it is made without alcohol or narcotics. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and "all in" for no reason that she can think of. In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism that requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and bluish circles about the eyes, are only symptoms. Go to the source of trouble. When that is corrected the other symptoms disappear.

St. Thomas, Ont.—"I wish to say for the benefit of other women who suffer that I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a great help. I have personally recommended the same to many who in turn have been helped a great deal by its use."—Mrs. F. J. Bowman, 19 Oliver St., St. Thomas, Ont.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

"But, Jimmie, I couldn't do it. Grande Mignon is in too bad a hole. She needs every man who owns a schooner or a sloop or a dory to go out and catch fish and bring 'em home. The old island's got her back against the wall, and I felt that when all the trouble and danger were over for her I would go to St. Johns', and let those people try and prove their case.

"They can't prove anything! But that doesn't say that they won't get a judgment. I'm poor and unknown, and ignorant of law. The company is a big corporation, with lawyers and plenty of money. If somebody there is after me I haven't a chance and they will gouge me for all they can get. You, Jimmie and Pete, know this is so, and it was for all these reasons that I wouldn't stand my ground and let that feller serve me.

"Ma is dependent on me and when I have sold fifteen hundred quintals of fish she will have enough to carry her along until that trouble is over. So I'm going out after the fifteen hundred quintals. Now, that's my story. We've heard Jimmie's; but how did you manage everything so well Pete?"

Ellinwood was flattered and coughed violently over the last of his victuals.

"Hey!" yelled some hungry member of the second half. "If you fellers eat any more you'll sink the ship. Get up on deck, some o' there an' give ver betters a chance!" Ellinwood rolled a forbidding eye toward the companionway.

"Some clam-splitter on deck don't seem to know that in this here packet the youth an' beauty is allus considered first," he rumbled ominously. No reply being forthcoming, he turned to Code.

"When ol' Bige Tanner come to me shakin' like a leaf an' said they was a feller on the steamer that would attach yer schooner an' all that ye had, because of some business about the sinkin' of the ol' May, I says to myself, says I:

"'Pete,' I sez, 'we don't allow nothin' like that to spoil our cruise an' keep the skipper ashore. Now, Brignon, isn't very big, an' I knew that he would get you in a day or two if you didn't go back into the forest and hide. But I cal'lated you wouldn't want to do that, an' so I figgered the only way to beat that lawyer was to feel him before he got fair started on his search.

"I knowed you was in Castalia, an' so I thought your mother better get you some clothes an' bring 'em there. I found out that Nat Burns had taken the feller to Mi' Shannon's boarding house, an' knowin' that Jimmie was livin' there, I got an idee. Jimmie's told about that already. The feller bit and that was the end of him.

"But that wasn't the wust of it. I knew we had to get out the same evenin' if we was to get out at all, so what did I do but get Bill Rockwell here to hitch up his big double buckboard an' go out after the five men that weren't on the job.

"He had to drive clear at Great Harbor fer one, but he got back with all hands about seven o'clock. Everybody in town was at supper, and did not see us when we climb aboard the Lass. When it was pitch black we cast off the lines, an' she drifted out onw the ebb tide, hich just there runs easy a knot and a half. Then we got up our headsails so as to get steerageway on her, and bless my soul if the blocks made a creak! Might have been pulling silk thread through a fur mitten, for all the noise.

"I was afraid fer a minute that the flash of Swallowtail light would catch her topm'sts, but it didn't, and after an hour we were outside and layin' in nineteen fathoms off Big Duck. The tide here runs three knots, and with our headsails an' the light air o' wind we just managed to hold her even.

"Of course, you fellers know the rest. As soon as Jimmie landed his passenger on Long Island he came out an' straight south to where we was. I had told Jimmie to tell Code in the afternoon where to meet us; and so, when it was black enough, the skipper got into his motor dory and came out, too.

"When they climbed aboard we got up sail and laid a southwest course to round Nova Scotia; an' here we are, nearin' Cape Race already, and dummed proud of ourselves, if I do say it."

"Proud of you, Pete, you old fox," said Schofield, getting up from the table with a sigh of immense relief. "Come on; let the second half in."

"All right, skipper," said Pete, rising to his great height and wiping his mouth with the back of his huge hand. "But wait! I almost forgot this!"

He unpinned the pocket of his waistcoat and drew forth the flimsy sheet of paper that he had picked up when Templeton had mistakenly tried to serve him.

Briefly he told the skipper its history and handed it to him. Schofield's eyes opened wide as he saw that the paper was that of the Dominion Cable office in Freekirk Head, and he read:

"To A. Templeton,
"Marine Insurance Company,
"St. John's, N.B.

"Come at once with summons for Cody Albert Schofield and attachment for schooner Charming Lass, as per former arrangements.

"Burnett."

For a moment the signature puzzled him, and Ellinwood, grinning, stood watching his puzzled efrts to solve it

"Skipper, if it was a mule it would kick you in the face," he remarked. "If you can't see Nat Burns in that, I can. And now you've got an idea just who's at the bottom of this thing."

Code Schofield went aft to his cabin companionway and prepared to go below and open his log. Kent took the wheel, and Ellinwood lurched about with a critical eye upon the the lashings, sheets, and general appearance of the deck.

Schofield, remembering the schooner that had attracted his eye before, looked astern for her. She had gained rapidly upon them in the half hour he had been below. Now he could see her graceful black hull, the shadows in the great sails, and the tiny men here and there upon her deck.

"What a sailer!" he cried in involuntary admiration. "She must be an American!"

It was clear that the other schooner even in that moderate breese must be making the better side of twelve knots. Schofield gave her a final admiring glance and went below.

CHAPTER X.

A MYSTERY.

"August 29:

"Clear. Wind W.S.W., canting to W. Moderate breese. Knots logged to 12 noon, 153. Position, 20 miles south, a little east of Cape Sable. End of this day."

Code closed the dirty and thumb-worn, paper covered ledger that was the log of the Charming Lass and had been the log of the old May Schofield for ten years before she went down. He had been on deck taking his sextant observation and had just completed working out his position.

As he closed the old log his eye was caught by a crudely penned name near the bottom of the paper cover. The signature was Nellie Tanner's, and he remembered how a dozen years ago, while they were playing together in the cabin of the old May, she had pretended that she was the captain and owned the whole boat, so that Code would have to obey her orders.

As he looked he caught the almost obliterated marks of a pencil beneath Nellie's name, and looking closer, discovered "Nat Burns" in boyish letters.

For a moment he scrowled blackly at the audacious words, and then, laughing at his foolishness, threw the book from him. Then slowly the scowl returned, and he asked himself seriously why Nat hated him so.

That there had always been an instinctive dislike between them as boys, everybody in Freekirk Head knew, and several vicious fights to a finish had emphasized it.

But since coming to manhood's estate Code had left behind him much of the rancor and intolerance of his early youth, and had considered Nat Burns merely as a disagreeable person to be left heartily alone.

But Burns had evidently not arrived at this mature point of self-education. In fact, Burns was a good example of a youth brought up without those powers of self-control that are absolutely necessary to any who expects to take a reasonable position in society even as simple as that of Freekirk Head.

Code remembered that Nat and his father had always been inseparable companions, and that it was due to this father more than any one else that the boy had been spoiled and indulged in every way.

Michael Burns had risen to a position of considerable power in the humble life of the island. From a successful trawler he had become a successful fishpacker and shipper. Then he had felt a desire to spread his affluent wings, come in for politics, and been appointed the squire or justice of the peace.

In this position he was commissioned by the Marine Insurance Company of St. John's as its agent and inspector on Grande Mignon Island. In his less successful days he had been a boat builder in Gloucester and Bath, and knew much of ship construction.

For more than half a year now Code had been unable to think of Michael Burns or the old May Schofield without a shudder of horror. But now that Nat was suddenly hot on the trail of revenge, he knew he must look at matters squarely and prepare to meet any trap which might be laid for him.

It seemed evident that the first aim in Nat's mind was the hounding of the man who had been the cause of his father's death; for that death had occurred at a most opportune time for the Schofields.

The heavy insurance on the fifty-year-old May was about to run out, and it was almost a certainty that Burns would not recommend its renewal except at a vastly increased premium.

As a matter of fact, on a hurried trip that Code had taken, he had picked up Burns himself at St. John's, the inspector coming for the purpose of examining the schooner while under sail in a fairly heavy seaway.

All the island knew this, and all the island knew that Code was the only one to return alive. The inference was not hard to deduce, especially as the gale encountered had been one such as May had lived out a dozen times.

Had not all these things been enough to fire the impulsive, passionate Burns with a sullen hatred, the next events would have been. For Code received his insurance without a dispute and not long afterward while in Boston for the purpose, had picked up the almost new Charming Lass from a Gloucester skipper who had run into debt.

Code now saw to what Nat's unconstrolled brooding had brought him, and he realised that the battle would be one of wits.

(To be continued.)

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B.B.B. too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, cleanly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION!

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to such in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washings the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headache, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin out the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

The most rapidly promoted man in the British army is Lieut.-Col. W. F. Austin, of the 17th Reserve Battalion, of the Cheshire Regiment, who enlisted as a private in that regiment on August 30, 1914.

The output for 1915 for salt in the Hawaiian Islands, is 2,400 tons, valued at $5 a ton. The process of purification of the salt is by natural evaporation, no vacuum pans or other apparatus being used.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Saving Uncle Henry.

By Avard Bildstone.

Copyrighted, by Associated Literary Press.

Colton caught up the desk telephone that stood at his elbow and smiled as he recognized his wife's voice. One of the arguments in favor of the removal to the suburbs had been that the reduction in rent was vastly greater than Colton's commutation and Mrs. Colton's occasional trips to town. They had not counted on the telephone bill, which more than made up the difference.

"What's the matter now?" he asked good humoredly. "The cook left?"

"That's only part," came the answer. "The cook left, and the Nelsons have just had word that his sister is dead, and they can't come."

"That will help some," declared Colton encouragingly. "There won't be so many to cook for."

"But Eleanor will have to get the dinner," wailed Mrs. Colton. "That takes the three Nelsons and you and her away from the table. Don't you see that it leaves just thirteen?"

"Thirteen's lucky," cheered Colton. "You should be glad that Eleanor is there to get the dinner."

"But Uncle Henry is frightfully superstitious," reminded Mrs. Colton. "It's bad enough that you can't come and that my own sister must stay away to get the dinner, and we'll have to tell him that she is out of town, but when we ask him to sit at a table with twelve others—Bob, you must send out some one. Can't that nice looking bookkeeper come?"

"On his vacation—but I'll get some one. Don't worry, Vida."

Colton hung the receiver on the hook, and Mrs. Colton beamed as she turned from the instrument. Bob was dependable, and that worry was off her mind.

It was the first dinner party in the new home, and her uncle was to be the guest of honor. It had seemed hoodooed from the start. First Colton had been compelled to remain in town to attend an important conference of the trade and could not possibly get out.

Her sister, Eleanor Norris, had been called into service to replace the cook, who had left, declaring that she would see her employer and the guests separately and individually condemned before she would cook for eighteen persons, and then at the last moment the Nelsons had sent regrets, cutting the number at table down to the thirteen abhorrent to Uncle Henry, from whom the Coltons had "expectations."

Vida had noticed that her husband's bookkeeper was an extremely good looking young fellow, and she had telephoned Colton to send him out. Probably he would send out the bookkeeper's relief, and Vida gave no more thought to the matter save to offer up a fervent supplication that his table manners should be good.

The others had arrived when there was a ring at the bell, and in her anxiety Mrs. Colton herself rushed to the door. A tall, clean cut young man stood at the entrance, and at his inquiring "Mrs. Colton?" Vida fairly dragged him across the hall and into the dining room, where she carefully closed the door.

"I'm awfully sorry," she began. "Mr. Colton asked you to come out because we wanted to avoid thirteen at the table. But it happens that a Mr. Grimsby could not come either, and so now you would make the thirteenth."

"I see," he said, with a light laugh "Then I'll head back for town."

"I couldn't let you do that," cried Vida, with a gasp. "There is no train until 9:57. You will not get to town until almost 11. You must stay here and have some dinner. I'm sure you won't mind eating in the laundry."

"I'd rather like it," was the genial response. "If you will indicate the general direction I'll head that way and let you get back to your guests."

Vida pointed to the door to the butler's pantry. "Go through there and tell them who you are," she directed; then she hurried back to the waiting diners. Her uncle was standing by the door.

"Was that another guest?" he demanded uneasily.

"Just a helper that Bob sent out from town," she explained glibly, and Uncle Henry breathed a sigh of relief

"I'm rather glad that Bob was detained in town," he said. "It will prevent there being thirteen at the table. I'm not superstitious, but I know of two cases where there were thirteen at the table, and each time one died before the year was out. I'm getting to be an old man, Vida, and, while I'm not superstitious about it—well, it's just as well not to tempt fate."

Vida smiled her understanding of the case, and as Norah appeared in the doorway to announce that dinner was served they all filed out.

Vida sustained a shock of surprise when she saw the man her husband had sent out standing ready to serve, but his face was as impassive as though he had been a butler and not a bookkeeper all his life, and it was with a little flutter of pride that Vida realized that the local guests would suppose that they had imported a butler from town for the occasion.

The dinner passed off splendidly. The butler acquitted himself with the greatest credit, and Eleanor did her cooking school training full justice.

Before the coffee was served Uncle Henry was whispering to his niece that he was going to make her a present of the house for Christmas and attend himself to some details of decoration.

Vida had hoped to lead him to the subject of new rugs, and this voluntary promise delighted her. As she led the way back to the parlor she fairly radiated delight.

It was some time before she could manage to slip away from her uncle, and she was just about to go to the kitchen to see how Eleanor was getting along when Norah, the maid, poked her head cautiously between the curtains and made a signal that she wanted to see her mistress.

"I think you'd better come out in the kitchen, ma'am," she whispered. "That strange man and Miss Eleanor do be carrying on something awful. He kissed her when he thought my back was turned, but I saw them in the silver tray. They've been at it ever since he came."

"He is annoying Miss Eleanor?" asked Vida correctingly. It was out of the question that Eleanor should enjoy his attentions.

"Divil a bit she's annoyed," insisted Norah. "She likes it."

With dignified tread Mrs. Colton moved toward the kitchen and threw open the door. Her sister was wiping a huge platter, and the bookkeeper had taken advantage of her plight to steal another kiss. As Vida appeared in the doorway the platter went crashing to the floor.

"I'll buy you a whole set, Vida," cried Eleanor penitently.

"The loss of the china is immaterial," was the austere reply. "What does this—or—flirtation mean?"

The man advanced toward her, with glowing face.

"It means that I've found my little girl again, Mrs. Colton, and this time I've captured her before she could run away, as she did from Newport."

"It's Dick Hempstead," enlightened Eleanor. "Bob sent him out instead of the new bookkeeper, and I just had to say 'Yes' to atone for the cavalier fashion in which you hustled him into the kitchen."

"But he didn't tell me"— began Vida.

"You didn't give me a chance, or perhaps I gave you none. Bob told me that Eleanor was to be the cook, and I was only too glad to come. I have not seen Bob since he was married, and I did not know that he had married Eleanor's sister, or you would have seen me out here before."

"And you want to get married!" exclaimed Mrs. Colton. "What will Uncle Henry say?"

"He'll say 'Yes,'" declared Hempstead, "or at any rate he should. Didn't I save him from the thirteen hoodoo?"

"I suppose that will help some," admitted Vida. "Anyway, I'm glad you two are to be married, for with Eleanor to cook and you to be butler I shan't be afraid of any more dinner parties, only when there are but thirteen at the table."

"To save the day as well as Uncle Henry," completed Hempstead.

Amending a Picture.

An eminent French art collector once bought at the Hotel Drouot a landscape by a noted "impressionist," which he showed, with much pride in his purchase, to an artist friend.

"But I think," quoth he, "that the picture lacks animation; it wants personages. Now, if you would paint for me a man or woman on that road that runs through the middle of the landscape it would greatly improve the picture."

"That is easily done," said the artist. So he carried off the painting and sent it back in a week or two with the figure of an old peasant woman going to market, with her basket and her red umbrella, introduced on the road in question, to the great satisfaction of the picture's proprietor. Meeting shortly after with the "impressionist" who had painted it, the artist remarked:

"I had the audacity to alter a landscape of yours belonging to M. X., the other day. I painted an old peasant woman walking down the road."

"Down the road? I remember no work of mine with a road in it. I should like to see the picture and judge of the effect of your alteration."

So the artist carried him off to M. X.'s, and they speedily stood before the landscape. The "impressionist" turned perfectly green with wrath and horror.

"Miserable man," he shouted, "what have you done? That is not a road that runs through the centre of my work. It is a river!"—Exchange.

COULD NOT BEND DOWN

COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT

BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubiniecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills I owned to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

ALLIED DRIVE, NEAR, MARCONI PREDICTS

Inventor Expects a Terrific Attack on the Western Front, But Won't Forecast the Outcome

But He Says Our Creative Power Would Be of Great Aid If We Did Fight.

LONDON, May 9.—William Marconi, in a talk with a correspondent, on his return from a six weeks' trip on the Continent, during which he had an opportunity to get into touch with the feeling of not only Italy but the other Allies, said that he found the idea prevalent everywhere that the Allies are soon to engage in the most gigantic struggle of the war.

"Since the failure of the German attack on Verdun," he said, "the feeling is that now is the psychological time for the Allies to strike. It must come soon, and we are likely to be in the thick of it before the summer is over. At least, that is the feeling among those with whom I talked.

"What will be the outcome of the push by the Allies is hard to determine. It must be considered somewhat in the light of what the Germans were able to accomplish in their attempt to take Verdun. The Germans hurled against Verdun the mightiest force at their command, with fearful losses. When the Allies begin their effort to drive the Germans from the Western front it must be taken as a certainty that the Allies are bound to suffer heavy losses of men, and that a tremendous supply of ammunition will be necessary to accomplish any gain whatever.

"There is no doubt that the Allies have the munitions, and that the men at their disposal are equal to a gigantic undertaking, but whether they will be able to dislodge the Germans to any appreciable extent is impossible to foretell. A spirit of supreme confidence exists in the Allied ranks, and the men are eager for the strike to come.

"If they are unable to overwhelm the Germans, however, then the whole Western front problem resolves itself into a matter of wearing the Germans down by exhaustion. How long it would take to do that no one can say. The war might go on for four or five years if there was no alternative but a struggle for attrition.

"The Germans seem to have plenty of spirit left, and as to ammunition there seems to be no lack, although the Germans alone really know how they are fixed as to a supply adequate to enable them to resist a persistent drive.

"As to Germany being violently depressed by its army's failure to accomplish their aim at Verdun I failed to hear anything that would make me believe it. It is difficult to analyze from the outside what is the attitude of the German people, but I am inclined to think they are as determined as ever to carry on the fight.

"The war lords, apparently, have not yet lost their grip on their German subjects. One hears o uprisings by the Germans, but so far as I am able to ascertain they are only sporadic outbursts, confined to isolated communities, and directed against some local authority rather than against the Government. In none of the outbreaks, so far as I know, has there been an apparent revolt against the German Governments' control of the war. All this has to be considered in forecasting how long it would take to wear Germany down by war exhaustion.

"While I heard much tal of the likelihood of America getting into the war against Germany, the general opinion seemed to be in Italy, as well as in the other countries, that America would be able to do much more for the Allies by staying out. There is no disposition anywhere on the part of the people of Italy and the other nations to say that America ought to fight, but on the contrary the feeling is that it is up to the American people alone to decide their own policy without outside hints.

"If America does come in, it will mean that Germany will embark upon the most ruthless undersea campaign yet attempted. She would undoubtedly sink every character of ship on sight.

"How far she would get with it is another matter. America could have ships running between England and America convoyed by her war craft and it is quite likely we would hear of some stirring engagements at sea.

"It is quite natural to expect that America would not be able at the start of a war with Germany to supply munitions to the Allies as she has been doing the past year of the war but that difficulty would soon be overcome by working the American shops day and night and turning all manner of factories into munition works.

"America is a wonderfululy creative nation and to my mind she would find a way to be of tremendous aid to the Allies. She knows how to raise and train an army with incredible rapidity and it would not be many months before she would be sending trained soldiers by the boat load to fight with the Allies.

"Italy is doing her part in the war by keeping the Austrians hard at work on the border. Fighting in the Alps is extremely difficult, however, and progress is slow. The Italian army leaders have often found among the prisoners many Germans fighting in the Austrian ranks.

"Russia appears to have caught her breath and without doubt will give Germany a terrific tussle along the Galician front when the Allies' push begins in the West. In fact, Russia is going to make trouble for Germany wherever the opposing armies face each other and the Russian activities is going to be a great factor in the warfare of the next few months."

Mr. Marconi spoke of the wireless equipment in the Allies armies as improving steadily, so that the different armies were able to keep in the closest touch. He said that wireless telephony on the battlefield had passed beyond the experimental stage.

"URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"DRY" TOWN AFFECTS HOTELS' WATER BILLS

SEATTLE, Wash., May 9.—Consumption of water in Seattle hotels has increased to such an extent since the prohibition law went into effect on January 1, that the hotelkeepers desire a reduction of their water rates. A petition signed by nineteen of the leading hotels has been filed with the City Council asking for a 30 per cent. reduction.

The petition sets forth that since the saloons were closed the general public has availed itself of the hotel washrooms to such an extent that the hotels' water bills have increased sufficiently to warrant the reduction asked.

Health for Sick Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Been Woman's Most Reliable Medicine —Here is More Proof.

To women who are suffering from some form of woman's special ills, and have a constant fear of breaking down, the three following letters ought to bring hope:—

North Crandon, Wis.—"When I was 16 years old I got married and at 18 years I gave birth to twins and it left me with very poor health. I could not walk across the floor without having to sit down to rest and it was hard for me to keep about and do my work. I went to a doctor and he told me I had a displacement and ulcers, and would have to have an operation. This frightened me so much that I did not know what to do. Having heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would give it a trial and it made me as well as ever. I cannot say enough in favor of the Pinkham remedies."—Mrs. Mayme Asbach, North Crandon, Wis.

Testimony from Oklahoma.

Lawton, Okla.—"When I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I seemed to be good for nothing. I tired easily and had headaches much of the time and was irregular. I took it again before my little child was born and it did me a wonderful amount of good at that time. I never fail to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to ailing women because it has done so much for me."—Mrs. A. L. McCasland, 509 Have St., Lawton, Okla.

From a Grateful Massachusetts Woman.

Roxbury, Mass.—"I was suffering from inflammation and was examined by a physician who found that my trouble was caused by a displacement. My symptoms were bearing down pains, backache, and sluggish liver. I tried several kinds of medicine; then I was asked to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has cured me and I am pleased to be in my usual good health by using it and highly recommend it."—Mrs. B. M. Cusson, 1 Haynes Park, Roxbury, Mass.

Beating About the Bush.

Mr. Tennant's recent remark in the House of Commons to the effect that his "honorable friend," who had put a question to him respecting the "emptiness" of certain barracks, "was confusing 'emptiness' with the temporary existence of vacant accommodation," may fairly take its place as a nice example of official periphrasis. It is not quite so perfect, perhaps, as Mr. Winston Churchill's immortal "terminological inexactitude," but, none the less, quite good in its way. We recall in this connection another effort in the same line once humorously ascribed to an eminent postal official, now departed, who was famous for his love of grandiloquent language. In place of the words "grease-proof paper," he proposed, it was alleged, to substitute "paper impermeable by oleaginous matter"!

The "Sub's" Adventure.

Here is the experience of a young "sub," who was unwise enough to ask an Anzac why he didn't salute.

"Who are you?" inquired the Australian, coolly.

"I'm an officer," said the angry sub. "Your superior officer, me man."

The Anzac looked at him pityingly. "Say, sonny," he remarked at length, "you go home and tell your mother that you've spoken to a real, live soldier."

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE NOW HELD BY 1,500,000

Biggest Volunteer Army Ever Organized Defends Line From the North Sea to Soissons—Belgians Hold Yser River District—Criticism Forgotten—French People Once Thought the British Were Not Doing Their Share—Canadians Hold Important Positions.

The following article was written by Arno Dosch-Fleurot, staff correspondent of the New York World, since his recent return from France, where he had exceptional opportunities to see the military situation he here describes:

England now has 1,500,000 men in France, the biggest volunteer army ever organized, and the biggest expeditionary force any country ever sent across water. It is holding the whole line from the North Sea to Soissons, with the exception of the inundated district along the Yser River, which the Belgians are still holding. The British line is now 150 miles long. This takes the British around the "elbow," where the German line is nearest Paris. They are thus about thirty-five miles from Rheims.

For the first time since the war began the British troops are holding all the northern part of France, and they are no longer supported by French troops. They are left entirely on their own responsibility, and every general staff in Europe is watching to see how they meet the German attacks.

The line they hold begins in the sand dunes of the North Sea, is interrupted by the Belgians for a section of about eighteen miles, commences again on the Yser Canal, extends along all the difficult territory of the River Lys, includes Arras and the long stretch between the Somme and the Oise, turns at Albert and runs well up the River Aisne to Soissons.

Loathe to Make Change.

There were big stretches of this line which the French gave over reluctantly to the green British troops. They were particularly afraid of the sector just south of the original British line about Ypres. This is in the low-lying Lys Valley, with no natural advantages.

Another was Arras itself. Arras, in fact, was the last important position transferred on the line running north from Albert. The Germans have held Arras in a pocket, and have had it in a much more precarious position even than Verdun is to-day. Still Arras has never been cut off, on account of the constant watchfulness of the French. But a change of troops, it was feared, would give the Germans a chance to bring simultaneous attacks on both sides. So they delayed the transfer until recently, when the British took over the lines with the loss of only a few trenches at Mount St. Eloi, which lies immediately north of Arras.

Troops from Dominion.

It is an interesting commentary on what the British think of their own troops that two of the most important positions have been given to the Canadians and the Australians. The Canadians are up on the Lys and the Australians lie between Albert and Soissons. They occupy positions almost at right angles to each other, so that in a general advance they would cut the lines of the German troops. Between 100,000 and 150,000 of the Australians have already been brought across the Mediterranean from Egypt and 150,000 more are still to come. They are the unknown quantity in the British army; but one thing is certain about them, the Germans will never break any line they hold.

Reserve Armies.

To hold this line the British have almost as many troops as Gen. Joffre in the earlier stages of the war used to protect the whole line from Switzerland to the Sea. The British are using not more than three-quarters of a million men to hold the first lines and as first reserves, but they have fairly peopled Northern France with their men. They have bases all the way from Dunkirk to Havre, and back of their lines, wherever one goes, there are great reserve armies. They have plenty of men to fill in any holes the Germans make in their lines, and the road to Calais is just as effectively closed as it was when the French poilus held the most of the line.

Stronger Than Ever.

The line as now held was planned over a year ago. So, far from there being any weakening of the Allied line in France, it is much stronger than it has ever been before since the war began. The work a million and a half men used to do is now done by three million. For, in pulling out their troops from North-Western France the French have brought them east, where they now hold a commanding position with a force that was never possible before. In the larger strategic sense the French have a much better position than the Germans opposite them. They hold the inside of a triangle, the apex of which is Verdun. They have their reserves behind Verdun, where they can be moved rapidly.

The British have not the same strategic position, as the line bends the other way, but they have an enormous advantage in being close to their various bases. They are the shortest possible distance from England, and the supplies landed on the French coast from England can be rushed up to the front line at any point in a very few hours.

Military Advantage.

It was the proper military thing to give the British this line, but when it was first considered there was a great deal of opposition in France due to the political situation. It was argued by the French that in case of a general advance eastward and the reconquering of Belgium, the Belgian people would never see any French troops and they naturally would feel that the British alone were their saviours, which the French felt would be an undeserved reflection on themselves. They would appear to be merely saving their own territory.

In spite of this objection, which was frankly discussed in the French and British military conferences, the military advantage won, and it was agreed to remove French troops from the North Sea to the turn in the line at Albert as rapidly as the British were able to take it over.

Only a Question of Shells.

That is, however, all the line the British will probably take over, as there are plenty of French troops to hold the rest of the line against anything the Germans are likely to do. They also have the Russians now in their lines, and it is now a mere question of keeping the artillery supplied with ammunition.

It can hardly be said, however, that the line from Soissons to the North Sea is entirely given over to the British, for the strategy has all been worked out by the French general staff, the works of defence have been built by the French, and the French Gen. Foch, who has been in command of the northern armies for a year and a half, is still directing the military operations on the British lines, though he has hardly been out of his bed for six months.

What Are British Doing?

It was just as well for the continuance of good feeling between the French and English people that they finally got tangible results in the way of an army. For it had come to be realized very thoroughly among the French people that the French army had not only held more than nine-tenths of the line in France, but had done even more than nine-tenths of the fighting. The fact that the British had held less than a thirty-mile front for many months was beginning to have its effect on public opinion.

A year ago, when the British were only holding a twenty-one-mile front, this question was always answered in France by some one who said: "Remember who is holding the sea." But that excuse was worn threadbare in time and also lost force when the German submarine campaign finally began to get results.

Regard for Egypt.

In December I passed through France on the way to the Eastern Mediterranean, and I heard then murmurs about the British which I felt to be serious. Then I went to Egypt, where I found nearly half a million British soldiers, many of whom had been transported at great expense from England.

The nearest thing to a sensible explanation for feeding half a million troops in Egypt all winter was Kitchener's fear that the Germans were going to combine with the Turks in an attack on the canal. In the German General Staff they must have laughed in their beards at Kitchener's scare, as it was perfectly obvious to any military strategist that Egypt would not know how to use a third of that number of men.

Meanwhile France was being steadily bled. It was carrying the burden of the fight. It did it because it felt greater confidence in its own tried troops, but in time steady losses from day to day began to tell. It was not felt in the army so much, for there has never been a moment when the French army has not been up on its toes and fit for anything. But at home in the provinces, where village after village lost its young men, it was realized that France was paying a heavy price.

Blunders of Censor.

When I returned to France after three months, the Australians were just beginning to pour into Marseilles. It also became known, as things become known in spite of the censor, that the British were taking over great sections of the northern line. In the cities the British began to get back much of the respect they held so long after their splendid service on the Aisne and on the Yser Canal.

Here the censorship, as so often during the war, brought about just the effect it was created to prevent. It kept the people in the dark about a happy truth. But in spite of it the French people, even in the remote provinces, became pretty well aware of the new activities of the British and felt a warming of their hearts towards their Allies again.

French in Command.

British muddling—slowness might be a bitter word—is painful beyond expression to the orderly French mind, but it is more than made up for in the French point of view by an unexpected bigness. They have given over command to the French, they are fighting French strategy under the leadership of French generals, and they have done it gracefully. They have done it in France, and have done it just as gracefully at Salonica. They not only admit the French are better soldiers; they seem so boast of it. When talking about themselves, the more intelligent British officers often say:

"We are a race of individual fighters, but the French are sol-

[illegible] a young Canadian friend [illegible] English cavalry regiment whose [illegible] remember as the typical fighting man of the Empire. Whenever he comes to my mind, I hear his "Cheero" of greeting, the slap of his whip against his riding breeches and the jingle of his spurs. Whatever occurs to him he says. He criticises his commanders. Most of his time he spends with others of his kind complaining bitterly that there is not enough to do.

When the conscription campaign was on in England it caused a great deal of sarcastic talk in the army, and as I happened at the time to be with this youth and his fellow-officers I received their free opinion. It was not in the least complimentary to their own countrymen. We had a long discussion one day, and at the end of it my young friend got up to give himself breath room and said:

"Three Kinds of Soldiers."

"When this whole thing is over with there are going to be three kinds of soldiers in the British army."

Then, raising his voice to a bellow as he pronounced the first word, he dropped it to a scornful whisper in the last as he said:

"There will be MEN, Derbyites and conscripts."

Heaven help the conscripts who get into old-line regiments, or have to fight alongside of them. In the regular army they are generally referred to by the same word that is used for their German enemy, "swine."

When Peace is Made.

The country which has the largest fit army when it comes to signing peace terms will be in the position to take the lead.

I would not put it past the clever official class in Downing Street to have just such an idea as that. But the recent activity of the British in France, showing a willingness to take over any part of the line the French are willing to let them have, has discounted this suspicion. I have no doubt it existed in a few official heads in Downing Street, but the British people as a whole have been free from the duplicity.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded, or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FAY ADMITS ON STAND HE BROKE OATH WITH KAISER

ASKED ABOUT DYNAMITE, HE SAYS HE WOULD SLEEP ON IT THREE YEARS.

New York, May 8. — Lieut. Robert Fay, a self styled deserter of the German army, who is on trial in the Criminal Branch of the Federal District Court with his brother-in-law, Walter Scholz, and Paul Daeche, admitted under cross examination of J. C. Knox, the Assistant United States Attorney, that he had broken the oath of allegiance to the Kaiser.

"Are you not a deserter?" asked Mr. Knox.

"I am," replied Fay.

"Did you swear and break allegiance to the Kaiser?"

"I suppose that I did."

"You used this trial as a loophole on the desertion charge, did you not? Now you wish to use your so called invention as a loophole in this trial, don't you?" he was asked.

Fay declared that he was anxious to get out of the trial and added that it was not a question of loopholes. He was asked about a certain "poor man" from whom the witness had accepted 20,000 marks for alleged automobile inventions, and Mr. Fay replied that in a year Mr. Knox would be able to find out about the matter.

The defendant speaking of the confession introduced in the trial, asserted that he had been grilled all night. He also declared that Captain Tunney of the Bomb Squad had told him that he would not be indicted if he made his statement. Incidentally Scholz, who afterwards took the stand, asserted that neither the police nor the Secret Service agents held out any promises of immunity to himself when he made his confession concerning the conspiracy to wreck the munition steamships with bombs.

TELLS OF DISAPPEARING MINE.

Fay also told of working on a disappearing mine which he hoped would prove of great value. He said that the mine automatically rises and sinks in the water and that for this reason a mine sweeper would not be able to gather it in.

"Will you tell the jury just how this mine works?" asked Mr. Knox.

"If a United States navy officer properly authorized and who has placed money on a table, asks me that question, I shall answer but not before," replied Fay.

Questioned about the danger of dynamite, Fay said, "Why, I'd sleep on that dynamite for three years."

The cross examination of the witness terminated with Fay's refusing to answer questions concerning how he had acquired certain dynamite, previously told about by Fay himself. He contended that he might incriminate himself because of an indictment hanging over him in the New Jersey courts, but also stated that an answer would bring in innocent persons.

There followed a debate between counsel and Judge Howe ruled that an answer was necessary. Fay still refused to answer and he was sucreed-

Facts Worth Knowing.

Take a district containing a hundred houses and a hundred families living in them. You will find that over ninety per cent. of the buildings are insured against fire loss. Of the heads of the families occupying them, according to the known average, not one in five will be carrying life insurance. Look forward fifty years: How many of the houses will have been destroyed in that period? Not over one of the hundred. Take the heads of the families in the same fifty years: How many of them will be alive at the end of that period? Not over ten out of the hundred.

We insure against fire as a matter of course, and rightly so. In the fact of a fifty-year record, how vastly more important that the two kinds of insurance be reversed, or better, that the life insurance be brought up in its totality to the volume of the fire insurance. The one house burns, insurance is paid, and the property rebuilt. The man who is in the great class of the uninsured dies, and the loss to himself and those dependent upon him is a total one. You cannot compare a fire loss with a death loss, and yet we go on and on thinking of the more meagre loss of fires and protecting against them, while overlooking and forgetting the greater loss that death brings, and neglect protecting against it.

It is a matter of congratulation that fire losses are universally recognized and protected against. How much greater a matter of congratulation it will be when the same unlimited recognition is given to loss through death, and life insurance protection becomes as universal as fire protection.

Your earning capacity is your Family's Capital. Have you considered how much your earning ability represents?

A Policy in the Sun Life of Canada is not only sound assurance protection, but an increasingly safe and profitable investment.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This charming little dress, simple as it is, bears every earmark of fashion. It is a little more than the half belted model and has its fulness drawn in at the sides, where the ends of the belt button to the dress. Contrasting goods contribute the collar, roll cuffs on short sleeves, and the tuck, which is so arranged that much of the front of the dress falls free. A vestee of self material that is piped in solid color to match the collar, fills the neck, which would be a little low without this treatment. The closing outline has its own way, starting the diagonal closing, but taking a straight course from below the belt, continuing to the hem. This look of precision proves to be a style note for the season. If "if your dress buttons sideways, 'tis quite in the fashion." For a dress to be tubbed, cotton gabardine, linen, chambray or other wash materials will be suitable; there is a mass of weaves from which to choose for a dress that will not be in the class to be laundered.

TO SAVE EYES

In the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used a few months, do their eyes more injury than good.

Here is a simple prescription that every one should use: 5 grains Bon-Opto dissolved in ½ pint of water. Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Bon-Opto system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation: weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use.

It is good for the eyes, and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Your own druggist can fill this prescription, or the Vaimas Drug Co. of Toronto will fill it for you by mail. Try it, and know for once what real eye comfort is.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very good remedy for the common eye troubles. I can recommend it to anyone who wishes a simple, harmless eye medicine and tonic, prepared by them, it can be depended upon to do all that is claimed for it. It is one of the very few proprietary preparations that I ever do recommend. I hope all those who suffer from eye troubles will try it."

The Warne Drug Co. fills many Bon-Opto prescriptions, and will gladly fill yours.

German Casualties Now Reach Close to the Three Million Mark

Killed Alone Number 705,877 While 334,892 Are Prisoners or Missing---French Official Report Shows a Slackening in the Fighting Around Verdun---Canadian Troops Have Landed Safely and None Are at Present at Sea

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 10.—The total German losses, not including those sustained in naval engagements or among the Colonial forces, total 2,822,879, according to the figures announced by the Press Bureau, divided as follows: Killed 705,877, wounded 1,781,310, prisoners or missing 334,892.

PARIS (French Official) May 10.—A slackening in the German bombardment of French positions northwest of Verdun was reported to-day by the War Office.

East of the Meuse and in the Woevre region there was only intermittent bombardment during the night. Halted in repeated assaults against the Hill 304 positions, the Germans did not return to the attack on the northwestern front of Verdun last night. The only infantry fighting on the Verdun front occurred in Avocourt Wood, where there were unimportant grenade struggles. In Upper Alsace, a German reconnaissance, attempting to capture a French post at Hirzbech was repulsed.

Canadian Troops Have Arrived Safely

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 10.—No Canadian forces are now at sea. This announcement was made officially this morning, and disposes of the report which has come successively from different quarters in the past week, that a Canadian transport had been sunk. All of the ship carrying Canadian soldiers are now safely landed, and none of them met any mishap.

No Americans Aboard the Cymric

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 10.—United States Ambassador Frost at Queenstown confirmed the statement that there were no Americans aboard the Cymric, and that she was not armed. It was authoritatively stated to-day that the Cymric was not in the Admiralty service. As an ordinary merchantman she was entitled to all the immunities granted by Germany in her pledges to the United States in the reply to the American note.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The State Department to-day was informed by Ambassador Gerard that the German admission of guilt in the Sussex case is en route to Washington.

Execution of Irish Rebels Now Completed

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 10.—No Irish rebel leaders have been executed at Dublin since Monday, Premier Asquith announced in the Commons this afternoon. He added that he hoped it would be unnecessary to execute any more of the Irish leaders.

The Premier announced the appointment of a commission to inquire into causes of the Irish outbreak and the conduct of the civilian and military authorities. The commission will be headed by Lord Sandinge, the former Viceroy of India; Justice Shearman, and Sir Mackenzie Chalmers. The Prime Minister assured John Dillon, one of their Irish leaders who declared wholesale executions might have serious results in Ireland, that there will be no further executions pending the discussion of the matter in the Commons to-morrow.

Wilson's Reply Is Acceptable to Germany

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, May 10.—President Wilson's brief reply, accepting Germany's submarine concessions, but rejecting the condition with reference to England, will prove acceptable to Germany, the Lokal Anzeiger stated to-day. "The result is that even President Wilson's reply does not change this. Germny is willing to wait and see how President Wilson, who always maintains his neutrality, will address England. His reply to the German note permits the conclusion that he intends to communicate with England," said the Anzeiger.

UNITED STATES OFFICER TESTIFIES AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Ont., May 10.—Major W. J. Hawkins, a graduate of West Point, the Frankford U. S. Arsenal and United States regular artillery, was a witness before the Shell Commission this morning. He is now manager and chief expert of the International Arms and Fuse Company, which secured a tremendous order from the Canadian Shell Committee. Major Hawkins' evidence was so technical that many of the prominent persons in the room went to sleep under it, but it was generally tending to show that only a big plant with very special machinery could handle the job of making fuses. Major Hawkins declared that no company without a plant, even with an expert staff of employees, could be expected to build a plant and turn out fuses in less than eight months.

FIRST HAND DETAILS OF THE SURRENDER AT KUT-EL-AMARA

HEADQUARTERS OF THE TIGRIS ARMY (via London), May 10—I am able to supply the following first-hand details of the surrender of Major-General Charles F. Townshend and his garrison at Kut-El-Amara, Writes Edmund Candler, correspondent of the London Times.

The last wireless communications sent out by General Townshend were despatched on the morning of April 29. Two messages were received here. The first one read:

"I have destroyed the guns, most of the munitions are being destroyed and officers have gone to Khalil (the Turkish General) at Hadag to say that we are ready to surrender. We must have food. We cannot hold out any longer. Khalil was told to-day of our predicament and officers have gone with a launch to bring food from the Julner."

The Julner was the ship sent on the night of April 24 to carry supplies to the garrison at Kut.

WHITE FLAG HOISTED.

The next wire begins:

"Have hoisted the white flag at Kut over the fort and town. The guards will be taken over by the Turkish regiment now approaching. I shall shortly destroy the wireless. The troops will go into camp near Shamran."

The message ended abruptly here.

THE COLLEGIATE CADETS MAKE A SPLENDID SHOWING

School Boy Soldiers Complimented by Lt.-Col. Gillespie on Their Smart Work in Yesterday's Annual Inspection

CUP FOR No. 1 COMPANY

The annual inspection of the Cadets of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute took place yesterday afternoon at Central Park, Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, of Kingston, being the inspecting officer. Lieut.-Col. Miller, who is always keenly interested in Cadet work, viewed the inspection with Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, while Lieut.-Col. Stewart, Inspector of Supply and Transport for No. 3 Military District, was an interested spectator, as were a number of the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion.

The youngsters made a very creditable showing, in spite of the fact that uniforms to fit all the members were lacking. Their marching was very steady, and they carried out battalion and company drill in smart fashion, well handled by their officers. The inspection wound up with some skirmishing drill.

No. 1 Company, in charge of Douglas Canniff, was selected by Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, assisted by Lieut.-Col. Miller, as the company making the best appearance and doing the best work, and were accordingly presented with the silver cup, emblematic of the crack company for the year.

Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, in addressing the Cadets after the inspection, referred to the great pleasure he always had in coming to Peterborough to view the work of the Collegiate Battalion. He desired, he said, to compliment them upon their excellent work during the afternoon. The Inspecting Officer briefly reviewed the work of the different Cadet officers, remarking that they had done splendidly. Lieut.-Col. Gillespie pointed out what was being done by graduates from the different Cadet Corps in the division. At the School of Instruction at Barriefield Camp last year 25 per cent. of the officers in training had come from the Cadet Corps in the division, and no doubt this year there would be many more. Some of the boys before him would undoubtedly take the officers' course, and he promised them a warm welcome. Lieut.-Col. Gillespie paid a tribute to the Cadets who had fallen in the fight for liberty.

Lieut.-Col. Miller added his compliments to those of the Inspecting Officer. In discussing Cadet work, the speaker pointed out the benefits that were derived from the drill, teaching the boys to carry themselves in a soldierly manner, and to throw their chests out and their shoulders back. The primary object was not to make soldiers of the boys, but at the same time the work prepared them for military service if they were called upon. Many of those who were fighting valiantly at the front had received their first training on their school campus.

Lieut.-Col. Stewart, in a brief address, complimented the boys on their splendid marching and drilling. The speaker paid a tribute to the benefits of Cadet training in the schools, and pointed out that many Cadets had changed their uniforms and donned the King's livery. He was sure that some of those before him would not require much coaxing to become members of Canada's army.

Each of the three speakers was heartily cheered by the Cadets.

The inspection was very satisfactory, and reflects credit upon Capt. Jamieson, the instructor, and the officers and members of the Corps. The Cadet Bugle Band made a very good showing.

The visit of Creatore's Famous Band to Peterborough next week will be one of the greatest musical events in years, and undoubtedly the celebrated conductor and his band will be greeted with a capacity house. In order to afford better and more comfortable accommodation for patrons it has been decided to hold the concert in the Grand Opera House instead of in the Armouries as at first advertised. The scale of prices will be from 50c to $1.50, and the profits will be given to the fund of the 93rd Battalion, so that music-lovers can give themselves a treat and help the battalion at the same time by attending the concert. Remember the date, Friday, May 19th.

313 Church of England Members in Peterborough County Unit According to Official Figures---Methodists a Good Second---Non-coms. For the London School Selected ---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

A religious census of the 93rd Battalion, up to last Sunday, shows that Church of England members are in the lead, with a total of 313 officers and men, while the Methodists are a good second, with 284. The figures are as follows:

	Officers.	Ranks.
Church of England	10	303
Methodists	9	275
Presbyterians	10	143
Other Protestant religions	4	104
Roman Catholics	2	111
Hebrews		2
Total	35	938

The municipal council of Burleigh and Anstruther had a short session two weeks ago, when Councillor Earnshaw suggested that the Council should give each one who has recruited from Burleigh and Anstruther some slight token of their appreciation of the boys. Thanks to Councillor Earnshaw's patriotism, a motion was carried that fountain pens be procured and presented to the boys. The pens are to be sent to Lieut. Hughes to be given by him to them at Peterborough.

The following eleven non-coms. of the 93rd Battalion will leave at the end of the week for London, Ont., where they will attend the special school in physical training and bayonet fighting: Sergt. Giles, Corp. Harry Clappison, Corp. Geo. Melton, Lance-Corp. Burrows, Lance-Corp. Lance-Corporal Saxby, Lance-Corporal Norman, Lance-Coroporal Parker, Lance Corp. Stockdale, Lance Corp. Holden, Lance-Corp. Hill, Lance-Corporal Quackenbush. The course will be similar to that at Montreal, from which a number of officers and N. C. O's. of the 93rd have just returned.

TORONTO, May 9.—A highly important ruling with regard to the raising of further overseas battalions throughout Canada has just been made by the Militia Council, Ottawa, according to a notification received to-day from General W. E. Hodgins by Brigadier-General W. A. Logie, G.O.C.

The new regulation provides that all overseas battalions in the process of being recruited are to be concentrated at a camp as soon as the strength of the unit has reached the six hundred mark. The recruiting work is to proceed after the nucleus of the battalion has gone into camp, but if it appears that recruiting efforts are unavailing or are only partly successful, the portion of the battalion is to be merged with some other battalion of a similar strength and in the same position regards recruiting. The regulation goes into camp orders for to-morrow.

A team representing the cooks of the 93rd Battalion triumphed over a picked eleven yesterday afternoon, by 4 goals to 2. The losers were twice in front, but the soup artists finished strong, getting three goals in the last ten minutes. Lance-Corp. G. East was referee.

A Presentation.

A presentation of a wrist watch and address was made to Private Harry Dorset of the 93rd Overseas Battalion on May the fourth, at the home of Mr. Thomas McIvor, second concession, Smith township. The presentation was made by Mr. Archie Ackison, while Miss Jessie Swinton read the address which follows:

Lily Lake, Peterborough, May 4.

To Pte. Harry Dorset,
93rd Reigment, C.E.F.:

Dear Harry,—We are glad of this lull in your military activities to allow us to gather here to-night to bid farewell to one of our number and one who has donned the King's uniform and gone into the ranks with the many who are hastening to the service of the Empire.

We appreciate your patriotic spirit and we are all proud of our "boy in khaki." It is the distinctive garb of one who is willing to sacrifice himself, if need be for his King and country, to uphold the renown that has been gained by your brother Canadians in the trenches and on the fields of Flanders.

He shall always have pleasant recollections of your cheerfulness and willingness in assisting in our social gatherings and we know that your personal qualities will be of great service to you in your new life and work. While we shall always think of you as one of the soldiers of the King, we regret to have you go from amongst us.

Please accept this small token of our hearty good wishes and may you never forget your friends in and near Smith township. We shall look forward to your return when the victory of the allies brings the peace we are all hoping and waiting for, waiting with assured confidence that it will be one of the Empire's making with the consent and approval of her allies. Then we shall have released from an honourable service most creditable to their manhood and country our Canadian boys, coming back to us to be ever in our regard and our sight as those who have given that highest service man can give, a risk for his home and country.

With renewed expressions of friendship and regard.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Archie Ackison,
Fred Steinkrauss,

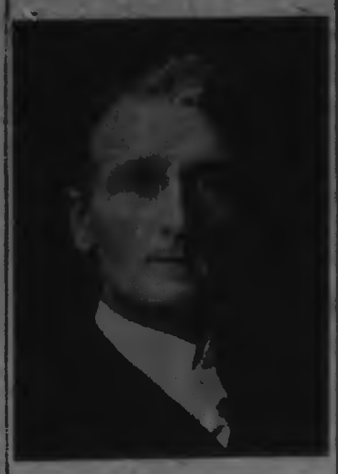
SANITARY INSPECTOR SPENCE TENDERS HIS RESIGNATION



MR. C. A. G. SPENCE
Who has resigned his position as Sanitary Inspector of the city. His appointment as agent for Peterborough County of the Childrens' Aid Society, has been confirmed by the executive of the Society.

Will Succeed Mr. George Cochrane as Local Agent For Children's Aid Society—Appointment Was Confirmed Late Yesterday Afternoon—City Loses a Capable Official.

THE NEW OFFICE

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Sanitary Inspector, has tendered his resignation to the City Council. Mr. Spence has been appointed agent for the Childrens' Aid Society. He will enter upon his new duties about the first of June. The appointment was confirmed at a special meeting of the executive of the Childrens' Aid Society, held late yesterday afternoon. Mr. Spence succeeds Mr. George Cochrane, who through illness and advancing years, is unable to continue in the position.

It is about four years since Mr. Spence severed his connection with The Examiner to accept his present position. At that time the work in connection with the office was in the process of organization. Since then it has trebled, and includes such duties as inspecting at regular intervals, the dairy farms, sources of all food supplies, superintendent of the garbage collecting system, and a host of other duties.

Mr. Spence's New Duties.

Mr. Spence's new duties will necessitate frequent visits to all parts of the county where he will be required to address various organizations, municipal and otherwise, and will endeavour to place the Society on a more substantial basis.

It is likely that the Council will take steps to deal with the matter at an early date, as Mr. Spence has asked to be relieved of his present duties not later than the end of this month. Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, who for the past year or two has assisted Mr. Spence in connection with the performance of his present duties, is spoken of as a prospective appointee.

MOTORMAN EASON SUSTAINED BROKEN LEG IN COLLISION

Street Car Collided With Freight Car (Both Moving) at Matthews-Blackwell Siding This Morning

RAIN "GREASED" RAILS

GEORGE EASON, motorman, right leg broken.

MRS. THOS. LANE, Hunter street, shoulder bruised; otherwise shaken up.

MRS. A. BARBEAU, 112 Aylmer street, knee bruised.

These injuries resulted in a collision of a George street car and a C.P.R. freight car at the Matthews-Blackwell siding this morning.

Motorman George Eason residing at 276 Thomas street, is in the Nicholls Hospital with his right leg broken below the knee, as the result of a collision with a box car at the Matthews-Blackwell crossing on George street this morning about 10.30 o'clock. He was extremely fortunate in escaping with this minor wound, for those who witnessed the accident marvelled that he was not killed.

Street Car No. 15 was proceeding up George street and as it approached the C.P.R. crossings an engine was backing several cars into the Matthews-Blackwell siding. The street car was travelling at a fair speed although the motorman was evidently beginning to pull up for the main line crossing. Apparently he did not see the moving cars until he was too close to them to avoid a collision. With a firmer grip on the rails he might have been successful but the rain had "greased" them. Both the box car and street car were thrown off their respective rails. They met at right angles and swerved across the street toward the north-east. The street car was travelling sufficiently fast to jolt the heavier freight car from its rails, but it received the worst of the argument.

Vestibule Demolished.

The motorman's vestibule was completely wrecked. All the glass and woodwork was crumpled and torn away. Even the doors were carried off with their framework. The rest of the car however, was undamaged, except where it joined with the vestibule.

ARRANGING FOR CREATORE'S BAND

Mr. Robson, personal representative of Mr. Veitch, the well-known Canadian impresario, is in town completing the arrangements for the appearance here of the great Creatore and his Band on Friday, May 19. Mr. Robson is a well-known figure in the entertainment world, having for years been connected with Massey Hall in Toronto. The Band opened its month-long Canadian tour on Wednesday at Sherbrooke, May 3rd, where it performed a programme specially arranged for the Canadian engagement and of a highly popular and patriotic character, and was received with tremendous enthusiasm. This tour is the biggest thing of the kind ever undertaken by a band organization in the Dominion.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 10, 1916

THE ROOT OF IT.

The cartoonist of the New York Sun digs up the real root of the Irish ruction, when he depicts the Kaiser and the heads of his allies, including the unspeakable Turk, dressed in Irish costume as a "German Band" playing the "Wearing of the Green." There cannot be a doubt that the rising was schemed, planned, financed, and fostered by Germany. There was no other possible ground of origin. Ireland has had her woes, and they have been many; but the worst woe that has yet come to her in her history, is the friendship of Germany. It has had its immediate effect in the loss of many Irish lives—both of the dupes and the innocent. This is the only comfort Germany can take out of the abortive rising—the death of a few Irishmen has partially satisfied her brutal lust of destruction of life. The success of the revolutionary movement would have been the blackest woe that ever can, or could come, to Ireland—it would have brought her under German rule; she would have exchanged Home Rule for Hun rule —a happy self-ruled Ireland for a hell upon earth.

CONSCRIPTION OR WORSE.

We Canadians shy at conscription like a country colt at a street car. This attitude towards service of the Empire comes from our training, our experience of free conditions in a free country. If, we don't do our duty without conscription we shall come under the rule of Germany; we shall have a taste of military tyranny to which conscription will be milk-and-water mildness. So far Britain and her Dominions have done their share in halting and hampering the march of Germany to her declared goal, "world domination or downfall." "World domination" would include Canada, and German policy imposed on Canada. If conscription is needed to meet the menace it would be an exceedingly small price to pay for the evils it would help obviate. What training, what military service, what life at all, would be under German rule is expressed by the statement of a German witness in a trial in New York. This witness said, "Our training in Germany is such that if I asked a superior officer what he was doing, I'd expect his fist in my face." Here is expressed the keynote of the German song of force and kultur. Such a spirit of brutality pervades the whole German soul, and obsesses the German spirit through and through; the spirit of brutality inheres in every movement of Germany's diabolically marvellous organization from the private soldier, through every gradation of relations, to the nation which dares to ask Germany what she is doing—with international law, with the lives of the subjects of neutral nations—or dares to question the most hellish practices of her outlaw spirit. If we don't do our duty we who are fit, and if conscription has to come, it will be a child's game to what we shall come under if Germany is allowed to win.

JOHN REDMOND'S APPEAL.

John Redmond appealed to the Asquith Government for leniency toward the underlings in the Irish uprising. He called them "dupes," and he was right. "Dupes" they all are of the "professional" Irishmen of the United States, who have by money and otherwise fostered discontent in the Green Isle.

These miserable politicians year in and year out play on the quick susceptibilities of the Irish-born and the descendants of Erin in the United States with exaggerated stories of the "tyrannous" English. Tales of the wrongs of the Irish people are told and retold, keeping alive old sores which long ago would have been healed. And for what? That they may ride into petty offices on the votes of the men they deceive.—London Free Press.

PUBLIC HEALTH INTERESTS.

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Health Inspector, is practically no onger a health inspector. His resignation of that position was filed with the City Clerk this morning. He resigns to accept the important position of Agent of the Children's Aid Society, a position which he should very satisfactorily fill. If he does his duty as faithfully and effectively, as he no doubt will do, in his new office, as he has done in the one he resigns, his appointment will be most amply justified.

As Health Inspector Mr. Spence has done his duty—not to general satisfaction—for in such a position the more thoroughly the incumbent does his work the more unpopular he becomes. The measure of his discharge of duty is the enemies he makes. A health inspector, to be popular, must neglect his duty. Mr. Spence, in enforcing the requirement of the Health Act had to come into contact with popular prejudices, and incur the enmity of those who did not or would not appreciate the vital importance of health regulations. He has had to combat official apathy, and indifference, if not obstruction, arising from similar failure to appreciate the importance of public health measures; and though his salary in his new position is smaller than that attached to the one he vacates, he will be the gainer. Mr. Spence will in the discharge of his new duty, incur individual opposition, but the general public and the officials under whom he acts will, by their appreciation, both of his work and its importance, make the work more a pleasure.

It is not too much to say that Inspector Spence's retirement will be a loss to the city, and it will be difficult to find a successor, who will have so large a sense of responsibility in respect of the office. He was an educated man and more than that, an intelligent man, who studied to know the details and principles of his work and his duty, and faithfully did it A city of the size of Peterborough, with its future of growth, has especial need of the most intelligent possible attention to its sanitary interests. To make a city worth living in, worth paying taxes in, there must be provided conditions that will insure the public health.

Sanitation has become something more important than the use of a stable broom, and a tin of chloride of lime. It has become a science, whose application systematically and thoroughly, is made indispensable by congestion of population and the close situation of residences. These conditions have made necessary the organisation of a private enterprise which has to deal with conditions of insanitation and menace to public health, a work rendered more necessary in proportion to the inadequacy of civic health precautions and sanitary provision.

Our one great need is a city council committee that will take its duty, in regard to public sanitation, seriously; much more seriously than implied in an aldermanic diction, that the Peterborough Health Association is "a fad of the doctors." There must be an official sentiment created that will recognize the fact that the public health, the health of our homes, the health of the lives of their inmates, our women and children, is an infinitely more important matter than a foot bridge or a street crossing. Then, his desideratum having been reached, the other necessity is the appointment of a qualified, intelligent, fearless, sanitary inspector—not as a substitute for official efficiency and interest, but as an adjuvant, an aid, a cooperating element, to be encouraged and not stifled by official apathy.

Modern sanitary science has its demand upon civic and public recognition. Its application has led to saving and prolonging life; and the individual or public body that fails to recognise its importance and its indispensable place in a community or this community, has little reason to claim superiority over the geographic prodigy who still holds the Dark Ages belief that the earth is flat.

GERMANY ANSWERS GERMANY.

If there were any respect for German diplomacy left, surely the latest note of the German Government to the United States would dispel it. The more one studies the note the more ridiculous it appears. Why any Government in their senses should issue such a tissue of whines and falsehoods is beyond ordinary comprehension. The only answer seems to be that they are getting distracted and incoherent.

As far as the accusations against Great Britain are concerned, Lord Robert Cecil has been able to give smashing replies. The German Government charges that their submarine piracy was forced on them by the blockade instituted by Great Britain. Britain can appeal to numerous instances in recorded history to show that Germany's submarine piracy ante-dated the British blockade considerably, and to cap the lot has only to quote a promulgation by the German Government to show that Germany declared an absolute blockade of Great Britain before Great Britain blockaded Germany!

Then Germany complains that Great Britain is starving the civilian population of Germany. Here again Britain is able to quote the speech made by the German Chancellor in the Reichstag [illegible] when he said Germany could not be starved, and it was impossible to understand how cool heads could ever cling to the belief that she could be! Finally, the statement that the German Government have twice offered peace within the last few months is answered by the speech of the German Chancellor, who only recently stated that the idea of any peace overtures coming from Germany was a falsehood emanating from enemy sources. Apparently the Government are losing their grip.—Montreal Herald.

WHY GENERAL JOFFRE IS HOLDING BRITISH BACK

Why should the British army remain idle while for two months the French have been repulsing the most determined assaults in the history of warfare at Verdun? This is a question frequently asked, not by the French, but by the British, who would have been proud to see their own soldiers sharing the perils and the glories of the battle at Verdun. The answer is given by John Balderson, London correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch, who has proved an exceedingly well-informed authority since the beginning of the war. In beginning his explanation he says that two months ago Sir Douglas Haig offered to attack the Germans in front of him, but General Joffre told him not to do so. This should relieve all suspicion that the Allies are not acting in perfect accord. It should be borne in mind too, that General Joffre is in command of the British armies in Flanders and France. They are expected to obey his orders just as the French armies obey them.

British Wanted to Attack.

The first of the reasons that decided General Joffre to decline the offer of General Haig was no doubt the conviction that he did not need the British attack to divert the German forces, and the second is, probably, that an even more important role is reserved for the British armies in the near future. A great battle is expected on the British front. Whether it will be inaugurated by a British offensive or a German offensive nobody knows; but the prediction is made that the next great battle of the war will be fought in Flanders. Either the Germans will make a final effort to take Calais and Bologne, thus straightening out their line, and making difficult, if not almost impossible, military transport between France and England; or the British will try to take Lille, which would force the retreat of all the German armies to the south as far as Soissons. Perhaps the latter probability was in the mind of the Government of Holland when it prepared to resist a possible attempt of the Germans to escape from Northern France by crossing the narrow strip of Dutch Limburg which projects itself between Germany and Belgium.

Germans Outnumbered.

Mr. Balderson says that, while circumspection must be employed in considering the number of British troops in France and Flanders, he is permitted to say that the number falls short of a million men, despite the statement recently made that there was an army of 2,500,000 men in the field. The numbers of the German army on the western front can be accurately calculated by the Allies, and there is no reason for concealing them, since it is assumed that Germany already has this information. It is semi-officially stated, then, that there are 85 divisions, or about 1,700,000 German soldiers, in France and Flanders, exclusive of the extensive garrison and supply organizations. The French are said to have about 1,900,000 men, and the British and Belgians about 1,000,000. In artillery the margin of the Allies is even greater with regard to guns, if not to shells. The Germans are thought to have about 12,000 cannon in the west.

An Extraordinary Situation.

The extraordinary situation there is not, however, the fact that the Allies outnumber the Germans by about a million men, but the disposition of the German armies. Mr. Balderson asserts that, contrary to the general supposition, the best German troops were not sent against Verdun. They remain in front of the British. The only units of the Prussian Guard which appeared at Verdun have been certain reserve brigades. The first-line troops are in the mining region north of Arras. The Germans at Verdun are supposed to number thirty divisions, or 600,000 men; while massed along the British front of some 90 miles are 34 divisions, or 680,000 men. The Verdun front is set down as 40 miles. Therefore, in 130 miles, Germany has 64 divisions, or 1,280,000 men. That leaves but 21 divisions, or 420,000 German soldiers, to hold the rest of the front. The whole front is 570 miles long. Four hundred and forty miles of that front, therefore, are held by fewer than 1,000 men to the mile.

Great Battle Coming.

"Why do not the Allies attack?" asks Mr. Balderson. "I think I might guess the answer, but I may not try." And if Mr. Balderson may not guess in an American newspaper, a Canadian writer may not guess, either. It is evident from this article, however, that something of importance is impending; and he asserts that those who criticise the British generals do not know what they are talking about. All the British commanders now at the front have proved their ability, not in perivus wars, but in this war. One of them, for instance, General Munro, was temporarily relieved of command in France, and went to the Gallipoli and there performed the most brilliant feat, probably, to the credit of any British general in this war, namely, the safe withdrawal of the British armies. The average age of the British generals is about 55 1-2 years; that of the Germans 63 1-2 Nobody has ever questioned the quality of the British soldier. It seems that both generals and soldiers are about to undergo the most severe test in British history in the near future.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BIG PROGRAMME TO-MORROW NIGHT

The athletic evening, under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, to-morrow night, in the Armouries, promises to be a great success and no doubt will be largely attended, as it is the first sporting event of any kind to be held here for some time. There are a large number of interting boxing and wrestling bouts, bayonet fighting, and exhibition of card tricks by Pte. Thomas, and in addition to the other attractions already announced there will be two special features, an exhibition of ventriloquism by Pte. Cole, and a bayonet fight between Sergt.-Major Miller, W.O., and Pte. Chas. Cook, of the Army Service Corps.

The 93rd Band will contribute to the programme. Altogether the evening will be a thoroughly enjoyable one. The proceeds go to the 93rd Battalion, so that there should be a large attendance. The admission is 25 cents to all parts of the Armouries.

RUSSIANS ARREST SWEDISH OFFICERS AS SAFETY MOVE

LONDON, May 8.—The reported arrest of Russian forces of four Swedish officers in Persia who were commanders of the Persian gendarmerie has been regarded in military circles as an inevitable outcome ever since Russia scored her recent notable victories in the East. The capture of Erzerum and Trebisond have had the added effect on political conditions in the East of making Russia the supreme power in Persia.

The four Swedish officers arrested were Colonels Killander and Foselius and Captains Augman and Erickson. Colonel Hjalmarsen, who originally was placed in charge of the road gendarmerie is supposed to have been relieved recently by Colonel Killander.

In 1911 when Mr. Morgan Shuster went ont to Persia from the United States to accept the office of Treasurer-General, one of the first steps taken by the official had to do with the formation of a Treasury gendarmerie to serve with the civilian officers of the Treasury in the collection of taxes throughout the Persian Empire. The existing gendarmerie could not be depended upon, and the American Treasury-General proposed to create an armed force under modern Western methods. Mr. Shuster made efforts to obtain the services of Major C. B. Stokes, an officer of the British Indian army, who at that time was military attache of the British Legation in Teheran. Major Stokes appointment was blocked by Russia after the British Government had tacitly admitted that there was no diplomatic difficulty. As soon, however, as Russia perceived that the organisation of strong military force was actually contemplated, representations were made to the British Government with the result that the British Foreign Office presented on August 8 1911, a note verbale to the Persian Foreign Office warning the Persian Government that it ought not to persist in the appointment of Major Stokes unless he was not to be employed in Northern Persia.

BRITAIN OPPOSES APPOINTMENT.

Major Stokes found, that, owing to the opposition of Russia, England was also opposing the appointment. The officer's appointment was being urged largely because of his knowledge of Perfia and its language. Russia raised the point of objection to Major Stokes' appointment as being a violation of the spirit of the convention of 1907, whereby England and Russia had agreed to establish spheres of influence in Persia, with a neutral sphere between. The Russian sphere of influence embraced Northern Persia and included all the principal towns of Persia except Dinfol, Shushtar, Shiraz and Kirman. The most fertile and populous part of the country was included in the Russian sphere. The British sphere consisted mostly of desert and contained Kirman as the only town of importance.

The British Govarnment's objection to the Stokes appointment and the warning of the Persian government was set forth by Sir George Barclay, British Minister to Teheran, in a statement that an understanding with the Persian Government had existed for some time that only subjects of minor Powers should be selected for service in Persia and that the exception made in favor of the United States was influenced by the opinion that no political motives in Persia could be imputed to the United States. The British Minister said the British themselves might have occasion to object to the appointment of a Russian officer to organise an administration, say, on the Indian frontier, and that, as soon as it was found out that Russia objected to the appointment of Major Stokes, the British could not deprecate such objection and were bound to warn the Persian government of the difficulties that would arise.

REASON FOR BRITISH OBJECTION

Sir George Barclay was advised by Sir Edward Grey that the appointment of some subjects of the minor Powers in the place of Major Stokes was the only way out of the difficulty. The British government suggested, in the first instance, that some Swedish officer be appointed. It is assumed that in recommending a Swedish appointment that fact was not overlooked that the Swedes and Russians are none too friendly, but in any event the Swedes could not be accused of having ulterior motives when organising a gendarmerie. This at any rate was the situation in 1911, but with the present war conditions and the tendency of the Swedes to lean toward Germany it will be perceived that a gendarmerie of approximately 12,000 well drilled men in Persia under Swedish military control might constitute, in the event of Sweden entering the war, a serious menace to Russian lines of communication. The Russians, it is believed, have restored to drastic action on the basis that their sphere of influence in Northern Persia is threatened by the presence of the gendarmerie under management of foreign officers, and have arrested these officers for the purpose of removing them from Persian territoy.

The employment of the Swedish officers in Persia has been in the nature of a private engagement with the Persian government and one which does not officially implicate the Swedish government. Sweden cannot, it is believed, take official cognisance of this removal any more than could the United States when the services of Mr. Shuster as Treasurer-General in Persia were dispensed with.

Soldiers' Pets

When the Germans overran Belgium and Northern France, thousands of dogs—mostly draught animals—were turned adrift. Who has not heard of the dogs of Ypres? They now know the soldiers' meal-time so well that they congregate in companies around each cookhouse, ready for their share. They are comfortable, well-fed animals by this time, summing themselves among the ruins and well content with their lot. But at first, gaunt and starved, they lurked in the background, too terrified to approach a man. At night they ranged the camp, stealing whatever they could, and at daybreak retreating to their lairs. At last one more daring than the rest crept out, a terrible hunger making him bold. He snatched at the food thrown down. Others followed his example, until the gay call of the bugler now means a scamper of padding feet and an army of dogs gathering to be served with the remains. Pathetic stories are told of the faithfulness of some of these dogs. One tiny pet-dog—a mere handful of silken hair and pathetically big eyes—comes daily for food to one of the billets, but attempts at friendship are resented by a sudden snarl and a tiny bundle of black fur dashes swiftly away. A soldier followed the tiny mite to its retreat. In the heart of a ruined house, the shattered roof tenanted by starlings, the little dog lives in what had once been a beautifully furnished boudoir, and still sleeps on a soiled, shell-torn cushion in the heart of the ruin, waiting for the return of his sistress.

Dogs are to be found everywhere in the long battle line, sleeping under the guns of wagons. One battery has twenty. They take cover in the most natural manner, and wait until the whiz-bang has passed before venturing out again. The small dog who is a good ratter has a princely time, and is very carefully looked after by the company to which he belongs. A sacrilegious sight, from a foxhunter's point of view, was the training of young foxhounds as ratters when the order went forth that the scratch packs at the front had to be broken up. One foxhound pup, smuggled across by an officer, was given to a non-com. of a battery. Now the hound, full grown, with a splendid voice, is the champoin ratter of an army corps, and kills a fabulous number of rats daily. It is to be feared that if the good dog comes back to those shores he will insist on hunting rats instead of the fox.

Cats, of course, figure largely among the soldiers' pets. They have a remarkable disregard of danger. They seem to prefer the trenches to the rest of the lines. A cat will sit and clean herself on the top of a parapet, and only retreat when a bullet or shrapnel sputters close at hand and upsets her toilet arrangements. The whistling and shrieking of shells is commonplace, but to be sputtered with mud or sand in the middle of washing one's face provokes indignant spits, snarls, and a very fluffy tail. The arrival of a family of kittens is an event of immense importance, and many a small cat sharing a soldier's home in Britain first opened its eyes upon the muddy surroundings of a trench "somewhere in France," and was brought home tucked inside a tunic or a kit-bag.

There are several tiny henyards in dug-outs if the searcher knows just where to look. But it is in the waggon lines of the artillery that the weirdest pets are to be found. A Q.M.S. whose resting hours were disturbed by the "father of all rats" ended by making friends with the foe. Now that Q.M.S. has only to sit down in his "store" and whistle, and the rat will emerge from its hole and promptly jump upon his knee. At another waggon line the swallows and martins built last year in the barn used as a harness room. They became so tame that the men could look into the nests of the martins, who came and went without troubling about the soldiers at all. Goats are too destructive to make good pets, except perhaps as mascots, but quaint stories are told of elderly goats kept by various men, and of the fearful and awful feats of the animals in the way of canvas-ripping and clothes-eating. One Tommy hid his cherished and beloved "Billy" in a neat little dug-out near his battery. The major of that battery was small and round. In the middle of one of his "orations" in the twilight gloom of a lurid day the listeners heard a crash—it sounded like the rending of wood,—there was a flash of dirty white, and the little major went down like a nine-pin. Something shot over the edge of the gun-pit. There was a sudden silence while an indistinct, dirty-white object vanished like lightning into the hase that surrounded the fire trenches in the distance. A furious major was helped to his feet. He flatly declined to believe that he had been bulted ont by a stray dog startled by a shell. But as the goat is still missing, he has no means of proving what creature assaulted him.

As a rule the captured German trenches do not yield much in the way of pets, but when some trenches were explored after a British advance the ——Fusiliers found a cow installed in a dug-out. The poor brute had been there so long that she could hardly walk, and her hooves had grown nine inches too long, and these projections turned up grotesquely in front. With much difficulty she was dragged up into the light of day and gently exercised, her feet being carefully doctored. Now a very happy and mushpatted cow is led out every morning to a meadow behind a wood. A soldier watches over her, for there are other companies that would gladly commandeer that cow. In the evening she is led back to her stall, somewhere in the heart of the British lines at the front.

The Appeal From the Front

The appeal from the trenches is insistent: "Smokes! Smokes! Send us Smokes!" is the cry that is always to be heard; in every letter that reaches the Over-Seas Club from the front it is apparent. Tobacco is one of the few things that gives men happiness during the weary days, weeks and months of waiting. It is a source of real companionship. By sending tobacco to the troops through Canada's Tobacco Fund instead of in your own way you derive remarkable advantages. For every quarter you subscribe a lad at the front will receive 50 good Canadian Cigarettes, one-fifth of a pound of Canadian manufactured Tobacco, a packet of matches and a postcard on which he may thank the donor. This parcel, if bought in a shop and posted in the ordinary way would cost nearly a dollar. So you obtain four times the value of your quarter by sending it to Canada's Tobacco Fund.

Do not delay. Send a contribution to any Post Office or any branch of one of the leading Banks. The Editor of this paper will also be pleased to receive your money on behalf of Canada's Tobacco Fund, and will acknowledge the amount through these columns.

Confirmation At St. John's Church On Friday Night

The rite of confirmation, which was to have been administered at St. John's Church on Monday last, will be administered on Friday, May 12th at 8 o'clock by the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeney, Bishop of Toronto. Owing to a misunderstanding as to dates between His Lordship and Rev. Canon Davidson, the former didn't get here on Monday.

Creatores Band Is Scoring Heavily In Montreal Concerts

Speaking of the concerts by Creatore's Band in Montreal, the Montreal Mail says:

There were quite a few smiles passed around the Arena when the Creatore Band began their festival of patriotic and military music on Monday night. Signor Creatore has a way with him. He seems to follow every single note that is played by each individual member of his orchestra, and to pounce upon that member individually and collectively just before that note is played with an extraordinary mixture of threat and curse and appeal all expressed with the wave of a little wand. The method is merely amusing—until it is understood. Then it becomes fascinating. The result of Signor Creatore's methods is fascinating all the time. In technique, in clarity of expression, in sheer cleverness, his band has rarely been equalled in Montreal.

The evening began with Ganne's March from Lorraine, which was very good. But it was merely an introduction.

The evening really began with the Overture from Zampa: crescendo and diminuendo, diminuendo and crescendo, great crashes of chords and the most exquisite little whispers of sound it is possible to imagine; passages that roared and swept up to the very roof, and other passages that were like the faint passing of a breeze; all treading swiftly on each other's heels, and finally culminating in a glorious finish that left the audience spellbound. And then, as an encore, there rose the stately chords of Rule Britannia."

A Striking Contrast.

Rubenstein's Melody in F came next: played with rare delicacy, and yet with a sombre grandeur that can scarcely be conveyed in mere words. Many must have contrasted it with the tempestuous fury of Zampa. And then Tschaikowsky's Italian Caprice, in which once more the audience were thrust into the depths and dragged to the very heights of sound, until the item finished with some extraordinary difficult passages. One false note by any one of those forty-five instruments would have spoiled everything. But that false note never came.

The waltz, Tres Jolies, was another dainty piece of work, and so was the Berceuse from Jocelyn, which was beautifully executed throughout, the notes following each other with exquisite clearness. As an encore to that item, the band suddenly burst into the strains of the Marsellaise, playing that inspired melody as Montreal has rarely heard it.

Miss Beatrice Fraser then gave two charming little songs, which showed her rich contralto to advantage, and the evening was brought to a close by a tremendous rendering of the Third Act of Ponchielli's Gioconda. It was a veritable triumph, because it gave Signor Creatore the best chance he had had to show the mettle of his work.

NEW CAMP SITE FOR ONTARIO TROOPS.—The black square on the map shows the location of the new military camp site which will accommodate thirty thousand troops of the 2nd Military District of Ontario. The other marks are proposed sites. The camp will provide miles of territory for sham fights and manoeuvres.

The batteries were as follows:—

For Queen Mary—Baraclough and Hamilton.

NO FURTHER ACTION IN MR. BARTLETT'S CLAIM

Mr. Fred Bartlett's claim of $1,294.17 against the Board of Education in connection with his work as architect on the King George and Queen Mary schools was again considered by the Board at its meeting last night. A communication from the Board's solicitor, Mr. E. A. Peck, reviewed the conditions of the contract and as a result of his report Mr. Eastwood moved, seconded by Mr. Deane, that the secretary write Mr. D. O'Connel advising him that the Board has not changed its view in the matter, and that no further action be taken. The Board has already made an offer to Mr. Bartlett, which was practically for the same amount as Mr. Peck mentioned as probably due Mr. Bartlett.

Ford

A Ford car bought part by part costs only $40 more than the list price of the complete car as against $940 more for the parts of the average car priced around $1000 and less $940—Cost, over and above the list price of the car itself, for enough spare parts to build the average touring car priced around $1000 and less.

$ 40—Cost, over and above the list price of the car itself, for enough spare parts to build a Ford touring car complete.

$900—Difference in part by part cost of cars.

And remember, both by laboratory tests and actual service tests, the parts of a Ford car have proved themselves superior, part by part, to those of any other car.

Don't these figures drive home what is meant by the low upkeep cost of the Ford?

PETERBORO' GIRL, A CANDIDATE SELECTED BY LILLIAN RUSSELL

As One of a Hundred Who Will Enter the Final Elimination—Eleven Successful Ones Now to Be Decided

The Beauty and Brains Contest, a nation-wide enterprise, which, under the guidance of the World-equitable Motion Picture Corporation has been running for the past eight months in the Photoplay Magazine is drawing to a close, Lillian Russell, one of the judges, has made the first selection.

Miss Alice O'Neil of Peterborough, Ont., one of the original candidates, was selected by Miss Russell and is one of the hundred who will enter the final elimination. The elimination is now going forward to select the eleven successful candidates.

Miss Alice O'Neil, when the contest originated, was prevailed upon to send her photograph with the result that when the eight thousand likenesses were gone over she was selected as one of the hundred most likely film subjects by Lillian Russell. The contest called for an equal amount of brain and beauty. It was essential for the candidate to write a letter in reasons for desiring to become a film actress. The applicants, or candidates were then grouped as to the section of the country in which they lived and two candidates from five different sections will be finally chosen. Lillian Russell, Sophie Irene Loeb, a noted New York society writer, William A. Brady, the famous theatrical manager, are the judges. There will be ten winning candidates from the United States and one from Canada. The eleven successful young ladies will be taken to New York, a month will be devoted to teaching them the value of various dramatic angles, and then those who show proper interest and sufficient ability, will become permanent members of the World and Equitable stock companies, and at goodly salaries appear in films.

Lectures, theatre parties, studio lessons and a number of events are carded for the successful candidates and it is very likely that Miss Alice O'Neil will be one of the successful entrants.

The winning candidates will be announced throughout the country early in June.

WAR NEWS CONTINUED

A prearranged signal indicated at 1 p.m. that General Townshend's last message had gone through.

On the same day the Turkish General, Khalil Bey Pasha, received the British Parliamentaires. He said he was anxious that the garrison be well rationed, and that General Townshend, for whom he expressed profound admiration, should receive every comfort after the privations he had endured so gallantly.

NO REPRISALS AGAINST CIVILIANS.

The ships and barges laden with food and stores which were admitted to Kut have now taken back 777 sick and wounded to be exchanged. It is expected that 700 more will follow.

Khalil Pasha said that he did not contemplate any reprisals against the civilians in Kut.

General Townshend is believed to be proceeding direct to Constantinople.

Kut was held to the very verge of starvation. From April 16 the garrison was reduced to four ounces of flour daily with a ration of horse flesh.

FEAR AMMUNITION SHORTAGE.

During the first month of the siege the garrison was only afraid of a shortage of ammunition before relief should come, which was reckoned as a certainty.

As soon as we advanced from Ali-Gharbi in January the Turks relaxed their hold on Townshend, but the check at Oran made the question of supplies serious.

The civilians remained in Kut, as the Turks showed that they would execute any who escaped. Thus the garrison was burdened with 6,000 extra mouths.

On January 24 hidden stores of grain were discovered which afforded three months' supplies and reduced the number of Arabs who were receiving army rations.

The story of the siege shows that the heroism displayed by the garrison was worthy of the most glorious traditions of the British army.

RECENTLY DUG DITCH END OF CHARLOTTE ST. BREAKS SPRING

Automobilists report a ditch across the road at the corner of Charlotte Street and Monaghan Road that broke a pair of springs on one big car last night, and is likely to cause other damage unless it is filled in. Drivers say they cannot avoid it and any car driven over it at a fair speed is bound to get a bad shaking up.

Another car owner alleges that some citizens have a thoughtless and pernicious practice of throwing refuse on the roads, that damages tires that cost real money and says there may be some mean way of preventing both these conditions, and, if so, something should be done to prevent further trouble from these sources.

Special G.T.R. Yard Engine Used Here

A new engine has been received from Montreal for use in the local G.T.R. yards. It is of the standard type for this service and built especially for yard work. A principal feature is the absence of a tender and the fact that the engine has only one truck of three wheels on each side. It travels lightly, takes bends easily and at the same time, is powerful enough for yard work.

Motorman Eason Sustained Broken Leg In Collision

Eason Stuck to Post.

Mr. Eason held firmly to the handles of the controller and brake equipment. Evidently he retained a complete presence of mind. He had sanded the rails, cut off the power and had done all in his power to avert the collision or to decrease the impetus of his car.

The heavy controller box was thrown to one side. It fell across Eason's right leg, fracturing it below the knee. Had it fallen across his body his injuries might have been very serious. In fact it is a wonder he came through the affair with only a broken bone. He was rescued from the debris of his vestibule, quite conscious, and hurried to the Nicholl-Hospital, where Dr. Scott is attending him.

Two Passengers.

As far as could be learned there were only two passengers in the car, Mrs. Thos. Lane, Hunter street, who sustained a bruised shoulder, and Mrs. Archie Barbeau, 112 Aylmer street, who had one knee bruised. Both these passengers were thrown from their seats and shaken up somewhat, but neither received more than a few minor bruises. Mrs. Lane, thrown forward, struck a shoulder against the seat in front.

Mr. Fred Roseborough was conductor of the car. He could not explain how the accident had happened, it occurred so suddenly.

Motorman George Eason has been one of the Street Railway Company's most careful employees. Mr. J. H. Ferguson, superintendent, remarked that he was probably the most careful motorman in the service. There was general regret among the employees concerning his injury, and it was accepted that he had done all in his power to avoid the collision.

BEYOND ITS JURISDICTION

Ontario Legislators Discuss Bilingual Problem

TORONTO, Ont., May 10—"The Dominion Parliament is going beyond its jurisdiction in attempting to advise the Government of Ontario what methods it shall make use of in handling the educational question," was the pithy reply of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, following a two-hour meeting of the provincial Cabinet this forenoon, at which, it is understood the Bilingual question was discussed indirectly, particularly in regard to the latest development in the House of Commons, at Ottawa.

Hon. Mr. Lucas said: "It is a nasty situation. That is all I will say about it."

None of the ministry would discuss the LaPointe resolution introduced in the House of Commons yesterday. An evidence of the tenseness of the situation was the large number of long-distance calls between Ottawa and Queen's Park, Toronto, to-day principally by members of the Dominion House who expect to speak on the question.

Board of Education Proposes Alterations To South Central School At Outlay of $12,882

Mr. V. Eastwood and Mr. G. N. Gordon Opposed to "Patchwork Job" Which They Assert Will Not Provide an Adequate School For That District—Opinions Expressed Last Night.

WILL ASK COUNCIL FOR MONEY

The Board of Education, at a special meeting last night, decided to proceed with recommended improvements to the South Central school at an estimated outlay of 12,882.00, but not until the committee composed of Messrs. Ackerman, Denne, Eastwood, Hill, Crane and Gordon have discussed with the City Council the proposed expenditure. This motion was presented by Dr. Burnham and seconded by Mr. Crane, but was opposed by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Eastwood who respectively moved and seconded an amendment that the present expenditure be confined to $850, the estimated cost of replacing with new ones the furnaces now in use.

It has already been intimated that the Board is deeply impressed with the weight of the problem of the South Central School, are possessed of the advantages of its location and of the importance of providing in this section of modern school. But there is a marked divergence of opinion as to the extent of the work which should be carried out under the existing conditions of the financial and labour markets.

Mr. Eastwood's Idea

Mr. V. Eastwood stated that even with the expenditure of $12,882.00 the school would be only equal to the worst in the city. And how long would it last, for from five to fifteen years. He would not urge the large expenditure of money unless full value was to be received from it. It was necessary that ratepayers in that district must be fully satisfied, and it should be remembered that the best interests of the children should be mainly considered. The future citizens were the best assets we have. Mr. Eastwood felt that only minor improvements should be made now and that in the meantime the Board should be preparing to build a large school and obtain for it the entire block of which the present site is a part.

Opinion of Mr. Ackerman.

Mr. Ackerman felt that the estimate of the proposed improvements was an outside figure. The school could be put into a condition that would accommodate the children for the next fifteen or twenty-five years, at least the younger children. It was altogether likely that another school would be needed somewhere near the western boundary and it would not be too distant for the older children.

If it would be necessary to pull down the South Central school within the next year it would simply mean that the city would have two schools to build.

Mr. Hill Agrees with Mr. Ackerman

Mr. Hill supported the proposed alterations. The problem of the South Central was practically identical with that which the Board had handled with the Central school in 1911. At that time $11,000 had been spent in extensive alterations and the school was now in a satisfactory condition. He was of the opinion that $15,000 would put the South Central in first-class condition. In the meantime the Board could look out for ground near the south west boundary of the city. Mr. Hill remembered four or five epidemics at the South Central and felt that it required considerable alterations.

Mr. Crane Likewise.

Mr. Crane observed that the ventilation of the South Central could scarcely be worse. He agreed with Mr. Ackerman and Mr. Hill.

Dr. Burnham manifested his idea by the motion already referred to and Mr. Gordon followed with his amendment. Mr. Gordon had grave doubts about a patched roofery satisfying the people in that district. He cited the high price of money material and labour in cautioning against any present extensive changes to the building. The furnaces should be immediately replaced and the building would then meet the requirements for the next few years. The Board could then go into the question of reconstructing the school and make it entirely satisfactory to the ratepayers. Mr. Gordon questioned the advisability of a patchwork policy. Besides he added the present financial demands were rather severe on many people particularly those living in the South Central school district.

Mr. Denne reminded Mr. Gordon that a ventilating system was necessary and that the plumbing had caused considerable trouble.

Opinions About Divided.

Mr. Mowat Public School inspector preferred not to make a statement as to his opinion. He had interviewed local and outside builders and contractors and their views were about evenly divided. Some asserted that the building was too valuable to raze and others that it was not worth the expenditure of a cent. There were two hundred boys there and the lavatory could accommodate only forty. Mr. Mowat mentioned the growing need of facilities for manual training and domestic science classes.

Mr. Eastwood Wants Modern Facilities.

Speaking a second time Mr. Eastwood declared that Mr. Mowat had touched upon the question that was of vital importance to this city's increased facilities for manual training and domestic science. If $12,000 were spent on the school it would not be materially improved. A good deal of money would be spent, but the school would not be modern and the people would not be provided with that to which they were fairly entitled. The dividing of the children of a family between two schools would not work out. The cost of maintaining the renovated school would be extreme as compared with a modern school. The heating units could not be distributed to advantage. The building would have to be remodeled to secure that condition. The Board, he concluded, should be prepared to take hold of the question in a strong and broad manner. He could not see that there was to be any material gain in the expenditure of $15,000 on a patched up job.

Mr. Crane—If we spend $850 where would we be then?

Mr. Eastwood—We could get busy and prepare for a new building.

Mr. Gordon—After the war money will likely be cheap.

Mr. Crane—Financiers say that it will be dearer.

Mr. Eastwood—They are divided in their opinions and the majority say that money will be cheaper and labour plentiful.

Mr. Gordon—The last school debentures sold at 6 per cent.

Mr. Crane—They may be 8 per cent. after the war.

Col. Miller failed to see that anything satisfactory could be accomplished by expending $850. He supported the motion.

Architect's Estimates.

The plans for the alterations to the school have been outlined by Mr Blackwell who has presented the following details of his estimate:—

Excavation of new basement under centre part of building, 533 cu. yds. at 60c. $320.00.

Concrete walls for same, 80 cu. yds. at $5, $400.00

Concrete floors throughout the entire basement, 5600 sq. ft. flat, 9c $500.00

Plastering ceiling for same, $112.00.

Proposed new east entrance, $300.00

Raising floors of centre part of building to bring all floors throughout the building to same level. This will include I.B's in place of present wood trusses; new maple floors in the four rooms; new metal ceiling in both ground floor rooms; changing stairs, doors, blackboards, etc., complete, 2,000.00—Total, $3,632.00

Painting all brick work and wood work on outside of entire building 2 coats of paint; also painting all wood work, walls and ceilings inside, one coat, $1,000.00

Steam heating building throughout using two Kewance fire box boilers including bricking, $4070.00

Ventilation, including indirect radiation, fans, electric motor and galv iron air ducts complete, $1180.00

Plumbing to include 10 separate W.C.'s in Girl's basement; 9 in boys' basement with 10 urinal stalls; 3 sinks in basement, two to have drinking fountains, also 2 basins.

On ground floor and second floor there will be four sinks with drinking fountain attached to same also four drinking fountains.

In small room on second floor of north wing to be used as a teachers' room to have W.C. and basin. In basement 6 bell traps in floors to drain same all complete, including sewer pipes, etc, $2800.00

Wiring, $2200.00

Total $12882.00

The foregoing estimate has been carefully prepared and if the improvements are made it will make a modern school, superior to either the Central or the old Collegiate Institute.

If the Board decide to repair the present furnaces, or replace them with hot air furnaces:—

To repair the present furnace an approximate price can only be given; the furnaces being continually in use a thorough examination cannot be made without removing part of the brick work, cost, say $300.00.

To replace the old furnace with five new ones, 3 with a capacity of 60,000 cu. feet, and 2 of 35,000 cu. ft. will cost complete, set up, flues, etc., $850.00

INFLUENCE OF WOMEN

"Women are a wonderful influence in the lives of most great men," says the Washington Post, and upon women rests the responsibility for family health. To her they look for help in times of sickness, and the attention of every wife and mother in this vicinity is called to the rare combination of the three oldest tonics known, which Druggists McDermid & Jury and E. L. Payne guarantee in Vinol,—iron for the blood, beef peptone for strength, and the body-builders and feeble old people to try Vivers. It will pay over-worked, weak, run-down people, delicate children and feble old people to try it.

Meringues should have long, slow cooking if they are not to fall.

Sauces and salad dressings can always be made in the morning.

Minced nasturtium leaves sprinkled over the omelet will give it a spicy flavour.

A good way to keep the cellar or dairy from having an unpleasant odor is to whitewash the walls with lime that contains carbolic acid. One ounce of carbolic acid to a gallon of whitewash is the proper proportion.

AN HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MURRAY ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

To-day is its 70th Anniversary and Following Review by Mr. H. Webber Will Be of Interest to the General Public — Rev. John Gilmour Was the Pioneer Baptist Minister in This District Eighty Years Ago.

On the 10th of May, 1846, was organized the first Baptist Church in Peterborough. As Murray Street Church is celebrating the seventieth anniversary of that event the following brief history, as presented by Mr. H. Webber at the men's prayer meeting last Sunday morning, may be of interest:

"I have been asked to give the seventy years' history of our church in three minutes. I mention this because there must necessarily be many things left unsaid or barely mentioned that one would like to dwell upon on an occasion such as this. Two thoughts impressed me in preparing these few statements—1st, That God's guiding hand has certainly been with this church from the very beginning; and, 2nd, That the name of the Rev. John Gilmour should ever be revered by this people. For the history of this church cannot well be written, without giving some of the life history of Rev. John Gilmour.

In 1837 Mr. Gilmour was appointed supervisor of the Indians of Rice Lake and Chemong Districts, and at that time there were no Baptists in this section, north of Rice Lake. But Mr. Gilmour began preaching in different places, as opportunity offered, with such good results, that in the year 1845 there were enough Baptists in and around Peterborough to undertake the building of a church. Mr. Gilmour presented a lot on Aylmer street between Hunter and Simcoe streets, and they built a neat brick church costing about $2,100.00, it being opened early in May, 1846. Besides giving the lot which at £50 ($200), Mr. Gilmour also contributed £70 ($400) to the Building Fund. The Baptists themselves raised a little over $1,400.00, and their friends of the other denominations contributed about $700.00. Peterborough at that time had a population of 2,000, with six other churches. So we see that as far back as 70 years ago, the citizens of Peterborough gave liberally to worthy objects; that they have so continued is evident by the number of beautiful churches and schools in our city to-day. The church had a membership of about 20; and the first trustees to be appointed were Rev. John Gilmour, John Walter Gilmour, John Walton, William Nicholls, and James Edwards. In looking over the subscription list we find several other familiar names, such as Graham, Mann, Gillespie, McDonald, Rutherford, Mowry, McKee. And as it is the members of a church that make its history, I will give a short list of some of those who in the early days of this church worked faithfully and helped to make it what it is to-day. I give this entirely from memory, and it must therefore be incomplete, but this is as I remember the families in the old Aylmer St. Church: Benj. Matthews, Wm. Aldridge, Jas. Stratton, Curtis, Croly, Elcome, Scott, Garbutt, Montgomery, Yelland, Branch, McNaughton, Eastwood, Routley, Chalmers, Hutchinson, Alexander, Lacey, Matthews, Donnelly, Davidson, Duncan, Babb, Hill.

During the year 1865 we purchased the church on Murray St. from the Bible Christians, they having united with the Methodists at that time.

We worshipped in this building until May 26th, 1913, when we opened this our new church, having the Rev. Joseph Gilmour, D.D., a grandson of the first pastor, to dedicate the church. During the Rev. Mr. Trotter's pastorate, several of our members started a Sunday School in the south end of the city, with such success that a church was organized and the Park St. Baptist Church built. They have also outgrown their first church, and some years ago they built a splendid new church and are now doing a good work under the leadership of the Rev. Dougal Brown.

The following is a list of the different pastors who have ministered unto us through all these years, Revs. John Gilmour, Edw. Roberts, T. Stock, T. Deyell, C. Carroll, D. Muthern, E. J. Stobo, Sr., W. H. Walker, A. H. Munro, P. C. Parker, John Trotter, A. T. Dykeman, Jonathan Bastow, F. J. Scott and J. R. Webb.

Now while we owe so much to the Rev. John Gilmour, for his excellent work in the beginning of our history, yet you will all agree, that we are even more indebted to our present pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, in that it has been mainly through his untiring efforts and good management that we are here this morning in the beautiful and commodious church and Sunday School; with a church membership of 536 and every department of our church work in such splendid working order. Let us therefore thank God, with grateful hearts, for his goodness to us as a church in times past, and earnestly pray for His continued guidance, knowing that if we but do His will in all things that there are even greater blessings in store for us in the future.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF THE BOARD OF HEALTH

Board Object to Being Charged Excessive Prices for Produce Supplied to the Queen Mary Hospital—Construction of New Sewers Approved by the Board.

Merchants who persist in charging excessive prices for produce sold to the Queen Mary Hospital will be cut off the patronage committee. One account that was presented at a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday, quoted thirty-six cents a pound for butter.

"Is there no rule to go by" enquired Mr. G. H. Duncan, chairman of the Board. "When I am overcharged said Dr. Amys, medical officer of health, I cease dealing with that particular store.

"That's the way I do with the doctors" put in Mayor Duffus.

The Board will authorise the construction of a sewer on Dublin street from Downie street to a point one hundred and ten feet east.

"Encourage them to be sanitary," remarked Dr. Amys when the matter was being voted on.

"If I was a woman I would get a divorce from a man who wouldn't connect with the sewer" said Dr. Amys This remark was made for the benefit of a man who appeared before the Board with the statement that he was unable to pay the cost of putting in the connection. The Board will look into the matter.

SEWER IS WANTED.

Sanitary Inspector Spence reported that there was water in the cellars of some of the houses on the north side of Parnell street. Some of them had as much as three feet of water in them. Nothing can be done until the sewer is laid.

A division of the creek on Euclid Avenue is asked for by the residents. At present there is a deep hole in the bed of the creek which becomes stagnant in summer causing bad odours. The matter will be referred to the Board of Works with a request for immediate action.

Water flows from a spring at the rear of number 577 Bethune street and takes a course along the rear of number 575, 573 and 571 Bethune street where it lodges and becomes stagnant. Nothing can be done as the matter concerns private property.

The Board will recommend the construction of a sewer on Smith street from Stewart to Reid streets. This is a very insanitary section and an effort will be made to have the difficulty remedied as soon as possible.

Board of Education Pays 50c. A Ton More For This Year's Coal

Robert Hicks & Co. Tender, the Lowest, Was Accepted Last Night —Price Means Total Increase of $300 for Next Winters's Supply

Industrial and kindred conditions entangling the U. S. coal market this year are largely responsible for the advance of fifty cents a ton the Board of Education must pay for its supply of six hundred tons. At last night's meeting tenders were received for Youghioghenny coal as follows: Scott and Hogg, $5.60 per ton; Weir and McCarthy, $5.55; R. Hicks, $5.50; J. E. A. Fitzgerald, $5.55; H. B. Taylor and Sons, $5.55. Mr. Crane moved, seconded by Mr. Hill, that the tender of Mr. R. Hicks be accepted at car weights.

Mr. Eastwood recalled that the Board paid $5.00 a ton last year.

This advance of fifty cents a ton would mean a total of $300.00 on the year's order of six hundred tons.

SHE GAINED 38 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont. writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was in fact, a confirmed invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 38 pounds in weight.

FISHING OPENS IN ALGONQUIN PARK

A telegram received at Grand Trunk Headquarters from Mr. G. W. Bartlett, Superintendent of the Algonquin Provincial Park of Ontario, announces that all the ice is out of the lakes in the Park and fishing has begun. To the excellence of the sport to be enjoyed in the Park there is undisputed testimony. Fish caught in the waters of the Park have won each year many of the national competitions open to the anglers of the continent. Excellent hotel accommodation is available. "The Highland Inn," owned and operated by the Grand Trunk opened on May 1st. Algonquin Park is easily reached via the Grand Trunk, being about 200 miles North of Toronto, and 180 miles West of Ottawa. For further information apply to Local Agent, or C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

Thin Folks Who Want to Get Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every emaciated thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Most thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are, when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, much of the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can probably best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a careful combination of six splendid assimilative agents. Taken with meals they mix with the food to turn the sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe, nourishment for the tissues and blood, and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by all druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

SEVERAL SEEK TO RULE ALBANIA

PARIS, May 10.—A Havas despatch from Athens says that several pretenders to the throne of Albania are conducting active propaganda. They are said to include Prince Cyrille of Bulgaria, Prince William of Wied, former ruler of the country, who has the support of Austrians; Assif Pacha, who is supported by part of the Albanians, and the Young Turk Bursi Bey, who contends that a Turk should be selected as the Albanian sovereign.

It was reported several weeks ago that Prince William of Wied, who fled from Albania in 1914 after a short reign, again had been proclaimed ruler of the country.

MOTHER'S DAY

This year, as never before, our thoughts turn to Motherhood and what it means.

It has always meant self-sarifice, an affection that endures even under neglect and indifference, a protective instinct that would follow the child beyond the home, through manhood and womanhood, to the end of life itself, if possible.

This year Motherhood means all these things in a greater degree than ever before, and a common bond to unting the mothers of the world.

This bond of union is the terrible anxiety and grief which is the portion of the mothers of the belligerent nations, and which is shared in sympathy by the mothers of those nations whose sons are not yet called to war.

Therefore, in honouring individual mothers at this time let our thoughts go out to the motherhood of the world and let us remember daily in our prayers these millions of brave mothers and their gallant sons.

NATURE CAN'T DO IT ALL

WHILE poor health affects every part of the body, and restored vigor does all it can to strengthen the weak spots, sometimes the effect of sickness or a run down condition will leave the eyes weakened so greatly that nature is unable to restore them. Teacher Held On Treason Charge

BOSTON, Mass., May 10.—In view of the interest that has been demonstrated in the fate of Miss Alice Masaryk, an Austrian school teacher, reported under arrest in Vienna, on a charge of treason, Professor Hugo Munsterburg, of Harvard University, made public the following message received by the Austrian Embassy from the home office:

"Preliminary trial against Miss Alice Masaryk is pending. All rumours without foundation."

Professor Munsterburg added that, according to the procedure of the Austrian courts, a preliminary trial has only the character of an investigation. "Hence," he said, "it may be that the offence of which she is suspected is not of a specially serious nature."

Miss Masaryk, according to Professor Munsterburg, has recently been promoted to a higher teaching position.

Miss Masaryk is the daughter of a one-time professor at Prague University, who fled to Switzerland to further the cause of Bohemian independence. After her father's flight she was taken into custody, together with the wife of Professor Benes, also of Prague University, another alleged advocate of the separation of Bohemia from Austria.

Professor Munsterburg's advices were given out through Mrs. Glendower Evans, of the Massachusetts branch of the Woman's Peace Party, which has interested itself in Miss Masaryk's case.

ENGLISH CHANNEL WARNING ISSUED

BALTIMORE, Md., May 10. — The newest "safety first" rule at sea for vessels carrying cargo to England is to keep from the English Channel Sweepers, torpedo boat, destroyers and patrol cruisers having failed to insure merchant vessels and appreciable amount of safety because of the numerous German submarines, the British admiralty has issued instructions for unarmed vessels to keep away until the channel is cleared.

Masters of steamships now leaving Baltimore or other ports in this country for Liverpool or London are therefore instructed to lay a course to the north of England and make Kirkwall, Scotland, the first port of call. This necessitates a journey of from 500 to 700 miles longer than the usual course. At Kirkwall the captains are told in which direction they can proceed with the least danger.

Captain P. Mets, of the Dutch steamship Oosterdyke, is the first captain to reach here to tell of the change in the Atlantic courses. He said he was detained at Kirkwall on the trip across to this country for six days while his papers were sent to London for examination.

CHAPLAIN SERVICE FOR CANADIANS IS NOW COMPLETE

LONDON, May 10.—The Canadian Chaplain service is now completely systematized and every denomination under Col. Stace ocdoihusoidl uidlu fairly and adequately provided for under Col Steacy, whom Sir Sam Hughes raised to the full rank during his recent visit to England. From a few scattered chaplains at the outset it now co-ordinates in one depot a little army overseas of about 150 Canadian chaplains, even the Salvation army and the Jews being represented.

Mons. Burke, who so zealously looks after the interest of the Roman Catholics, gives me this disposition of chaplains of his church and says that although irresponsibles may from time to time raise questions of inadequate service I can assure Canada through your columns that no Catholic, whether at the front or in England, who wants the services of the priest need be for a moment without them. The Army regulations afford three priests per division, one per brigade and where three battalions of a brigade are preponderatingly Catholic, or whatever denomination it may be, one extra chaplain is afforded.

DISPOSITION OF PRIESTS

"We have three divisions at the front now, said Mons. Burke, "and our Catholic chaplains are disposed as follows: 1st Division, 1st Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father Workman (Montreal); 2nd Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father Madden (R.C.); 3rd Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father Killoran, (Montreal); 2nd Division, 4th Infantry Brigade, the Rev. W. McGillivray, (Antigonish); 8th Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father L. Doyen (St. Hyacinthe, (P.Q.); 6th Infantry Brigade the Rev. Father Thornten, (Halifax); 3rd Division, 7th Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father McCarthy, (London); 8th Infantry Brigade, the Rev. Father Knox, (H.C.); 9th Infantry Brigade, the Rev Father Tompkins, (Antigonish); extra with the Cavalry, the Rev. Father Fortier, D.M.J., (Quebec).

"Besides, we have the Rev. Father Desjardins (Quebec), at the No. 1 Casualty Clearing, and at the base hospitals No. 1, Etaples, the Rev. Father Doe (London); No. 2 Outreau, the Rev. Father Jolicoeur, (Quebec); No. 4, the Rev. Father Guay, (Quebec) and the Rev. Father Gouverau to go over to France with the Laval unit, which is now at Shorncliffe.

PRIESTS IN ENGLAND.

"In England, at Bramshott Camp, we have the Rev. Fathers French (Pembroke), McQuillan (Halifax), and Letang (Pembroke); at Shorncliffe camp the Rev. Fathers Sylvestro (Montreal), Lockary (St. John). De Lataille (a French Jesuit), Labonte (Winnipeg), and Mgr. Burke takes the Military Mass at the Folkestone Church himself Sundays generally.

"In the English hospitals are the Rev. Fathers O'Leary (Quebec) at Bramshott, O'Gorman (Ottawa) at Clivedon and Carleton (Ottawa) at Epsom. In the hospitals of the East, Fathers McPherson (Antigonish) and Lizotte (Quebec) are doing service.

"This makes twenty-eight priests in all, and to anybody who understands the army regulation and this country it will appear at a glance that no single Catholic soul is suffering for spiritual assistance. There are quite a number of battalions landing these days or soon to land, and many of them will have need of priests and chaplains, but I have already heard of a number coming to attend them, and if we have not enough most assuredly they shall be asked for as promptly as required.

NO DISCRIMINATION

"Let everybody repeat then," Monsignor Burke concluded, "what has been said more than once already, that Catholics are being discriminated against in this regard, and let no Christian parent fear to give his son to the defence of the Empire because in the moment of greatest necessity he may not have the succor of his clergy. Our priests are doing splendidly; indeed all the chaplains of whatsoever denomination are zealously devoting themselves to the troops—and the troops, let me add, are showing consistent and unanimated to the deeds and make Canada's name glorious among combatants by the constant presence of their inferior chaplains.

"We would all like to be back to the agreeable work of building up our great and peaceful Canada, but since these sacrifices are essential as the very life and freedom of our people and country we could only maintain our self-respect and find happiness in doing our very best to stem the new Hun invasion of the whole civilized world with all its scientific and barbaric horror. God willing, he shall be repelled and utterly cast out."

Rations of the German Soldiers Reported Reduced

LONDON, May 10.—A Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the police of Berlin searched the shops and dwellings of the butchers to-day for hidden stocks of meat. The result showed that the supply of meat in Berlin is sufficient for only a few days For this reason the food question overshadows all others.

All the butcher shops, including Wertheim's large meat market, have been closed. The best quality of meat now costs fourteen marks per kilo (9.20 pounds).

The Danish newspaper Ribestiffs Tidende claims to have discovered, by a month's investigation, that the belief prevails in Germany that it is impossible to continue the war to the end of 1916. Many in Germany believe that it cannot be maintained through the summer.

"The rations of the German soldiers," the paper says, "were cut six weeks ago. Meat is becoming rare, bread is limited to 12 ounces daily, and food parcels from the soldiers' homes are now forbidden lest the civilians themselves suffer.

"Desertions are numerous, and they include officers. Socialism is spreading amazingly among the troops. Slackness of discipline is evident, resulting from the extremly harsh treatment.

"The shortage of horses necessitated the reducing of gun teams.

"Ammunition and arms, however, continue to be produced in incredible quantities."

While numerous German papers, copies of which have just reached here, are harping upon the food troubles, The Koelnische Zeitung of May 7 asserts that "Germany is able to continue the war indefinitely notwithstanding the inconveniences."

Incidentally the paper announces the discovery of a process for making a certain quality of steel for munitions, for which woltram, imported at great cost, has been necessary.

All the Berlin papers give a prominent place to long accounts of the disturbances over the shortage of food, especially to riots occurring before butcher shops, where the police were frequently forced to interfere to protect the lives of the owners.

WOMEN SEEK WORK AS MUNITION INSPECTORS

Complaint having been repeatedly made at Ottawa that there are men acting as munition inspectors who should be in khaki and their positions filled by returned soldiers or women, the Imperial Munitions Board has ordered an inquiry to determine what basis there is for the criticism. There are about 1,500 munitions inspectors in Ontario. They are paid not less than $3 per day. It is not denied that quite a few of these inspectors have been rejected as unfit for military service. The authorities in the past few months have been demanding the production of such a certificate and as a result quite a few returned soldiers have been taken on the staff. The appointment of some women may now be expected.

Understandingly fed and humanely and regularly cared for swine pay big profits.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

RETURNED CONVICT KEPT IN HOSPITAL

SING SING, N.Y., May 10.—Peter Cullen, the prison bridegroom, who returned last night in Thomas Mott Osborne's automobile certainly drank enough the two weeks he was at liberty to last him the next five years he must serve, according to a prison guard to-day. Cullen is in the hospital, where physicians are trying to overcome the effect of acute alcoholism with which Cullen suffered when he went to Mr. Osborne at the Belmont Hotel in New York last night and asked to be sent back to Sing Sing.

Warden Kirchwey will not admit that Cullen was intoxicated when he returned to the prison, but he does say he was in "bad shape."

"Cullen was very seedy and completely exhausted," the Warden said. "He was in such condition he could not be questioned and was sent to the hospital. I will say that he was under the influence of a strong emotion and on the verge of collapse."

Mr. Osborne, formerly Warden, and who made Cullen sergeant at arms of the Mutual Welfare League because he was a model prisoner and a strict disciplinarian, arrived from New York to-day and went to the hospital to see Cullen, but the latter was in on condition to talk and Mr. Osborne spent a few minutes with other prisoners he knows.

From Cullen's condition it is believed that after escaping on April 20 and upon reaching New York he entered upon a drinking spree which ended when he appealed to Mr. Osborne to send him back to the prison.

Dr. Kirchwey said the matter of punishing Cullen for escaping was out of his hands; that he had reported the matter to the State Department of Prisons which would prescribe the penalty. The law provides that extra time must be added to the maximum time of prisoners who escape and are returned.

Patrick McNish, one of the prisoners who are said to have enjoyed cross-country automobile journeys in the swift racing vehicle of Spencer Miller secretary to Warden Kirchwey was transferred to-day to his prison farm at Beekman, Dutchess county. This is considered a reward by most prisoners, all of whom are anxious to go to the farm for the summer months. Among the fortunate long term men already sent there are "Boston Eddie" Kelly, Emil Totterman and John Cavanagh, who are serving twenty-year terms.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE ENEMY.

But Fokker Machine Was Seised, Despite Soldier's Lack of Suspicion.

A good specimen of a Fokker aeroplane is now in British hands. A strapping soldier belonging to a signal company of the Royal Engineers, was trundling along on his bicycle near the front, when he suddenly came upon the scene of the landing. He beheld an aeroplane which was clearly not of British pattern, and a well-swathed figure standing by it. The idea that it was likely to prove an enemy machine never entered the soldier's head. He frankly admits that he took it to be a French aeroplane which had been forced to alight. Having dismounted, he went up to the Boche with his hand extended and a genial smile. The German shook silently and sadly.

The soldier then moved towards the machine with the idea of investigating the trouble which had brought it to earth. It was just at this juncture a party of Fusiliers came around a bend of the road. Taking in the situation — a black cross aeroplane on the ground and what was evidently one of its occupants trying to get the engine to work again — they came on at the double, unslinging their rifles as they came.

The engineer's presence of mind seems to have gone by the board. He suspected some trick and took to his heels. The Fusiliers, concluding that he was a Boche trying to make away with papers or photographs, paused and let fly. Happily the aim was too hurried to be good. The soldier took a flying leap into the roadside ditch and awaited capture.

When he learned that he had missed the chance of making this fine capture himself singlehanded I am told his language was quite unrepeatable.

REWARD FOR DELAY.

Daughter Put Off Marriage Fourteen Years and Gets $970.

Mr. Justice Kelly has found Mrs. Lovica Silverton, of Brantford, entitled to $970 for services to her parents, as well as to her legacy under her father's will. According to her story her father did not want her to marry and leave home as all the other children had, and promised to "make her satisfied" in his will if she gave up her engagement to marry a suitor. She stayed, as a result, for fourten years after the matter was first broached to her, and then married her present husband. Her father then thought that as she had a husband to provide for her, it would be just to treat all his children equally in his will. Mrs. Silverthorn, who was 45 when she married, claims $8,000 and the homestead in the village of Scotland.

FISTS HAVE WON THE V. C.

Skill in fisticuffs has several times won the Victoria Cross. At Inkerman, for instance, Captain Hugh Rowlands saved his commanding officer, Colonel Hay, by a straight left-hander. Hay was wounded and lying on the ground, with a gigantic Russian standing over him and about to plunge a bayonet to his heart, when Rowlands, who had lost his sword, smashed the Russian with his left-hand, knocking the man unconscious Rowlands got the V.C.

At Jeerum, in India, during the Indian Mutiny, General James Blair whose sword had been broken off at the hilt and who had no other weapon, dashed into a crowd of armed mutineers and knocked five of them down with his fists in a few seconds. The Victoria Cross also went to him.

Another officer whose sword broke at the handle while in action was Admiral "Tug" Wilson, who, at El Teb, bowled over six Arabs with his fists. He not only won the V. C. but also his nickname, being called "Tug" Wilson after an English boxer who about that time had gained brief notoriety by fighting John L. Sullivan, the heavy-weight champion boxer of the world.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

He got up to go on deck. He had only turned to the companionway when the great voice of Pete Ellinwood rumbled down to him.

"Come on deck, skipper, an' look over this schooner astern of us. There's somethin' queer about her. I don't like her actions."

Code took the steps at a jump and a moment later stood beside Ellinwood. The Lass was snoring along under full sail.

The stranger, which at eight o'clock had been five miles astern, was now, at noon, less than a mile away.

Code instinctively shot a quick glance at the compass. The schooner was running dead east.

"What's this, Ellinwood?" demanded the skipper sharply. "You're away off your course."

"Yes, sir, and on purpose," replied the mate. "I've been watchin' that packet for a couple of hours back and it seemed to me she was a little bit too close on our track for comfort. 'What if she's from St. John's?' I sez to myself. 'Then there'll be the devil to pay for the skipper.'

"So, after you'd got your observation and went below I just put the wheel down a trifle. I hadn't been gone any from her five minutes when she followed. It's very plain, Code, that she's tryin' to catch us."

A sudden feeling of alarm took possession of Schofield. That she was a wonderful speed craft she had already proven by overhauling the Lass so easily. The thought immediately came to him that Nat Burns, on discovering his absence, had sent the lawyer with the summons to St. John's, hired a fast schooner, and set out in pursuit.

"Maybe it was only an accident," he said. "She may be on the course to Sable Island. Give her another trial. Come about and head for Halifax."

"Stand by to come about," bawled Ellinwood.

Two young fellows raced up the rigging, others stood by to prevent jibing, and the mate put the wheel hard alee. The schooner's head swung sharply, there was a thunder and rattle of canvas, a patter of reef points, and the great booms swung over. The wind caught the sails, the Charming Lass heeled and bore away on the new course.

The men in the stern watched the movements of the stranger anxiously. Ten minutes had hardly elapsed when she also came about and headed directly into the wake of the Lass. Schofield and Ellinwood looked at each other blankly.

"Are you goin' to run for it, skipper?" asked the mate. "I'll have the balloon jib and stays'l set in five minutes, if you say so."

Code thought for a minute.

"It's no use," he said. "They'd catch us, anyway. Let 'em come up and we'll find out what they want. Take in your top-sails. There's no use wasting time on the wrong course."

Under reduced sail the Lass slowed, and the pursuing vessel overhauled them rapidly. With a great smother of foam at her bows she ducked into the choppy sea and came like a race horse. In half an hour she was almost abreast on the port quarter. A man with a megaphone appeared on her poop deck and leveled the instrument at the little group by the wheel.

"Heave to!" he bawled. "We want to talk with ye."

"Heave to!" ordered Code, and the Charming Lass came up into the wind just as the stranger accomplished the same manoeuver. They were now less than fifty yards away and the man again leveled his megaphone.

"Is that the Charming Lass out of Freekirk Head?" he shouted.

"Yes."

"Captain Code Schofield in command?"

"Yes."

"Bound to the Banks on a fishin' cruise?"

"Yes."

"All right; that's all I wanted to know," said the man, and set down the megaphone. He gave some rapid orders to the crew, and his vessel swung around so as to catch the wind again.

Code and Ellinwood looked at one another blankly.

"Hey there!" shouted Schofield at the top of his voice. "Who are you and what do you want?" The skipper of the other schooner paid no attention whatever, and Schofield repeated his question, this time angrily.

He might as well have shouted at the wind. The stranger's head fell off, her canvas caught the breeze, and she forged ahead. A minute later, and she was out of earshot.

"Look for her name on the stern," commanded Code. He plunged below into the cabin and raced up again with his glasses. The mysterious schooner was now nearly a quarter of a mile away, but within easy range of vision.

Code fixed his gaze on her stern, where her name should be, and saw with astonishment that it had carefully been painted out. Then he swung his glasses to cover the dories nested amidships, and found that on them, too, new paint had obscured the name. He lowered the glasses helplessly.

"Do you recognize her, Pete?" he asked. "I know most of the schooners out of Freekirk Head and St. John's, but I never saw her before."

"Me neither," admitted the mate, with conviction. "I wonder what all this means?"

Code could not answer.

CHAPTER XI.
In the Fog Bank.

"Squid ho! Squid ho, tumble up, all hands!"

Rod Kent, the old salt who had for the past hour been experimenting over the side, leaned down the main cabin hatch and woke the port watch. Behind him on a deck a queer marine creature squirmed in a pool of water and sought vainly to disentangle itself from the apparatus that had caught it.

The shout brought all hands on deck stupid with sleep but eager to join in the sport.

The squid is a very small edition of the giant devilfish or octopus. It has tentacles, a tapered body about ten inches long, and is armed with the usual defensive ink-sac, by means of which it squirts a cloud of black fluid at a pursuing enemy, escaping in the general murk.

"How'd ye ketch him?" cried all hands for the advent of squid was the most welcome news the men on the Charming Lass had had since leaving home four days before. It meant that this favourite and succulent bait of the roaming cod had arrived on the Bank and that the catches would be good.

"Jigged him," replied Kent laconically. He disengaged the struggling squid from the apparatus and examined the latter carefully. It was made of a single cork, through the lower edge of which pins had been thrust and bent back like the flukes of an anchor. To it was fastened a small shred of red flannel, the whole being attached to a line with a sinker.

In five minutes Code had unearthed from an old shoe-box in his cabin enough jigs to supply all hands, and presently both rails were lined with men hauling up the baits as fast as it was lured to close proximity by the colour of the red flannel. Once the creatures had wrapped themselves around the cork a sharp jerk impaled them on the pins, and up they came.

But not without resistance. Just as they left the water they discharged their ink-sacks at their captors, and the men on the decks of the Lass were kept busy weaving their heads from side to side, to avoid the assault.

It was near evening of the second day after the mysterious schooner had hailed them and sailed away. Since that time they had forged steadily northeast, along the coast of Nova Scotia. At last they had left Cape Breton at the tip of Cape Breton Island behind them and approached the southern shores of Newfoundland and that wonderful stretch of shoals called the Grand Banks.

Southeast for three hundred miles from Newfoundland extends this under-sea flooring of rocky shelves, that run from ninety to five fathoms, being most shallow at Virgin Rocks.

In reality this is a great submarine mountain chain that is believed at one time to have belonged to the continent of North America. This outside edge of it is the welter of the shoreless Atlantic and from this edge there is a sheer drop into almost unsounded depths. These depths have got the name of the Whale Hole and many a fishing skipper has dropped his anchor into this abyss and earned the laughter of his crew when he could find no ground.

Along the jagged sides of this mountain range grow vegetable substances and small animalcules that provide excellent feeding for the vast hosts of cod that yearly swim across it. For hundreds years the cod have visited these feeding grounds and been the prey of man, yet their numbers show no falling off.

To them is due the wealth of Newfoundland, the Miquelon Islands, Nova Scotia, Labrador, and Prince Edward Island.

The first manifestation of the annual visit is the arrival of enormous schools of capelin, a little silvery fish some seven inches long that invades the bays and the open sea. Close upon them follow the cod, feeding as they come. The capelin last six weeks and disappear, to be superseded in August by the squid, of which the cod are very fond.

Up until fifty years ago mackerel were caught on the Banks, and large quantities of halibut, but the mackerel disappeared suddenly, never to return, and the halibut became constantly more rare, until at last only the cod remained.

Aboard the Charming Lass the squid "jigging" went on for a couple of hours. Then suddenly the school passed and the sport ended abruptly.

But the deck of the schooner was a mass of the bait, and the tubs of salt clams brought from Freekirk Head could be saved until later.

Rockell, who had been looking out forward, suddenly called Codes' attention to a flock of sea-pigeons floating on the water a mile ahead. As the skipper looked he saw the fowl diving and "up-ending," and he knew they had struck the edge of the Banks; for water-fowl will always dive in shoal water and a skipper sailing to the Banks from a distance always looks for this sign.

An hour later when the cook had sent out his call for the first half, Code made Ellinwood stay on deck and bring the schooner to an anchorage after sounding.

The sounding lead is a long sinker, something like a window weight, at the bottom of which is a saucer-shaped hollow. The leadsman a young fellow from Freekirk Head, took his place on the schooner's rail outside the fore-rigging. The lead was attached to a line and, as the schooner forged slowly ahead, close-hauled, the youth swung the lead in ever-widening semicircles.

"Let your pigeon fly!" cried Pete, and the lead swung far ahead and fell with a sudden plop into the dark blue water. The line ran out until it suddenly slackened just under the leadsman. He fingered the mark.

"Forty fathoms!" he called.

Five minutes later another sounding was taken and proved that the water was gradually shoaling. At thirty fathoms Pete ordered the anchor let go and a last sounding taken.

Before the lead led flew he rubbed a little tallow into the saucer, and this, when it came up, was full of sand, mud and shells, telling the sort of bottom under the schooner.

Pete called Code, and together they read it like a book—favourable fishing ground, though not the best.

While the second half ate, the first half took in all canvas and reefed it with the exception of the mainsail. This was unbent entirely and stowed away. In its place was bent on a riding sail for until their salt was all wet there would be very little occasion for any sort of sailing their only progress being as they ambled leisurely from berth to berth.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Did not Understand Their Use.—"I presume, my good fellow, you're a labourerer," said a lawyer to a plainly-dressed witness. "You are right, I am a workman, sir," replied the witness, who was a civil engineer. "Familiar with the use of the pick, shovel and spade, I presume?" "To some extent. Those are not the principal implements of my trade, though." "Perhaps you will condescend to enlighten me as to your principal implements?" "It is hardly worth while. You don't understand their nature or use." "Probably not," loftily, "but I insist on knowing what they are." "Brains."

Showing a Roof Covered with Brantford Slates in Solid Colour.

There is Safety Under This Roof

Have you ever had a fine job of decorating spoiled by a leaking roof? If you have, you certainly are in a position to appreciate the value of a roof that is positively water-proof. Some of the troubles common to wooden shingles to-day are that they are apt to split, warp or blow off as well as leak, soon after they are put on. Years ago they were good, but the quality has since gradually depreciated as the available supply of suitable timber became exhausted.

Brantford Slates have none of the faults of wooden shingles. They cannot rust. They do not allow rain to be driven under them as do metal roofs. They do not require rigid supporting as do the common tile or slate roofs. On the other hand Brantford Slates afford the utmost protection with little weight. They are made on a long-fibred felt "base" which is thoroughly saturated under pressure with asphaltum or mineral pitch. Crushed quarried slate particles are then deeply embedded in the surface of this "base", making it water-tight and fireproof.

Brantford Roofing

Brantford Slates are made in the natural slate colors of green, red, black and grey. The colors never fade and the slates do not require painting nor repairing. These slates are pliable and fit readily around gables and into the angles of any roof. This means a continuous roof without seams or joints. Sparks die on Brantford Slates. When you have these slates "on" you are done with the job. Remember they don't require painting or staining and may be selected to harmonize with almost any exterior color design, and the price is not beyond your reach. We would be pleased to send you samples and our Roofing Booklet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A New Star

By EDNA T. STEWART

From childhood I had a passion for personating some character. In other words, I was born with dramatic inclinations. When quite a little girl I read Shakespeare's plays that I found in my father's library and took pleasure in spouting the lines of the heroines. One day I would be Juliet leaning over the famous balcony; another I would be Queen Catharine; another, Rosalind.

When I was fifteen years old my father died, leaving my mother with six children to support and without the means to do so. We all had to do something to put money into the family treasury, even if it were only the very smallest amount. Very naturally I chose the stage. That is, I wished to go on the stage, but how to get there I did not know. Had I been a boy I might have gone from one theater to another till I found a position as supernumerary and from that vantage point watched for an opportunity to take small minor parts. Being a girl, I could not do this.

How I finally got on the stage doesn't pertain to this story, which deals with an opportunity to get into public favor. I am speaking of the days when real plays were enacted on the stage, before the coming on of the scenic wonders, burlesques and the like that have driven the drama away. I had been taking minor parts for several years and had been an understudy for one part. Had the actress under whom I was studying ever been sufficiently indisposed to permit me to take her place it might have enabled me to make a hit. But she never failed to appear.

A celebrated playwright wrote a play which he called "Joan of Arc." He wrote the part of Joan, expecting that Mme. G., then the most remarkable tragedienne on the stage, would impersonate the Maid of Orleans. Members of our profession when they once climb to the top round of the ladder are apt to forget the snubs they have endured when they were struggling on the lower rounds and to delight in showing their independence, or perhaps it is the memory of those very snubs that gives them a desire to exercise their own sweet will. At any rate, Mme. G. without giving any reason refused to play the part.

The author of the play was in a distressing position. He had spent many months on it; he had written it especially to display the remarkable histrionic ability of Mme. G., and there was no other actress who, so far as was known, could aspire to play it. The playwright's friends did all they could to win Mme. G. over, but with no success. She remained obdurate.

One evening I was surprised at a call from an actor who was to have appeared in "Joan of Arc" and had been greatly disappointed that the play could not be produced. Without explaining the object of his visit he asked me to read a few lines from several of the parts of Shakespeare's heroines. When I had finished he left me as abruptly as he had come. The next day he came again with the author of "Joan," and I was obliged to read the parts I had read before. They left, with me the play that had been written for Mme. G. and asked me to learn it. They came again when I had done so, and delightedly told me that they wished me to assume the principal role.

When the time for a rehearsal came round an audience of some twenty or thirty persons, mostly connected with the stage, was present. What was my surprise to see among them Mme. G. I inferred that she had come to see if, indeed, there was a person who could take her place. Her presence did wonders in spurring me to do my best. I received great applause, and Mme. G. clapped her hands languidly. This faint praise spurred me on still further, and I surpassed myself.

When the play was finished Mme. G. went to the author and said:

"I am ready to take the part of Joan."

I looked at him, wondering what he would say. A light came into his eye as he replied:

"Madame, this play was written for you, supposing that you were the only woman in existence who could take the part. Your refusal instead of being a misfortune has turned out a benefit. A new star has appeared above the horizon. You have enjoyed exclusive preeminence for a long while. From this hour you will have to divide it with another."

Mme. G. disappeared, and I, running to the author, threw my arms about his neck.

Her friends endeavored to persuade him to throw me over and give the part to Mme. G., not that she could play it any better than I, but on account of the eclat she would give his work. But he stood firm for me.

I nerved myself for the first performance, realizing that I must stand or fall by it. The story had got abroad, and the house was packed, largely by theatrical people, many of whom had suffered from Mme. G.'s selfishness. I forgot everything except that I was Joan of Arc, the Maid of Orleans, and throughout the evening received enthusiastic applause. The author's prediction was verified. I was indeed a new theatrical star. From that time my reputation began to grow, and that of Mme. G., who was getting old, began to wane.

Sydney Smith's Wit.

Sydney Smith was the ministerial wit par excellence, but unhappily his jests were so admirable that they are now twice told tales indeed. However, most of them will bear repetition.

Before the first bishop of New Zealand left England Sydney Smith strove to remind him of the dangers of his mission. "You will find in preaching to cannibals," he said, "that their attention will not be directed to the spirit, but always be concentrated on the flesh, for I am told that they never breakfast without a cold missionary on the sideboard. We shall never meet again, but let us hope that you may thoroughly disagree with the savage who eats you."

"You are afraid of me," said Smith to a young woman who sat beside him at dinner. "You crumble your bread, and that is an undeniable proof of shyness. I do it when I sit by the bishop of London and with both hands when I sit by the archbishop."

"Why are you doing that?" said he to a child who was stroking the shell of a turtle. "Oh, to please the turtle," was the answer. "Why, child, you might as well stroke the dome of St. Paul's to please the dean and chapter."

Less Drugs Used.

The scarcity and high prices of many popular drugs has caused a decrease in medicine taking, says a London chemist. "This result of the war," says a medical man, "is all for the best. People get into a habit of taking medicines to relieve some little disorder which nature would more effectually cure if they only exercised a little patience. Once the habit is formed it cannot be given up. If high prices compel people to give up their favorite medicines, the war will do real service to the health of the community.

Looking for Bombs.

The yeomen of the guard made their customary search of the vaults beneath the Palace of Westminster prior to the opening of Parliament. In view of the fire which recently destroyed the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa, the search this year was by no means the perfunctory ceremony that it has been in bygone years, and a very diligent lookout was kept for bombs.

DR. A. W. CHASE'S CATARRH POWDER 25c.

GRAVITY OVERCOME.

Objects Dropped Deviate Toward the North.

Along the southern edge of the Himalaya Mountains a curious natural phenomenon has been noticed by engineers. The plumb line which they use, instead of falling vertically and forming two right-angles with the surface of the ground, is deflected nearly five degrees to the north.

The explanation which has been advanced for this queer freak of gravity is that the deflection is due to the influence of the mountains. The amount of attraction masses exert for each other is in direct proportion to the relative weights of equally sized portions of each body, and in this case the weight of a cubic foot of the earth below the plumb line is much less than the weight of a cubic foot of rock from the mountains. It is probable that at one time all of Northern Hindustan south of the Himalayas was an immense depression, and that through the ages it has been filled up by alluvial silt washed down from the mountains. This loose silt, being under no such pressure as the billions of tons of solid rock in the mountain ranges, has a much smaller density, and accordingly a much lighter gravity "pull" than exercised by the huge mass of the Himalaya range.

It is conceivable that in this place if a person stands "erect" he really leans a little towards the south to make up for the "pull" of the northern range, while, theoretically, it is really harder for him to walk away from the mountains than towards them. Objects, of course, do not fall directly to earth, but deviate a little to the north.—John P. Caldwell, in Technical World.

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY, CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards Catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach and does little but harm digestion. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit which includes the inhaler, it lasts two months and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

MUST BE NO HATRED.

That Will Be Laid Aside With the Sword, Says English Author.

"Never again" is fool's talk, writes Jerome K. Jerome, British author. One hears it after every railway accident. After every shipwreck. After every war that has ever been waged. Europe will emerge from this war and the map, unless looked at very closely, will have much the same appearance that it had before. There may be one color for Poland instead of three. Alsace and Lorraine will have returned to France, and that one last corner still soiled by Turkish rule may, one hopes, have been cleaned out. The main features will remain. Ten years after peace is signed—every schoolboy knows it—we shall be buying from Germany, selling to Germany. In 20 years we shall be playing tennis with them and teaching them golf, and 30 years later it is quite possible they in their turn may be our allies.

This song of hate does not suit the English voice. Our soldiers make fun of it; the only manly thing to do. Hatred during wartime may be necessary to a few poor creatures incapable of fighting for love of country. But now that the end of the contest is coming into sight it will be well to get rid of it. There is, we are told, "a time to love and a time to hate; a time of war and a time of peace."

It will be well when we lay aside the sword to be prepared to lay aside our hate. It may in some quarters be considered bad taste. But in this matter I would personally rather listen to the voice of Edith Cavell than to the most strident speakers of the anti-German League. Edith Cavell did a fine thing when she laid down her life for her country. There are many who do that. Poor, feeble, evil men and women have done that. Hundreds of our nameless lads do it every day. The finest thing she did, not only for her country but for the men and women of all lands, was when she put aside all hatred, all bitterness.

"Standing as I do in view of God and eternity, I realize that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness toward any one."

Never use water from a stone reservoir for cooking purposes.

THE LIGHTHOUSE POST.

How News and Relief Are Carried to the Keepers of the Tower.

The shores of England are plentifully studded with lighthouses, not a few of which are built upon small islands, or else isolated rocks, situated more or less near to the mainland.

Stress of weather often cuts off these lonely watch-towers from the rest of the world, in order to communicate with which the lighthouse-keepers have to exercise their wits. It is then that what is known to watchful shore-dwellers as lighthouse post comes into play, by means of which communication is established through even the roughest sea.

The head lightkeeper encloses a letter, or letters, in a bottle, and fixes the bottle securely in a wooden case. A leaden keel is attached to serve as ballast, and a small tin sail is added to catch the breeze. This tiny craft is then launched upon the waves, the keepers watch it out of sight, and then go back to their lonely waiting for the relief-boat.

Skerryvore Lighthouse last year had been isolated since December 21, when, on January 10th the head lightkeeper resolved to resort to lighthouse post, and sent off one of these messages by bottle. Favorable winds carried the frail craft to the small island of Erraid, on the southwest side of Mull, which it reached on January 15th. Four days later a similar tiny boat from Erraid carried the message to Runessan, in Mull, a distance altogether of thirty miles.

Although it is near to the shore, the lighthouse at the Needles can only be approached from the sea in fine weather. So, even there, lighthouse post has sometimes been resorted to, though nowadays the coastguards, in their station on the cliff above, talk to the keepers and read them extracts from the newspapers over the telephone.

The Wolf and Smalls Lighthouses are situated on lonely rocks far out at sea, and their lighthouse post, when resorted to, is very uncertain. The Wolf Rock stands eight miles off Land's End; the Smalls light is erected on one of a group of islands twenty miles south-west of St. David's Head, in Pembrokeshire.

Wolf Rock, the most isolated station in the British Isles, is not connected with the mainland by wire; but the Smalls, which is also an important Lloyd's Signalling Station, has a submarine-cable for communications. For all that the keepers like to cheer their wives with a letter per lighthouse post when, owing to heavy weather, relief does not arrive.

Lighthouses have a crew of six men, three of whom are on duty for a month while the other three are ashore.

Lighthouse relief in rough weather is effected by means of a boat having strong booms projecting from its sides which support stout nets. In most instances the sea is too violent to allow of a landing actually upon the rock itself, and the men have to be hauled up from and lowered down into the boat by means of the hoisting tackle with which the lighthouse is provided.

The nets around the boat have saved many a keeper from being drowned in the boiling surf that beats on the lighthouse rock during the performance of this feat.

The Baseball Umpire.

"That gentleman who is to umpire the game today is an old friend of mine," said the mild mannered baseball fan to his neighbor as they sat leaning forward in the grand stand. "He's one of the squarest and finest of men. Yes, sir, he'll be nice a fel— Say, watch the graceful attitude of our first batter! He's got his eye with him today, too, for one how he lets this first had one go. What did the umpire call that?"

"A strike," replied his neighbor.

"Now, what do you think of that? Ball went a mile wide of the plate! Well, umpires will make mistakes. I've seen"—

At this juncture a crack rent the air, and the ball sailed on a line toward the left field fence. The mild mannered man was on his feet in a jiffy.

"Oh, what a swat! Run, run like the dickens! Go on and make it a homer! Look at that cuss go, will you? Make it— What's that?"

"The umpire called it a foul!"

"A foul? He's crazy! Say, Mr. Umpire, put on your glasses. A foul! Say, man, you're the limit! Throw him out! Go lay down somewhere, umpire! You're rotten! Rotten! Rotten!"

And in his disgust the mild mannered fan slapped his derby hat down on the seat and sat on it.—Bohemian.

Had Palpitation
OF THE HEART
ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel it in this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate so, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I got much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Lieut. Lempriere's Descent Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Mr. Harry Wilding, of Birmingham, an old journalist, sends us the following interesting contribution:

In looking through my Tit-Bits recently I observed the account of a great parachute descent of 10,000 ft. by Lieutenant-Colonel E. M. Maitland, and claiming it as a record performance. This distance, however, was exceeded a quarter of a century since by Lieutenant Lempriere, who for so many years took a leading part in the balloon operations in this country.

It fell to my lot, as an old journalist, to interview him on one occasion, and I have a distinct recollection that he claimed the record by a two miles descent. I have now looked up my old notes on the point and find they read thus:

"I was engaged by the Lancaster Athletic Association to make a parachute descent from their sports ground (the celebrated Giant Axe Field) on the occasion of their annual gala. For some reason which I cannot now recollect I inflated a larger balloon than I usually use for a single descent and I did not quite fill it.

"When I left the field a very thin ground-current wafted me just over the adjacent church, where I became poised for some time, and then as I mounted higher I traveled very slowly over the town and then the river, and neither the chimneys of the former nor the extensive mudbanks of the latter were sufficiently tempting as alighting spots. There was a very powerful sunshine on the balloon, which still further expanded the gas and accelerated my upward impetus.

"The balloons generally used for these purposes have no valves, so, although I had no intention of making anything but an ordinary exhibition, I was quite helpless in the matter and had to stick to the balloon until I saw a suitable landing-place. The last time I looked at my aneroid it had become useless, as it had only a 10,000 compass. I was even then still ascending, and, in addition to this, I had to discharge—before I could leave—a bag of sand which I had taken up on my lap. This, of course, gave me another jump, so that I must have been well over the two miles when I left the balloon.

"It was a cloudless sky, and the balloon could be seen the whole of the time from the field, although only those with extraordinary sight or possessed of glasses could actually see me part company with the balloon. One gentleman, who was so furnished, told me upon my return that he had watched me through the entire descent, which he timed as taking 11¼ minutes. This quite agreed with my estimated altitude, as I arranged my parachutes to bring me down at approximately 1,000 ft. per minute, and I therefore claim this as the longest authenticated parachute descent in this or any country."

Yet He Liked Fresh Air.

"My husband was at a smoker Saturday night and never got home until about 1 o'clock."

"Was that why he wasn't at church Sunday morning?"

"No; he says the ventilation is so poor in church and the atmosphere always gets so heavy that he can't keep awake."—Judge.

BOUNDARY LINE MARKS.

Those Between Hanover and Holland on the Rhine Are Unique.

Many of the international boundary marks display a sentimental as well as a practical character. The famous "Pillar of Farewell," which marks the line between Russia and Siberia, has been celebrated in song and story. This boundary mark stands between Ekaterinburg, in Russia, and Tiumen, in Siberia. It stands on the main road, along which thousands of exiles have passed. It is an obelisk of brick, sixteen feet in height. On the west side it bears in Russian characters the word "Europe," and on the east side the word "Asia."

The boundary marks along our northern frontier, separating us from Canada, are of a most practical sort. For many hundreds of miles the St. Lawrence river and the great lakes form the natural boundaries, but there is a vast stretch of prairie land beyond with no natural demarcation. The boundary marks here are pillars of iron and wood placed at intervals of one mile. They have been alternately changed by the two governments and may be seen from the Lake of the Woods to the Red river valley. Beyond that the marks are mounds of earth and cairns of stone.

The strangest of European frontier lines is that marking the boundary between Hanover and Holland, where it crosses the Rhine. A row of posts runs across the river, painted haw and stern. Inasmuch as the dividing line runs through from stem to stern, the eastern halves of the boats are painted in German colors, the western, in Dutch. The effect is most striking.

Austria has a frontier line of about 2,200 miles, of which 2,000 is land. Every mile of this must be guarded against the encroachments of Austria's neighbors. Germany in this regard is fortunate, since her land frontiers, bordering upon Russia, Austria, Switzerland, France, Holland and Belgium are 2,385 miles in extent, and by far the larger portion is not protected by mountains, rivers or any other natural boundaries. The German seacoast, however, is only 744 miles in extent.—Harper's.

Grading the Rulers.

Themistocles, it is said, declared that his son was the strongest man in Greece.

"For," said he, "the Athenians rule the Hellenes, I rule the Athenians, your mother rules me, and you rule your mother."

A Really Smart Man.

"He always says the right thing at the right time, doesn't he?"

"More than that. He always keeps still at the right time."—Brooklyn Post.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Cured

Here's the remarkable experience of a Nova Scotian:—

"I was once a terrible sufferer with kidney and bladder trouble, and at times I would lose the use of my legs, and could not go away from home without some one with me. I was treated by different doctors for 3 years, and only got temporary relief. My son advised me to take Gin Pills, and after taking the first 2 or 3 doses I got relief. I continued to take them until I got completely cured. I owe my life to Gin Pills.

Yours very truly,

Mrs. Dubois, of Imperial St., Vancouver, can verify this. Her daughter writes: "Mother had such ulcers on her feet that she was unable to walk. She had doctors' advice and treatment, but nothing did her any good, and we were beginning to think she would never be cured, when a friend advised her to try Zam-Buk. She did so, and—surprising as it sounds—after a week's treatment with Zam-Buk she was able to walk without pain. She continued applying Zam-Buk until the ulcers were completely healed, and she has not known a moment's discomfort since."

WAR PROFITS' CHEATING

An English Manufacturer's Sentence Leads to Demand For More

Alex. Thompson, writes in The Clarion (London): Benjamin Shaw, J.P., a Bradford steel pin manufacturer, chairman of the local education committee, has been sentenced to four months' imprisonment for understating his income in his income-tax return. Thus good begins, but there should be more to follow. Income-tax cheating is notoriously as common in England as dirt. A few sentences of imprisonment will give the astute swindlers cause to reconsider themselves and add enormously to the revenue. And, now that the authorities have started to treat fraud on the government seriously, they might also turn their attention with advantage to the widespread and glaring evasions of the tax on war profits which I have repeatedly mentioned, and of which I hear fresh instances almost daily. Careful scrutiny of one or two notorious cases and exemplary punishment "pour encourager les autres" would be exceedingly useful to the national finances.

Anglo-Saxon Prisoners

Many of the German prisoners taken in recent fighting look exactly like Englishmen, it is remarked by British officers. They come from Schleswig-Holstein, and indeed are of the same stock as the Anglo-Saxon invaders of Britain. The British find them better behaved than the other Germans.

TOMMY'S CONFIDENCE IN SYSTEM HELPS CURE

Quick Handling Makes Soldier Patients Cheerful—Kings Not Better Treated, Troves Finds

The handling of British wounded is described as follows: In ordinary circumstances, if the stretcher-bearers are unable to remove a wounded soldier as soon as he falls, they can go out at night and bring him in. Up to 1915 a soldier rescued at night had to wait until the next morning before he could be operated on. It is true that hemorrhages might be checked, and fractures eased or roughly set, but it was necessary to wait until daylight before important operations could be attempted. Now, there are operating tents immediately back of the firing lines. These tents are heated and lighted by electricity. No matter at what hour of the night a wounded soldier is brought to one of these operating tents, he can be treated immediately.

Army Surgeons Best

As soon as the operation is completed in the tent the patient is removed, either by train or by motor ambulance, to a permanent hospital farther in the rear. He may either remain here to be treated, if there is danger in further travelling, or he may be sent further back, even to England. Experts say that this prompt treatment has a considerable psychological value. The man feels that something is being done almost instantly for his relief. He is not worn out by needless suffering. The idea that he is going to recover is firmly planted in his mind. He knows, too, that he is in more skilful hands than if he were being treated at home, for the army surgeons have crowded into a month practice that at home would hardly be acquired in a lifetime. Moreover, the wounded Tommy has the advantage of the consulting advice of the best doctors in France and Belgium. A king could command no better skill.

Wonderful New Devices

The war has brought into existence many new devices for the treatment of wounds. X-ray machines are almost as common as scalpels. Great success has attended the use of the magnet for the withdrawal of shell detritus. Formerly these fragments had to be probed for, and the wounds drained of all foreign matter, thus imposing a strain upon the system and greatly delaying the recovery. The fine physical condition of the men, too, in spite of the hardships they have had to endure, or perhaps partly because of them, has made them admirable patients, and no doubt the knowledge that they are winning has its cheering effect.

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy way to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and forming their natural functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and was so improved that I began to study the malady. I found that the indigestion resulted from a bad case of inactive liver, and as soon as I got the liver working right, I didn't have any stomach trouble or indigestion, the nervous spells vanished and the 'blues' flew away. I am never sick now, but should the old trouble return, I know how to cure it quickly."

There is a whole host of derangements which disappear when the liver is set right. Biliousness, indigestion, headache, irritability, constipation are a few of the more common results of torpid liver action. By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you can control all such disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

In this suit for small boys every line that means comfort and style and that will keep a boy "boyish" is retained and fills a long felt want of mothers. The design is not too dressy for playtime and yet quite appropriate for semi-dress occasions. In the mixtures of gray, tan or brown, in cashmere, tweed or summer cheviots, or in wash materials, this suit will be just adorable on a five model. Of course navy is popular blue, the old standard, will never be rivalled for boys' suits. In the illustration chambray and white are the short sleeves in contrasting material, as fashion decrees. The trousers in this suit are attached to a waist that buttons at the back, but they may be separate, if your preference is for them that way; they are the open at the knee variety and are buttoned at the sides. A tie with long ends is a detail that gives a decorative feature, and a straight pocket at the left front, trimmed with contrasting material, tempers the plainness of the waist. With the guidance of a pattern you can only have the best results in copying this suit, and the time involved is really less than the time it would take to find as good a style ready made, with all the attending disadvantages of a ready made suit.

The pattern may be had in sizes 2 and 4 years. To have a duplicate of the suit in size 2 will require only 1¾ yards of 36 inch material and ¾ yard to trim.

HARDINGE TO BLAME FOR KUT-EL-AMARA?

London Times' Review of Mesopotamian Campaign Leaves Question Open

The London Times prints a three-column review of Lord Hardinge's career as Viceroy of India. In it an effort is made to place the blame for the Mesopotamia muddle. In part it says: "When, in November, 1914, Lord Hardinge, with the concurrence of the home government, began operations in Mesopotamia, his intentions were clearly of the most modest kind. With a single division he seized the important Turkish seaport of Basras, saved the Admiralty oil refineries on Abdan Island from destruction and cut off the Turks from access to the Persian Gulf.

"Had the operations stopped at that point, as originally intended, British interests would have been sufficiently served and subsequent unfortunate complications would not have arisen. Never was there a more mournful example in which an overseas campaign is liable to develop into a great and costly affair. Though we should never have left the districts accessible to sea transport, the Mesopotamian force was increased to an army corps, which before very long was waging campaigns at points of a triangle.

Nixon's Bad Optimism

"The command in Mesopotamia meanwhile passed to Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Nixon, an officer who combined excessive optimism with extremely faulty judgment. On his suggestion General Townshend advanced in September to Kut-El-Amara, where he fought a successful, though somewhat risky, battle and occupied the town. General Nixon gave as his reason for desiring to take Kut-El-Amara that it was an almost impregnable base and probably could be held. His reasoning was unsound, for, even if General Townshend had never gone beyond Kut-El-Amara, he would almost certainly have been beleaguered in the end.

"But Kut-El-Amara having been reached, General Nixon then proposed that Gen. Townshend should advance across the desert to Bagdad. It is at this point that the unsettled question of Lord Hardinge's share of the responsibilities arises.

"General Townshend was unwilling to advance without reinforcements, which he did not receive, but his views appear to have passed unnoticed. The question at present in dispute is apportionment of responsibility between Lord Hardinge and the home government and their respective military advisers. Did the home government, anxious to obtain a set-off for the failure at Gallipoli, adopt with eagerness General Nixon's most unwise proposal to advance to Bagdad, or did Lord Hardinge contribute his share of the sanction without marked pressure from home? The verdict probably must turn upon the evidence of telegrams which are not yet public property."

SOUTH AFRICA'S STAND

Ninety-nine Out of Every Hundred Boers Are Loyal

There were little more than half a dozen leaders, and perhaps less than 5,000 rebels amongst Afrikanders, not counting the Maritz affair, which is really not the same thing. There was done an enormous "underground" work by Germans and their sympathisers. And yet the Boers stood staunch in the overwhelming majority of more than 90 per cent. of the population of the conquered country of 1902. The terms of the peace at Vereeniging have been faithfully observed on both sides. And the Boers have learned to look upon British rule as the only means to neutralise the sometimes clashing provincial and parochial views of politics, that former curse of South Africa! Under British rule the various Provinces have been happily united, their economic, political, and moral needs more and more unified, amplified, and made homogeneous, to the very best interests of the country. Kruger's particularism is very fast disappearing, and a broad spirit of universal citizenship is being cultivated in every corner of the extensive Union. The people in South Africa have many more complicated problems of races, native affairs, language, political economy, than most of the older members of the British Empire. But in loyalty they have shown themselves in the very forefront—and it is really doing them a grievous injustice to look upon the past year's history of South Africa as anything else but a proof of complete and sterling loyalty to Britain and British ideals of these erstwhile so fierce and dauntless enemies.

KAISER VS. DEATH; RACE FOR SUPREMACY

Why Wilhelm Wanted War at Once—Belgium Alone Spoiled His Dream by Arousing Britain

Frank C. Parsons writes in John Bull, as follows: A legend is current in England to the effect that, when the Kaiser had signed the declaration of war against Russia and France, he said to his War Council, "I think you'll be sorry for this, gentlemen"—as though in tender reproach for a pertinacity which had at last only too successfully overcome his pacific instincts. The legend is a curious survival of the tradition that the Kaiser was a friend of peace.

Nothing of the kind occurred. It was the Kaiser himself who bore down, by mingled cajolery and downright bullying, the scruples of the majority of the Imperial Council during those fateful ten days in July, 1914. It was the Kaiser who, above all, was for war, and war at once. It was the Kaiser who literally jumped at the chance presented by the Russian protest against the infamous Austrian ultimatum to Servia. He came hurrying back from his Scandinavian holiday determined on war. Regardless of the protest of his own civil and military placemen, regardless of the pacific language of his own ambassador in Petrograd, he deliberately insulted the Czar, and jumped in with a declaration of war against Russia just as Russia and Austria were on the eve of composing their differences. Five days elapsed before Austria, the ostensibly aggrieved party, was persuaded that her grievance was sufficiently grave for her to embark on war at the Kaiser's dictation.

Overruled Wise Men

I have said that the majority of the Imperial Council entertained "scruples" against war. There was, however, no peace party in Germany in the sense that we understand the words in long-suffering, happy-go-lucky England. Every member of the Council was a Militarist. The "scruples" to which I have referred were based neither on Pacifism nor on humanity, but on expediency. Some of the most astute statesmen and military chiefs in Germany wanted peace to continue for at least another six years. But the Kaiser would not hear of any delay. He frankly recognised that his precipitate policy involved some risk; but he believed that the best interests of Germany and of his Dynasty would be served by facing these risks. Why?

Because the doctors had told him that (with luck) he had four more years to live; and he wanted the long-prophesied Greater Germany to be founded in his lifetime. He doubted the ability of his Heir-Apparent to realise the Pan-Germanic Ideal. By stretching his mailed fist at once over Belgium, Poland, the Balkans, and Asia Minor he would secure, he thought, a prosperous future for an aggrandized Germany and also for his Dynasty before he shuffled off this mortal coil. All danger of a democratic revolution against his degenerate successor would be obviated in a Germany drunk with military glory and controlled by military genius. Such was his dream.

Empire Needed Shock

It came within an ace of fulfilment, largely because England, engrossed by her increasingly bitter domestic differences, was not merely unprepared for war, but was also largely disinclined for it. The Kaiser, who had closely followed our political controversies, had counted on that. The cruel invasion of Belgium opened, as if by magic, the eyes of our nation to the ulterior motives of Pan-Germanism. It rallied us, as nothing else could have done, to the policy of that immediate intervention which saved us, and saved civilised Europe, from the Hun.

In a sense, the cynical early dropping of the mask by Germany was the most fortunate thing that could have happened. The British people needed this shock. They did not realise then that, quite apart from the fate of Belgium their duty and their interest was to stand by France at all costs, as her frontier is also our frontier against Prussian barbarism and Pan-Germanic aggression. Fortunately, our navy was ready; but not until the history of the first few days of the war has been clearly written for our people will they understand how very nearly we were prevented from promptly landing our Expeditionary Force in France by the pressing need for men to defend our own insular integrity—how very nearly the Germans came to holding up Paris to ransom, and bleeding France as they have bled Belgium.

BELGIUM IN HOLLAND

Made-to-Order Villages For Refugees in Friendly Country

A correspondent describes the refugee villages built for the Belgians in Holland: The residential villages are on the barrack principle. Their dormitories are named after distinguished Belgians, the Albert and Elisabeth dormitories, for example, in the Maasdorp; while similar quarters are the Rubens, Teniers, Van Dyck, Jordaens, Momline, Wiertz, and Henri Conscience dormitories. I looked into several of these buildings, where I was greeted as a friend. The accommodation seemed to be in every way adequate to the requirements of simple folk desirous of leading a decent and honorable family life. In the middle of each village there are three refectories named after famous Belgian towns—Antwerp, Liege, Malines, Namur, Brussels, Ghent, Bruges, Furnes, and Hasselt. These dining rooms form three sides of a square and are served from a common kitchen situated in each case in the middle of the space formed by the three dining rooms. All the buildings in the village are wooden bungalows, and all are warmed by central heating. A shoemakers' and a tailors' shop give employment to a certain number, and there is also a sewing school. The community can boast of at least one artist. Here in a conspicuous position were to be seen portraits of King Albert and Queen Elisabeth.

As the visit of the stork is not infrequent, the population always includes a good many babies, for whose mothers a special building is provided. There is also a creche for infants, besides other places where little children can be taken care of while their mothers are at work. The old folk have quarters apart from the rest. In addition to an ordinary hospital and an infants' clinic there is an isolation hospital for cases of infectious diseases. Buildings are also set apart for reading, smoking and recreation. During my visit I saw the children trooping out of school in their dark blue capes and hoods, boys in one place, girls in another. There are something like 1,700 children at the refugee village of Ede.

Informing the Germans

Many districts in the interior of Germany have been flooded with small pamphlets by the French. Hundreds of these sheets have been found in Wurttemberg, Baden, Hesse, Saxony and even in the central part of Prussia. Their origin at first was a riddle, but it has been ascertained that they come from France and were sent into the heart of the German Empire with the aid of toy balloons.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

GERMAN ATTACKS COMPLETELY CHECKED

BIGGER PENSIONS FOR CANADIAN SOLDIERS

THE FRENCH REPULSE ATTACK OF THE FOE AT THE POINT OF THE BAYONET

German Assault Northeast of Verdun Completely Stopped ---Opinion Grows in Paris That Enemy is About to Abandon Its Attack on Verdun--Thirteenth Irish Rebel Leader is Executed..

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 11.—French troops repulsed with bayonets and grenades an attack delivered by the Germans early this morning west of Vaux Pond, northeast of Verdun. On the west bank of the Meuse, only artillery activity occurred during last night, the War Office reported, the Germans failing to return to the attack.

The French artillery throughout last night displayed unusual activity in the Champagne region, concentrating its fire on German positions southeast of Tapure. About 110 yards of German trenches were destroyed.

Four French war planes bombarded the railway stations at Damvillers and Etain last night, setting fire to a railway depot. Though the German artillery continues active on the west bank of the Meuse, evidently in preparation for enemy attacks, the impression is again growing in the French capital that the Germans are preparing to abandon the attack on Verdun. In this connection the statement made by the German semi-official news agency yesterday with reference to the number of troops involved, was cited. French officers ridiculed the statement that eight hundred thousand French troops were engaged at Verdun.

Another Irish Rebel Pays Death Penalty

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, May 11.—Thomas Kent, the thirteenth Irish rebel leader to be executed by shooting, probably will be the last to pay the death penalty, unless Sir Roger Casement is convicted of treason, it was stated to-day. Kent was shot a tQueenstown Tuesday, said an official statement issued at Dublin to-day. He was found guilty of inciting rebellion in the vicinity of Farmo, County Cork. Kent was the first rebel executed outside Dublin. There was much speculation to-day as to the probable successor of Baron Wimborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, who resigned yesterday because of the Dublin outbreaks. Count Markievicc, whose wife, the Countess Markievicc, was sentenced to death, but later had the death sentence commuted to life imprisonment for participation in the Dublin outbreak, expressed complete indifference when informed of the Countess' fate, according to Petrograd despatches to-day.

Markievicc is serving with a Russian Hussar regiment. He separated from his wife a few years ago partly because of her connection with the Irish rebel movement.

British Blockade a Decisive Factor

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 11.—The Daily Chronicle says: "All the news from Germany indicates that the British blockade is likely to prove a decisive factor in the war. The economic expense has become intolerably severe. The masses of the population are half starved, particularly in the towns. Even the middle classes and rich are suffering greatly. Rich women are taking the children to Holland to get enough milk for them.

German newspapers state that the German Government has ordered reindeer, goats, storks, crows, starlings and sparrows to be killed for food.

Premier Hughes' Appeal To Labour

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 11.—William Morrow Hughes, Premier of Australia, speaking at Queen's Hall last night, at the largest meeting known since the beginning of the war, was tumultuously applauded when he issued a trumpet call to the forces of labour to organize industry. "Can any one say victory is in sight?" he asked. "Yet if Germany wins the aspirations of labour will shrivel to a dry husk.

"The present conflict is only the beginning of the struggle.

"Labour's place is upon the quarter deck of the ship of state. The result of this war means life or death to labour."

Rebuke For Nesbitt From the Commissioners

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, May 11.—At noon to-day Justice Duff threatened to resign from the shell contract probe if Hon. Wallace Nesbitt repeated the insinuations that Mr. Carvell, one of the Liberal counsel, had taken certain "papers." Sir William Meredith also rebuked the counsel for unseemly remarks.

Italians Seize Enemy Sub. Base

Special to The Examiner.

ROME, May 11.—Italian forces have occupied Marsamoresa and Port Bardia Syrenaica, on the coast of Tripoli, which were supply centres for enemy submarines, it was officially announced to-day.

Not only did hostile undersea craft take on supplies at these ports, but in return, they brought ammunition to natives who crossed the frontier and raided Western Egyptian outposts of the British.

The two ports named are about 600 miles northwest of Alexandria.

WILL NOT AFFECT ENGLISHMEN WHO RESIDE IN CANADA

State Department Would Not Place Definite Interpretation Upon Recent Announcement—Opinion of Well Known Official is That It Will Not Affect Englishmen Who Have Settled in Canada

AN OFFICIAL OPINION

OTTAWA, May 11. — Officially speaking, the State Department today would not place a definite interpretation upon the meaning of the London cable making the official announcement that "all married Englishmen eligible for military service who are living abroad, but who ordinarily are residents of Great Britain, must return to England forthwith and report for military duty."

"All we know of it is what we have seen in the papers," stated the best authority of the Department, "and until something more detailed is received I would not care to give an official opinion. My private view, however, is that it applies clearly and exclusively to Englishmen who are domiciled in Great Britain, but who for some reason or other, are temporarily residing or staying abroad. I do not consider that has any application at all to married Englishmen who have settled in Canada and are permanently residing here."

With the assistance of a generous hearted citizen of Peterborough who has expressed a desire that his identity should not be made public, the 93rd Battalion has purchased a field kitchen of the latest and best type, from the Gurney firm. The citizen in question contributed $400 towards the cost of the kitchen and the balance will be supplied by the battalion itself. The kitchen, which will be of the four wheeled type and will be a big acquisition to the equipment of the battalion. It will be shipped next Monday and the citizen will have a chance to see it in operation next week.

Word was received this morning by Mrs. N. E. Dobson, 492 McDonnell street, to the effect that her son, Private Charles Dobson, number 453011, infantry, had been officially reported wounded on April 27th, and admitted to No. 4 General Hospital at Etaples. Bilingual Discussion In House of Commons

BIGGER PENSIONS TO BE PROVIDED FOR THE SOLDIERS

More Generous Scale is Suggested to Parliament by the Special Committee and Will Undoubtedly Be Acted Upon at Present Session

AID FOR DEPENDENTS

Ottawa, May 10. — The Special House Committee on Soldiers' Pensions has completed a report suggesting a more generous pension scale. The report is now before Parliament and will in all probability be acted upon before the close of present session. The proposed scale for total disablement is:

Rank and le, yearly	$ 480
Sergts.-majors and sergts.	510
Regimental sergt.-major and quartermaster-sergts.	930
Warrant officers	930
Lieutenants	720
Captains	1000
Majors	1200
Lieut.-colonels	1560
Colonels	1800
Brig.-generals	2700

It is recommended that those entitled to be awarded pensions be divided out in classes, the pension to be in proportion to the soldier's disability to total disability as follows:

Class 1 — Total disability, such as loss of both eyes or hands, or legs, incurable tuberculosis, vavular heart disease.

Class 2—Disability 80 per cent. and less than 100 per cent., pension to be 80 per cent. of class 1.

Class 3—Loss of one hand, leg, tongue or nose, 60 per cent. of class 1.

Class 4—Loss of one eye, foot, total deafness or loss of two thumbs, pensio to be forty per cent. of class 1

Class 5—Loss of a thumb, knee, or injury to shoulder, wrist or ankle, 20 per cent. of class 1.

Class 6, total deafness one ear, partial deafness in both, loss of finger, a gratuity not exceeding $100.

The committee recommends that in addition to pensions all appliances as well as vocational training be paid for by the government and that the administration of the pension be directed by a board of three to be appointed for ten years and to have full authority in the premises. In addition to the pensions above outlined it is recommended that in cases where there is total helplessness as well as disability, a further grant of $250 may be made.

AID FOR DEPENDANTS

A disabled soldier up to and including the rank of lieutenant, entitled to a pension in the 1st, 2nd or 3rd class, shall be entitled to draw also $6 per month for each child; a captain, $7 a month for a child; a major, $8; a lieutenant-colonel, colonel or brigadier-general, $10 per child or step-child. If a member of the force has been killed the widow, until re-marriage, is to be entitled to the equivalent of the pension of class 2 and to the children's allowance. If the soldier was a widower, but leaves a child or children, such shall receive $12 per month.

Provision is made whereby a pension may be paid to a woman living with a soldier and publicly represented as his wife. On re-marriage her pension would cease but she is to have a gratuity of one year's pension. Pensions to children are limited to those of or under 16, unless the child is incapable of earning a livelihood. A widowed mother, step-mother or grand-mother, dependant on a soldier who is killed, if he died without children and was a widower or unmarried may be entitled to a pension of class 3. This is to cease on marriage, and the party is entitled to only one pension. A father wholly or mainly dependant on a son killed in action is entitled to a pension under class 3.

The committee recommends leaving to the commission to investigate and determine upon the proposal that reservists of the allies, who were bona-fide citizens of Canada, when called to the colors, should be treated on the same basis as those enlisting for Canada in the expeditionary force. The committee has so far been unable to get definite information as to the policy of other governments, and sufficient data were not available.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in a Memorable Speech Makes an Appeal to the Generosity of the People of Ontario.

THE PREMIER'S SPEECH

OTTAWA, May 10.—Dignity and sober thought dominated Parliament's discussion of the bilingual situation to-day. Men of both sides did themselves credit. There were few appeals to prejudice. There was little of party acrimony. There seemed to be a serious undercurrent of conviction to most of the speeches. No one merely "played politics." No one unleashed the ugly dogs of racial discord.

Private members, such as Mr. Ernest Lapointe (Kamouraska, Liberal), the mover of the resolution, and Mr. W. F. Nickle (Kingston, Conservative), who opposed it on constitutional grounds, contributed not a life to establishing and maintaining the high tone which prevailed. Other speakers generally, with the unfortunate exception of Hon. Mr. Casgrain, the Postmaster-General, sought to put themselves in accord. There was unanimous recognition of the right of each Province to absolutely control and determine its educational legislation. There was difference only as to the wisdom and efficacy of a Parliamentary petition to sovereign Legislatures.

Sir Robert Borden based his opposition to the resolution upon his interpretation of the constitutional grounds which, he believed, should govern the relationship between Federal and Provincial jurisdiction. He interpreted the resolution as an admonition. Sir Wilfrid Laurier interpreted it as an appeal. The Premier spoke briefly, sticking closely to the constitutional aspect. The Liberal leader made an earnest and emphatic declaration as to his fundamental adherence to the full measure of Provincial rights. Sir Wilfrid spoke from the heart of French Canada to the heart of her Anglo-Saxon sister.

Pleads Cause of Harmony.

It was a memorable speech by a master—and by a man. The master spoke from the heights of lofty eloquence. The man made the intensely human appeal of the blood. Crowded galleries sat in tense silence. Members of both political parties drew their chairs into a narrowed semicircle and listened tensely to every spoken word. Through burst of applause, through sagging succeeding moments of silence, the wonderful septuagenarian — seemingly obvious to all—went on. All unconscious he gradually moved forward until on one occasion he found himself out in front of his desk on the open floor of the Chamber. Time and again he wiped the streaming perspiration from his forehead. He was once more —and more than ever—the matchless orator, pleading the cause of a long life of service, the cause of national harmony.

Stands For Provincial Rights.

"I am of the old school of Mowat and Blake," he exclaimed, "the parent school of Provincial rights. By that doctrine I stand. The Province of Ontario, and the Province of Ontario alone, will and shall determine for herself the decision. Yet is it forbidden by the code of the new converts to the doctrine of Provincial rights that I stand at the bar before my fellow-countrymen of Ontario and make my plea? Is it forbidden that I respectfully present the petition of a humble servant of French origin?"

Britain's Policy Extolled.

CITY RIGHTS AND—WRONGS.

By the law of the land — the statutes of Ontario—the City Council is given full charge of the streets of the city; power to work their will upon them, to make or mar. This power involves responsibility to the public, to the ratepayers, who elect the civic governing body and supply them through taxation with the means for daring for or neglecting the streets. It follows that the city authorities are the only authorities, having power to do work on the streets, build pavements, construct boulevards, plan street trees, etc. As a matter of legal right, no taxpayer has any authority to move a clod of earth on the streets or plant a tree—no more than the city has a legal right to enter upon private property and dig holes or plant trees.

In practice, however, the responsibility of the city is surrendered in respect of the streets. In the matter especially, of boulevards and tree-planting, lack of taste and a sense of decency, have been, and are every day, forced to do what the city should do.

Private citizens have constructed every foot of finished boulevard in the city; private citizens have planted every street tree in the city, and done both works at their own expense. As a result there has been haphazard work done. Both kinds of work have been done in a haphazard, planless way. Boulevards have been made of varying widths on the same street, at different heights and different slopes. Trees have been planted in all sorts of lines, at all sorts of distances and of all sorts of variety—some suitable for streets and some entirely unsuitable. As a result there is no uniformity in boulevard lines, or levels or slope, no uniformity in lines or size or character of the trees planted. Nature, it is to be admitted, does not plant trees in straight lines, but on straight streets, there is no other way of planting them; and when we are compelled to practice uniformity we should have uniformity.

This principle of uniformity is especially desirable in the treatment of the new boulevards created by the laying down of asphalt pavement on residence streets. Hunter street west of Bethune street, and Charlotte street west from Park. In many places the owners of property had made neat boulevards, which were necessarily destroyed in the course of pavement construction. In other parts the provision of curbing created the necessary conditions for ideal boulevards. The city or the contractors, or somebody roughly filled in the boulevards, but in a very irregular way, at some points too much earth and at others too little; and as a rule no care or thought was given to the filling material. At many points the boulevard was filled in with small boulders, broken concrete from removed crossings and even surplus concrete from the foundation work of the pavement. Of course this did not provide a very promising material for grass or flowers, if we should ever come to the point of sitilization of growing flowers in our boulevards as is done in many cities. But the whited-sepulchre principle prevailed. These boulders and concrete scrap were covered with earth to give a fairly fair appearance, and left to the action of winter.

Then this spring when the [illegible] beauty and adornment came [illegible] it might have been expected that the city street department would proceed with the work of putting these boulevards in shape, coincident with the housecleaning operations in the residences adjoining.

This, of course, was not done, and the consequence is that decent [illegible] citizens have had to do [illegible] themselves or pay for having [illegible] It may be done all right [illegible] the individual point of view, but [illegible] absence of any authority, of any plan, of any system, each citizen is a law unto himself. Thus we have, as mentioned, the stretch of boulevard at different slopes and levels, undulating like the waves of an earthen sea, and thus the beauty of the street borders is destroyed and the minimum of beauty created, instead of the maximum, as would have been done, if the city had planned and performed on a uniform scale, under the direction of somebody, who knew and cared.

It is stated that the city is doing this work on George street, and will later extend its work to the streets mentioned above. If that had been the policy, why were the people not advised of the intention of the council? Why were the people allowed to work individually and spend money to do patchwork treatment of boulevards which will have to be done over again, in some cases, if uniformity is desired, on these streets. In this respect the people of these streets have not been treated fairly.

The city authorities are doubly to blame, are doing a double injustice in this matter. They offend the whole city by neglecting to make the stretches of streets beautiful, for the delight of the whole public, and they do injustice to the ratepayers on these streets by imposing double taxation. Every ratepayer is assessed a formidable frontage tax to pay for the pavement, and in addition many have taxed themselves to pay for finishing the work Rightly considered, the completion of the abutting boulevard is as much a part of the pavement work as putting down the foundation or applying the surface. It should be done by the city and a proportion of the cost included in the pavement payments extended over twenty years.

These undesirable, unjust, and in some cases oppressive, conditions, come from two causes—lack of sense of responsibility on the part of the city authorities, and the lack of even the ghost of a system in dealing with our streets and public places.

We have for the past half century been under the reign of haphazard. No system, no foresight, no aftersight as would come from systematic organization of our street forces. The three score and six councils we have elected since 1860, have jogged along in the same old ruts, only more numerous as the town grew. The great minds that have ruled our civic destinies for the past 56 years have never envolved a shadow of system— have muddled along in the same old way, each adopting and amplifying the errors of their predecessors, letting things drift, and doing in a haphazard way what was thrust upon them—in this respect fulfilling the dictum of the Scriptures—"take no thought of to-morrow; sufficient out the day is the evil thereof."

We seem to have tried and found wanting the way of government by elected councils; and there is a strong demand for commission government, in which responsibility and efficiency are concentrated. We might not do better from commission government, but there is a certainty that we could not do worse. In the Waterworks Commission we have had splendid experience of the splendid fruits of commission government. Take only one concrete example, the neat, clean grounds of the waterworks station. We should have the whole city like that, every street and square, if we had had in charge of our streets a Commission with as much good sense, as much organization instinct, as much business capacity as the Waterworks Commission, now amplified, with good sense, into the Utilities Commission.

"IF GERMANY CONQUERED."

"If the Germans conquered they would have their hand on the whole world; there would be only the German power in Europe; only two in the whole world—Germany and the United States. Would the position of these two to each other be that of peace? No; it would be war. Certainly Germany would not be ready at once, but its preparations would continue with the domination of the world in view. If this happened the United States would be obliged to become a military nation. I will go further, if Germany triumphed in this war the United States would regret her neutrality in this war."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Montreal.

HAS BRITAIN CONTRIBUTED LITTLE TO THE WAR?

In thoughtless or unfriendly quarters the remark is sometimes passed, why is England doing so little, or not doing more? The question is its own comment on inability of measurement.

The true measure in this case is a little obscure or complex. It is further obscured by the necessarily spectacular way in which certain British military adventures have missed fire, as at Gallipoli and in Mesopotamia. These are foreshortened as against the other side's misadventures against Paris, Calais, the Suez canal, Verdun, etc. There is further obscuration, from the English habit of self-criticism and contention. The quiet taking over of nearly a third of the 500-mile western front has escaped general notice. The quiet work of the navy and the eclipse of German colonies as well as commerce are not adequately appreciated. Likewise the British service in munitions, supplies, loans and transport.

Battles and size of armies afford the most concrete tests for the lightly thinking. Premier Asquith recently supplied such a concrete measurement when he stated that the Empire has so far gathered for fighting a total of over 5,000,000 men, including naval and colonial elements, and that to-day the final issue will be forced upon conscription to provide for filling gaps and for further increased effort. This means more than intent to make the maximum exertion. It is to be measured also relatively, in numbers and time. It means that the British, starting almost without an army, constitute a sixth of all the combatants in the huge world war. As to time, it means that England has had to go through the slow task of creating a drilled army and of educating her people to the need and the processes thereof.

But that is not the whole of the measurement; there is a further index, less popularly comprehensible. It lies in the mobilization and conscription of money as well as of men; and further, there is the consideration of the genuineness and the applied power of that money. And herein is perhaps the major British contribution to the slowly gathering allied forces.

War expenditure (1914-15) 2,595 million dollars.
Paid from revenue (1914-15) 515 million dollars.
Loans (1914-15), 2,080 million dollars.
Total revenue and loans (1914-15) 2595 million dollars.

It is generally admitted that England is rich, is spending 25 million dollars a day, and is fortifying her allies with her purse and ships. The full scope of that financial power and effort need exposition, such as was given them in a recent paper by Sir George Paish before the Royal Statistical Society.

England's wealth he puts at 85,000 million dollars; and its nature is especially important. It is of high war-making potentiality—in adaptable factories and machinery, in transportation facilities, in capital placed abroad yielding large income, and in ability to realize part of such capital. British income has risen, under increased war wages, prices and profits, from 12,000 million dollars to 15,000 million dollars, a year; and, while this does not mean equivalent increased production, it does allow of meeting huge war expense.

There is the ability and willingness to meet a large share of such war expense by taxation, instead of dodging it, as in Germany. Three war tax increases have added 1,000 million dollars a year, doubling taxation from the pre-war level.

Then there has been the great power to borrow. Expressed briefly, the British war debt was 3,500 million dollars before the war; on March 31 1915, was 6,440 million dollars; on March 31, 1916, was almost 12,000 million dollars. Another year of war would bring it close to 20,000 million dollars. That is the power of credit—the ability to fling in the last conquering billion.

Then there is the power to spend. The British war bill to March, 1917, if the war goes that far, may thus be tabulated:

(1915-16), 7,045 million dollars.
(1916-17) — estimated—9,775 million dollars.
Total—19,805 million dollars.

Here is a bill of 40,000 million dollars this year; of 20,000 million dollars for three years.

Is England doing little or much?—Boston News Bureau.

FOWLERS PEBLO GLASSES

NATURE CAN'T DO IT ALL

WHILE poor health affects every part of the body, and restored vigor does all it can to strengthen the weak spots, sometimes the effect of sickness or a run down condition will leave the eyes weakened so greatly that nature is unable to restore them. Neglect at this time, only aggravates the case, and it is better to let Dr. Fowler come to nature's assistance. With a pair of his "Pebio" glasses properly fitted, the natural, original eye strength is regained. Do not endure the inconvenience of poor eyesight un-necessarily.

Relief From the Skies.

British Aviators Assisted Besieged Garrison at Kut-el-Amara — Only One Machine Lost.

LONDON, May 11. — British aeroplanes dropped 18,000 pounds of food, in addition to mail and military and other stores, in Kut-el-Amara between April 11 and 29.

This effort to relieve the hunger of the besieged garrison, which subsequently surrendered to the Turks, was told of in the House of Commons today by Harold Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War.

During the whole course of the Amara, he said, only one British aeroplane was brought down by the Turks. The pilot was killed and the observer wounded. The Turks had reported that a number of aeroplanes which attempted to drop supplies were shot down.

Committee Will Wait Upon The Peterboro' Utiljties Commission In Pursuit of Lower Rate

Ald. Stratton Anticipates a Rainy Season Which Together With the Dustless Sweeper Will Reduce the Use of Water to a Minimum—Meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee—"Billie's" Duties Are Light.

A committee composed of His Worship Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Stratton and Evans will again wait upon the Utilities Commission with a view of having the fixed annual rate of $1,500 for water reduced. As was pointed out by Ald. Stratton at a meeting of the Fire, Water and Light committee held last evening, considerably less water is being used. The use of road oil on the city's streets represents a big item in itself. The Commissioners advised the Fire, Water and Light committee that they would be willing to renew the agreement for a supply of water for one year at a fixed rate of fifteen hundred dollars. This is exclusive of the water used for fire purposes.

Some of the members of the committee were inclined to think that a second attempt to have the Commissioners would be of little avail. Last year the Commissioners had a surplus of six thousand dollars. This, it was pointed out, would be utilised in the construction of a new force main.

Mayor Duffus said the Commissioners might reconsider their decision in view of the fact that the city is contemplating the use of a dustless sweeper on the paved streets of the city.

"There will be lots of rain this year," remarked Ald. Stratton.

The Duties of "Billie."

A grey horse answering to the name of "Billie" was the subject of a ten minute discussion. Ald. Stratton wanted to know the duties of the animal as he had seldom been seen in double harness. Fire Chief Howard replied that the animal was a little on the light side for regular work on the fire trucks and consequently has been used on the Chief's buggy and as a "spare" in case of sickness.

It was moved by Ald. Stratton that the horse be sold or exchanged for one of a heavier type.

Stock Sheet.

Monthly statements of supplies required for the fire department must be accompanied by a statement showing how much stock is on hand. Mayor Duffus agreed that it would be good business to keep a list of the stock on file all the time. Ald. Stratton insisted that the requisitions be made out each month according to a resolution passed by the committee some time ago.

Men Wanted.

The necessity of keeping the department up to strength was referred to by Ald. Stratton. He asked why it was that Chief Howard was running along with eleven men instead of fifteen or sixteen as required. Ald. Stratton said that the manufacturers were entitled to fire protection and he believed that a sufficient number of men could be secured if the age limit were raised and the physical qualifications lowered a little. Chief Howard said that men were very scarce owing to the heavy demand for labour on the part of the factories. Besides the pay was not in keeping with prevailing wages.

The Fire Chief was asked to take immediate steps to fill up the depleted ranks and if unsuccessful a special meeting of the committee will be called in a week or so to further consider the matter.

More Street Lights.

Lights will be placed on Elm street, east of the Monaghan road, Water street between Hilliard and Argyle streets and at the intersection of George and Hilliard streets.

A letter of condolence will be forwarded to Mrs. Frank Kelly, widow of the late Fireman Frank Kelly, whose death occurred a few days ago.

Allies Should Cease "Useless Effort of Revenge"

Definite Attempt Made by German Government to Impress Neutrals With Strong Desire For Peace

LONDON, May 11.—"There is no doubt whatever," says the Daily Telegraph, "that during the last few days a definite attempt has been made by the German government to impress neutrals with its strong desire for peace, with a view to inducing them to come forward as mediators and break up the alliance of its enemies by getting one of them to conclude a separate peace.

"For the present it would not serve any useful purpose to disclose the facts in their entirety, but it can be said that the Kaiser has personally sent a letter to President Wilson in which, appealing to him as the greatest neutral authority, he expatiates on the necessity of urging the western powers not to prolong indefinitely what seems to him their 'quite useless efforts of revenge.'

"Moreover, in the capitals of several of the neutral countries the German representatives have been particularly insistent in their assurances that if given a fair chance Germany would do her best to conciliate her present opponents. According to the best informed opinions, this most recent attempt of the Kaiser's diplomacy, besides its apparent aim namely, the conclusion of an early peace of which the idea cannot be entertained by the allied powers, has another aim and a far more real one namely, to make President Wilson realise the glorious and by no means unuseful part which is in store for him if he can wait and be patient long enough to allow German schisanes to mature.

"It is believed in many quarters that so far as Germany is concerned the Irish troubles were engineered with the idea of bringing home to President Wilson an approximate estimate of the internal dangers his own country would incur if it should be called upon to make war upon Germany with so many millions of Germans and Irishmen living under the Stars and Stripes."

Do not use water or oil to clean gilt picture frames as both are injurious. Instead, apply the white of an egg with a soft cloth which will solve the difficulty.

SWITZERLAND, THE GOOD SAMARITAN OF WAR-STRICKEN EUROPE

(BY MARIE WIDMER)

After reading of the ever-increasing, inconceivable horrors of actual warfare, which are apt to destroy one's very belief in things that fine and noble, it does one good to hear of little Switzerland, the one nation which although entirely surrounded by belligerent countries and solely tried herself on account of conditions prevailing excells continuously in her wonderful humanitarian work for the benefit of the war sufferers.

The latest noble deed which historians will record in favour of the gallant mountain Republic are hereby mentioned successful efforts on behalf of the Prisoners of War whose condition of health necessitates a sojourn in some mountain resort or watering place.

While it seemed improbable at first that the belligerent countries would permit any of their men to stay in a foreign health resort during the war, the continued and combined efforts of the Press on behalf of the sick and disabled prisoners of war resulted in an agreement to the effect that sick German prisoners held in France and sick French prisoners held in Germany were now be transferred to Switzerland for a cure.

A start has but recently been made with men afflicted with curable tuberculosis and in order to avoid any possible unpleasantness or a hurting of the feelings of the ordinary guests, the sanitoriums of Davos have been assigned to the Germans and those of Montreux and Leysin in French Switzerland to the French. While such precautions would no doubt be necessary in some cases, it has already been reported from Davos where a first transport of such patients arrived end of January last that the cosmopolitan throng of visitors did not display the slightest ill-feeling towards these men whose countenance tells of their sufferings; on the contrary everybody without exception showed his sympathy well remembering that the children of any warring nation would equally appreciate brotherly love and kindly treatment.

This transfer to Switzerland of German and French consumptive prisoners of war was immediately followed by another exchange of the so-called Grands Blessés, those poor castaways from the trenches who have lost limbs or eyesight or are maimed beyond hope of recovery. With their own splendidly equipped trains the Swiss have also been taking care of these exchanges which take place between Lyons and Constance and which like no other Swiss charitable undertaking give the casual onlooker an insight into the horrors of war.

A second transport of sick prisoners will take place presently and it is estimated that this new humanitarian work will commence with a total of about 2,000 invalids of both nationalities. There are, of course, a great proportion of men who are suffering from other diseases requiring some sort of a cure and such patients some sort of a cure and such patients will in due time be taken care of in health resorts suitable for their individual complaints. If this trial with German and French prisoners proves successful, it is hoped that soldiers of other nationalities will later on also be given an opportunity to come to Switzerland for treatment.

A special supervision of these prisoners is not deemed necessary, for if any of them should escape, his native land undertakes to return him and the punishment for such an attempt would be the prompt return to the former prisoners' camp.

For reasons easily explained no prisoners will be taken into large cities nor into any of the resorts which are situated near the frontier or in the vicinity of some fortress.

The two states concerned hold themselves responsible for the expenses and specially reduced and uniform terms have been agreed upon by all the Swiss hotel establishments involved, as the undertaking is by no means a business venture, but a strictly humanitarian work for the benefit of all prisoners of war whose condition of health necessitates a systematic cure.

Special Week of Prayer at S.A. Temple

The Week of Prayer and Self-Denial in the Salvation Army, goes on space. Strenuous efforts are being made to keep the home and foreign missionary work of the Army up notwithstanding the war, and for the most part the collectors are meeting with a hearty response.

A very special altar service will be held for the serious side of the corps on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, when the personal offering and collections of the seniors will be laid on the altar, and God's blessing asked upon it.

Next week the young people will do their turn.

BILINGUAL DISCUSSION

Africa, the history of Wales, the Scottish Highlands, India, Egypt, Malta, was told in simple and impressive words. "It is England's glory that men are to-day gladly dying for England who could never speak the English tongue." Then he passed to Ireland, and the long struggles in the "distressful Isle." Gladstone had set out to "bind and heal the bruises that for centuries had hurt." Like Moses, Britain's Grand Old Man was not destined to lead the people into the promised land. Yet the new policy of trust and conciliation had borne fruit. Ireland had played her patriotic part, and it was not to be thought of that the insane plot which culminated in three days of Dublin riots should dash aside the cup of achievement and fulfillment which was at her lips So with Canadians of French origin.

Deplorable and Unintelligible.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not blink the sun. "I know," said he, "there is in the Province of Ontario a sense of irritation at the position taken by some of my fellow-countrymen of French blood in the Province of Quebec, who have from the first deprecated the participation of Canada in the present war, and who have exerted their influence to attempt at least to prevent enlistment. Alas, it is true; it is only too true. It is deplorable, and, to me, as unintelligible as it is deplorable. It is true, alas that there are in my Province men of French origin who, when France is fighting the fight of heroism which stirs the blood of mankind, remain with their blood cold, who tell us: 'No, we will not lift a finger to assist Britain in defending the integrity of France, but we want our wrongs to be righted in Ontario.' Wrongs or no wrongs, there is a field of honour, there is a call of duty."

Sir Wilfrid pleaded that "the ignoble stand of men who have so far forgotten the duty which they owe not only to their British allegiance, but no the French blood that flows in their veins," should not impede and impair consideration of his appeal "if our cause be just and fair."

The Resolution.

The text of the resolution submitted by Mr. Lapointe and seconded by Mr. Emmanuel P. Devlin (Wright) was as follows:

"It has long been the settled policy of Great Britain whenever a country passed under the sovereignty of the Crown by treaty or otherwise, to respect the religion, the usages and the language of the inhabitants who thus became British subjects.

"That his Majesty's subjects of French origin in the Province of Ontario complain that by recent legislation they have been to a large extent deprived of the privileges which they and their fathers have always enjoyed since Canada passed under the sovereignty of the British Crown of having their children taught in French.

"That this House, especially at this time of universal sacrifice and anxiety, when all energies should be concentrated on the winning of the war, would, while fully recognizing the principle of Provincial rights and the necessity of every child being given a thorough English education, respectfully suggest to the Legislative Assembly the wisdom of making it clear that the privilege of children of French parentage of being taught in their mother tongue be not interfered with."

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

A Great Nerve Tonic

The daily grind of life burns up a man's vitality faster than he renews it.

He gets shaky, starts at trifles, tosses in his sleep, is ready to fly off the handle any minute.

The nervous man is nervous because his blood is so thin his nerves are starved to death.

He needs Ferrosone!

Its first action is upon digestion. It stimulates secretion of gastric juice, ensures perfect digestion, prepares the food so it it can be at once assimilated.

Hence the blood is nouriahed, is fortified, made redder, richer, stronger.

To the whole organism is imparted a vim, endurance and reserve of vigor that the nervous man never knew before.

The restorative power of Ferrosone is marvelous. In a month it will make you feel like new, just as it did Mr. Karl E. Newsome of Rothesay, who writes: "I owe a debt of gratitude to Ferrosone which saved my life after a severe siege of nervous prostration. About a year ago my health gave out. I was in such a weak, irritable condition I couldn't work, and found that three doctors did nothing for me. My druggist recommended Ferrosone as the best preparation for nervous troubles, so I commenced with one tablet at meals. Every box of Ferrosone I took did me more good than the previous one, and it wasn't very long before I was strong enough to move around again. In three months I was completely cured. Ferrosone brased up my nerves, gave me a strong, healthy constitution, and is certainly a marvelous restorer and tonic."

Try Ferrosone—sold everywhere by druggists in 50c. boxes.

CREATORE'S BAND HERE NEXT WEEK AT GRAND THEATRE

Concert in Aid of the Fund of the 93rd Battalion

Sig Giuseppe Creatore and his band, which appears here on May 18th, is one of the most remarkable organizations before the musical world to-day. The Boston Transcript says: "No conductor who has yet appeared in Symphony Hall has ever secured such storms of thunder, such amazing variations of rhythm, as has Creatore. He has set Boston music mad, as it is reported he did in New York. He is not only the most picturesque of conductors that ever was seen here, but he is besides a masterly leader of men. He has his musicians under perfect control, inasmuch that everything is played with wonderful effectiveness. Fine tone, sympathy and nice distinction. It leans to climaxes of the most abrupt, fearful sort. After one has got used to them you learn to appreciate them with a sort of joy-sadness. It would be hard to imagine a band playing 'William Tell' and 'Tannhauser' overtures in a more inspiring fashion. In these and the operatic excerpts, Creatore and his band are in their element and fairly lose themselves in the fun. He certainly does

MUTT AND JEFF IN COLLEGE

Is One Innovation After Another

The public demand for a new Mutt and Jeff has been more than realized. Gus Hill's latest version of Bud Fisher's inimitable characters, entitled, "Mutt and Jeff in College," is the most conspicuous innovation of recent years. The title alone suggests endless comedy situations which have been taken advantage of to their fullest capacity. Not alone is the story new, but music, dances, etc., are also new and original as well. One of the most decided hits of the performance is the musical number with dancing accompaniment, "When Charlie Chaplin Marries Elaine," in which hall of the popular serial film plays are represented by their principal characters, including Charlie Chaplin, Elaine The Goddess, Pauline, The Diamond from the Sky, etc. This number calls for repeated encores at every performance. College commencement day in the auditorium is without doubt the most hilariously funny scene ever presented on any stage. A solid hour of constant laughter, not laughter but screams of merriment, a perfect tornado of indescribable, ludicrous comedy that is simply irresistable. In fact the show may be termed in theatrical parlance A RIOT. This is the fifth and best edition of Mutt and Jeff, which will undoubtedly live for many years to come. It is coming to The Grand Opera House for an engagement of one night, Tuesday, May 16th

BATTLE ON TORONTO BAY IN THE CONFLICT OF 1812

In Those Days the Redskin Who Could Swallow a Piece of White Man's Flesh and Keep It Down Was Considered Eligible For Military Service—Chief Sustained a Broken Leg and Was Shot by His Own Men to Prevent Capture.

Below is published the story of the fight on Toronto Bay in the War of 1812. It was told by John York, Ojibwa, 86 years old, in Ojibwa tongue, and translated by Peter York, both parties of Rama Reserve. This interesting story is from a collection of Indian tales, compiled by Mr. G. E. Laidlaw, of the Fort Rauch, Victoria Road:

"My grandfather was one of the men who fought when the Americans came, and he told this story:

"There were a lot of them, and our side had very few men. Of course all the Indians wanted to fight before the fight took place. We got one of the American men (soldiers) that was killed and took him back to our camp, and our leader or commander (war chief) and the warriors cut the white man to pieces and the commander called all the fighting men to come to where he was. The first man came in to where this war chief was. The chief took a small piece of flesh of the white man and gave it to this man to eat. The man took it and ate it without any trouble. The next man came in and took one piece and ate it, and swallowed it, but in a short time the piece came out (was vomitted up.) Well, this man is let go home because he is no good, and all the men that swallowed pieces that stayed in their stomachs were the ones that went to fight. That is the way men were examined in those days.

"All our men (Indians) got ready on the shore, and they could see the American boats coming towards where they were. The Indian leader or war chief could see the Americans getting ready on the other side, without using a glass. He said: "They are starting out now. Get ready," and it took a long time before anybody else could see the boats coming. When the boats came in close our men began to shoot and kept up a hot fire all day long, and killed many. This war chief stood right at the front and never was touched all day. Towards night he told his men to "run back in the woods." By this time the American Indians got away back of them, and our men fought hard, not knowing that they were surrounded by the American Indians, and our war chief got shot from behind, and fell with a broken leg, and lay for a long time till the next day. He was then shot to death by his own men to prevent him falling alive into the hands of the American Indians, and they all ran away for their lives. When the battle got through the bush was all smoke, and it took a long time to bury the dead. All the men that escaped death walked all the way from Toronto Bay to Orillia, and never got any pay from the government."

A WESTERN "OLD TIMER"

Mr. William Drain Who Formerly Resided in Peterboro' County Has An Eventful Career in the West

The Rosthern, Saskatchewan, paper is publishing each week a biographical sketch of the "old timers" of that district, and in its issue of April 27th had the following reference to William Drain, brother of Mr. Hugh Drain, of the Dummer Road, and also of Mr. T. J. Drain, a former well known citizen of Norwood, but now of Port Haney, B.C. The subject of this sketch was also a former resident of this country, and will be remembered my many

William Drain.

Probably no man in this whole district has seen so much of this part of Western Canada in the early pioneer days as has William Drain, or more familiarly known as "Bill" Drain. He has watched the district transformed from an unsettled country, peopled only by the now almost historical red men, to one of the finest and most prosperous in the whole of Western Canada with splendid buildings dotting the landscape where once was nothing but bare plains and scrub with here and there an Indian encampment. And not only has he watched this great transformation but he has taken an active part in the big chances that have taken place.

Mr. Drain came to Northern Saskatchewan, in the late seventies, and to what was then the big place of Saskatchewan, Prince Albert. He was a dealer in horses and brought many horses to that city in the early days. He has many interesting stories to tell of the pioneering days in Prince Albert and as a story teller is hard to beat.

The Indians started out on the war path in the big rebellion in 1885, and Bill Drain was one of the first to volunteer to help put down the uprising. He served as scout under General Middleton during the rebellion and took an active part in the battle of Duck Lake. After the close of the rebellion he went to farming, like most of the other settlers in Saskatchewan at that time, taking a farm near Prince Albert. He was also employed as engineer at the lumber mill at Prince Albert for a time. Shortly after this he homesteaded near Duck Lake and was well known for many years by old timers here as a successful farmer and a thresherman of repute.

There is a saying often heard in this district that "the only man who ever made any money at the threshing business was Bill Drain." Whether this is true or not, we cannot vouch for, but it is certainly a fact that when the Drain threshing rig was in operation real threshing was done and very often a day's record hung up.

About ten years ago Mr. Drain retired from active participation in farming and was appointed liquor license inspector, by the provincial government, for this district, which position he ably filled until the banishment of the bars a year ago. In this position he made many friends throughout his big territory.

He still owns considerable land in the Rosthern district, contending that as an investment, farm lands in this neighborhood are A 1.

Mr. Drain hails from Peterborough County, Ont., where his boyhood days were spent. During the past winter he spent several months in Mexico and has some stirring stories to tell of the Mexican revolutionists.

SOLDIER'S ESCAPE FROM PRISON FARM

Two British Soldiers Walk Out of Camp in German Uniforms.

LONDON, May 11.—The adventures of two British soldiers who escaped from a German internment camp and have just arrived in England were told here to-day.

One of the men was captured after Ypres on May 28th, 1915, the other was made prisoner at Aubers the following month. They were placed in the German prison camp at Remscheid.

After long and careful planning they procured two complete uniforms belonging to German officers and in this disguise they boldly marched through the gates and politely acknowledged the salutes of the guard on duty. They passed through many daring adventures before they succeeded in getting over the frontier. Souts secured the countryside for miles around the camp, but the undaunted pair managed to outwit them every time.

After being fired at by sentries and chased by village children as tramps: after hiding in woods and experiencing the greatest difficulties owing to their ignorance of the German tongue, the two Englishmen reached this country.

Unrest in Bulgaria

Surgeon Says Revolt May be Expected—Americans are Annoyed.

THE HAGUE, (via London), May 10—Dr. Charles Pancoast of Philadelphia and Dr. Morowits of New York have reached The Hague after sixteen months, during which they have engaged in surgical work in Hungarian and Bulgarian armies. They were the last American physicians to leave Bulgaria with the exception of Dr. Harry Plotz of New York, who remained in Sofia.

Dr. Pancoast says a spy craze is rompant in Bulgaria, that all Americans there are subject to suspicion and that therefore their life there is most unpleasant. He says it is evident that the Germans do not want Americans in Bulgaria.

How thoroughly Bulgaria is under German domination, he declares, is shown by the fact that the country virtually has been denuded of foodstuffs by the Germans. Sugar, flour, oil, rice and coffee are obtainable only under a card system, and medicaments are becoming scarce. There is a general feeling of unrest, which Dr. Pancoast says he thinks must reach a dangerous point within a few months, when, he prophecies, popular uprisings or assassinations may be expected.

Dr. Pancoast adds that there is an unmistakable, although suppressed, feeling of hostility against the Germans, of whom it is estimated there are more than 400,000 in Bulgaria. There are more Germans than Bulgarians in Sofia, he says. According to the physician, there is an open warlike feeling against Rumania, and an enmity against the Serbians. Three-quarters of the Bulgarian population, he declares, is Russophile.

Dr. Pancoast served in a great Hungarian hospital in Munkacs Hungary, where the barracks accommodate 4,000 wounded. Afterward he was in charge of the military hospital at Vrsias, Bulgaria, and of a hospital at Sofia, he speaks highly of the Hungarians, who, he says hided the Americans well and showed also great humanity toward prisoners in contrast with the Bulgarians, who, he says, were often cruel. He says that he saw 800 British and French prisoners in rags marching through the streets of Sofia with the people jeering them. They had been robbed of their clothing and shoes on the battlefield, he added.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

Wednesday afternoon the members of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. visited the Wm. Hamilton Co., plant. This observation trip was one of the most interesting that the boys have had. The boys met at the fatory at 4.30 and under the guidance of Mr. Smith were taken through the different departments of the fatory. The department the boys were most interested in was where the shells were made for the guns of the Canadian artillery. The officers of the "Y" wish to thank the management of the Wm. Hamilton Co., also the foremen of the different departments for the interest that they took in the boys on their visit.

Wednesday afternoon, May 17th the boys will visit the B. F. Ackerman Co.

Last night the church basketball league was brought to a close when St. Paul's winners of group "A" won from Knox church winners of Group "B". The boys of the church basketball league have played good basketball throughout the series, and the league has done a great deal to bring the members of the different churches of the city together where they could meet and get acquainted in this way.

Monday evening a meeting will be held in the Y.M.C.A. to organize a church baseball league for boys eighteen years of age and under. The meet is called for 7.30 sharp and it is requested that the churches have their representatives at this meting sharp on time.

Silver is King

Last year Copper was king of metals, advancing from 12 to 30 cents a pound.

This year Silver is King, and is advancing by leaps and bounds—no man dare say what the ultimate price will be. Last summer silver was worth 46⅞ cents per ounce — to-day it is 74 cents and going higher every week.

The advance in copper last year caused a sensational market in copper shares, many low priced copper stocks advanced more than 1,000 per cent.

That was last year, this year it is Silver and now is the opportune moment to purchase high-class silver stocks.

We have underwritten 250,000 shares of Lorrain Consolidated Mines, Ltd., at 20 cents per share net to the Treasury of the Company, and are now allotting these shares to our clients at 22 cents.

The fact that we have underwritten this large block of treasury stock, thereby guaranteeing the Company $50,000 for development purposes, is the best evidence of our sincere belief in the future of the Company.

Lorrain Consolidated has, in our opinion, the three necessary elements of a successful mine. The Company owns outright, 53 acres in the South Lorrain-Cobalt silver district on which engineers have located four large and six smaller veins. $40,000 has already been spent in proving up the property and two shafts have been sunk, one 162 feet, and the other 110 feet. Drifting and cross cutting to the extent of several hundred feet has also been done.

The management of Lorrain Consolidated is in the hands of men whose names stand for everything that is honorable in mining.

Men of this character do not associate themselves with a mine unless they are fully convinced of its merit, and we never underwrite a stock until we are satisfied it has a good chance of making good.

This Company has a well located property, an honest and efficient management, and ample capital for development. We, therefore, feel justified in recommending the purchase of the stock.

Application will be made for listing the shares in Toronto, Boston and New York.

Reports of development work to date and extracts of engineer's statements will be furnished free on application.

THE WOMAN OF TO-DAY

He was a true philosopher who said that the more fruitful a theme the greater the difficulty to write about it. Could there be any more abundant subject than the women of our land, and yet how difficult to say anything at once new and interesting. We can tell of incidents of heroic sacrifice, but to mention such things of a few is to ignore thousands of similar cases. We can tell of the woman who, in order to gratify the desire of her sixteen-year-old son, to join the colours, went out and gathered in twelve recruits. Her deed was noble, marvellous in its motherly and patriotic devotion, but it cannot be emulated by all and it is questionable if it is desirable that it should be. Other mothers have really done as much in sacrificing their only offspring and in dismissing them with a kiss and a fervent "God bless and guard you, my boy." It is the number of such sacrificial incidents that makes them difficult to dwell upon.

Yet there are many cases in which the mothers cannot bring themselves to make the divine sacrifice, and it is to be feared that usually in such instances they are not urged very strongly to do so. In other words, that the young men are perfectly satisfied to take shelter behind the maternal skirts. However, it is not of the men, but of the women and their work that it is sought to speak. If they are not all Spartans they can each and every one render some service, or to use a much hackneyed phrase: "do their bit." And the majority are doing it. In innumerable ways they are rendering service. There is probably not one of the hundreds of women's institutes in the country that is not working for some branch of helpfulness. There is not a woman's organization of any sort that is not in some manner contributing to the great cause. The question is, can they do more?

As the war goes on and extends into the future, the necessities will become greater and more urgent. Supplies of all sorts will be harder to get, while at the same time, there will be more in need. The responsibilities for taking care of the country's defenders will increase and thus grows the importance of every woman in some way taking a hand.

Children can knit and sew and make things useful. In fact, thousands of them are so engaged. But it is a question if more could not be accomplished, both by the women and children by more extensive organization. Up to date there has been little canvassing for helpful aid. Nearly all that has been undertaken has been voluntarily assumed. The time (it is to be feared) is coming when this will not be enough. In Britain, already house-to-house canvassing is being conducted and women are being asked, if they cannot do one thing, to do another. The question is put to them plainly: What will you do to help in the defence of your country, in support of the men who are fighting to keep your homes and land from desecration and violation, for the liberty of nations, for the punishment of wilful wholesale murderers and for the honourable observance of sacred treaties? Answers are generally forthcoming in an agreement to supply each week or month some article or articles that will be useful. Information is afforded on the requirements and the rules of the service that is asked. In this way a great deal is accomplished, women and girls employing many a spare minute that otherwise would be wasted.

Our women are doing much, but are they really doing all they can? As individuals, many of them doubtless are, but are they encouraging others to do likewise? In these days it is hardly enough to sit down and work one's self. Examples must be followed, and must be forced along. There is not a woman or a child who cannot in some way, help. Comprehensive organization is needed to utilize that way. We should one and all bear in mind that at such a time as the present the non-application or mis-application of effort is as much a sin as wasteful extravagance.

LONDON EXPORTS INCREASE.

Diversion of Trade Caused by British Blockade Responsible.

LONDON, May 10.—Figures collected by Consul General Skinner show that exports from the Port of London to the United States during the first four months of 1916 increased $13,000,000 over the corresponding period last year.

The increase was due chiefly to the diversion of trade caused by the British blockade.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine delatone.

Food of German Soldiers In Trenches Said to Have Been Reduced

LONDON, May 11.—The Danish newspaper Ribestifts Tindende claims to have discovered by a month's investigation that the belief prevails in Germany that it is impossible to continue the war to the end of 1916.

Many in Germany believe that it cannot be maintained through the summer, the paper asserts, and continues:

"The rations of the German soldiers were cut six weeks ago. Meat is becoming rare, bread is limited to 12 ounces daily and food parcels from the soldiers' homes are now forbidden lest the civilians themselves suffer.

"Desertions are numerous, and they include officers. Socialism is spreading amazingly among the troops. Slackness of discipline is evident, resulting from the extremely harsh treatment. The shortage of horses necessitated the reducing of gun teams.

"Ammunition and arms, however, continue to be produced in incredible quantities."

The Koelnische Zeitung announces the discovery of a process of making a certain quality of steel for munitions, for which wolfram, imported at great cost, has been necessary. The paper says:

"No means at the disposal of our enemies can prevent the unexampled elasticity of German organization from being applied to every demand the war imposes.

"A new proof of this is presented in the fact that two Rhenish-Westphalian firms have succeeded in producing steel of the highest efficiency for the so-called 'rapid process work' without wolfram. What this means for the munitions industry will be recognized abroad.

"There is no conceivable profligacy of shells which German industry is not capable of meeting with a still greater output. America can neither with her money nor with her supplies tear open the doors of a German fortress."

GERMANS CLAIM 600 YARDS OF RUSS TRENCHES ON THE RIGA FRONT

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 11.—That the Germans have commenced a new attack on the Russian port of Riga, on a large scale, is indicated by the official German statement to-day claiming the capture of six hundred yards of Russian trenches near Jacobstadt. The Russians also admit the intense ferocity of German attacks in the neighbourhood.

Many Irish Rebels Have Been Punished

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 11.—From the beginning of the Irish rebellion to May 9th, 180 rebels or civilian non-combatants were killed, and 614 wounded, Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Fourteen persons have been executed, the Premier said.

The death sentences of two have been commuted, 73 have been sentenced to penal servitude, six to hard labour, and 1,706 deported.

The Prime Minister said he was leaving for Ireland to-night in order to obtain first hand information about the situation. The Premier said he would consult the authorities in Dublin and make the best possible arrangements for the future government of Ireland.

Doctor Says:—Iron Will Make You 200% Stronger In Ten Days

Ordinary Bonired Phosphorus and Iron Soothes your Nerves, Makes Rich, Red Blood, Makes Rosy Cheeks, and Generally Builds You Up.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Saner, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the astonishingly large number who look frail, talk who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood cannot lend the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you do does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like wheat through a mill with the rollers so set apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and tissue starvation people become miserably weak, nervous, and all run down. Consequently develop all sorts of complaints. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat, some ache so they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, biliousness or liver complaint; some can't sleep at nights; others sleep and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless and all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than useless to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your flagging vital powers for the moment, usually at the expense of your future self. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Bonired Phosphorus with Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous and run down people who were ailing all the time double and even triple their strength and endurance, and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for those reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Bonired Phosphorus with Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth, and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—Bonired Phosphorus with Iron, recommended here, is not a patent medicine nor a secret remedy, but one which is widely known by both doctors and druggists who will tell you that one tablet of this newer form of iron is worth a whole bottle of some medicines. It is dispensed in this city by F. C. Weber's two stores at 50 cents a box.

Friendly Action at Osgoode Swings On the Little Word "Or"

Mr. A. A. Fowler, Prospective Purchaser of Two Wright Lots, Raised Question Regarding Affect of Will on Title of the Property.

The use of the disjunctive "or" in the will of the late John T. Wright, instead of the conjuctive "and," which was evidently the word intended, has led to a friendly action which was heard at Osgoode Hall yesterday. The two lots on the north-east corner of Hunter and Rogers street, were left by the late Mr. Wright, who died in 1905, to his widow, and at her marriage or death were divided to their daughter, Mrs. Jas. A. Fife of Edmonton "or" her heirs. Mr. A. A. Fowler wishes to purchase the property but the question has arisen as to whether the phraseology of the will provides a clear title. Bennett and Goodwill, representing the estate, moved yesterday for a construction of the will, that is as to whether the estate can give a good title to the purchase of the land, and that the purchaser's objections are invalid. Mr. Justice Sutherland reserved his decision. McDonald and McIntosh are solicitors for Mr. Fowler.

$28,490 IS ASSESSED VALUE OF SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL BLOCK

This is Not Inclusive of the School Itself Which is Assessed at $18,500—Amount Includes Property and Buildings.

In considering the question of the South Central School on Tuesday night a member of the Board of Education stated that the entire block of which the school occupies one corner, could not be purhased for less than $50,000.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood expressed the opinion that the entire property with the building could be secured for much less than that sum. He was optimistic that if the Board endeavored to obtain the entire block the initial outlay would not be prohibitive.

The assessor's books for last year presents the following table of assessments of property and buildings.

Bilingual Vote Will Be Reached Some Time To-day

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 11.—That a division will be reached on the Lapointe bilingual resolution some time to-night, that much of the remaining business before parliament would be disposed of on Friday and Saturday, and that prorogation will take place on Wednesday or Thursday next is the general expectation at the capital.

The speeches made yesterday on the bilingual issue have to a considerable degree clarified the situation. So far as can be gathered this morning, the Liberal bolters when the vote is taken will be confined largely to the western members, although there will likely be some from Ontario, including Truax of South Grey.

Exciting Runaway

Yesterday about 11 o'clock Carlos Waller's spirited team of horses, attached to his milk waggon, bolted suddenly opposite the White House of Charlotte street. They spurted out west on Charlotte street until they reached the Monaghan boundary, where they ran up against a tree stump, which brought them to a standstill. The damage was a lot of broken pint milk bottles, a dilapidated wheel, and a badly smashed pole. The horses got off without a scratch, and the rig was not upset. The loss will be considerable, but Carlos was on deck this morning bright and early, all the same.

An Argument For The Use of Gas

The Peterboro' Light & Power Co. Wish to Increase Gas Consumption

In to-day's issue of the Examiner is a talk from the Peterborough Light and Power Company on the use of gas in the home. It is claimed for it that it is a cheap, safe and clean manner in which to cook and bake. The season of the year is arriving when the housekeeper does not wish to have the bother of fires and extreme heat and the installation of gas is suggested as a means of overcoming these advantages.

During the summer months the show rooms of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. will be open Saturday evenings, and those interested are cordially invited to call and see the different styles of gas ranges and other gas appliances.

Labrador Mission

Two large bales of new and second-hand clothing have been sent to Harrington in response to an appeal from there. These warm clothes will be a great boon to the poor fishermen who are in such dire need this year. A box of groceries and other comforts has also been sent to Nurse Bailey, who, for many years has lived a lonely life at Forteau deprived of many things which we consider necessary, in order to minister to the sick and needy people of Labrador.

These donations in addition to the amount previously sent to the Hon. Treasurer Mr. Parker ($150.00), speak well for the generosity of the Peterborough people who have so many claims on them at this time.

"Your husband is a great home-lover, isn't he?" "Yes, especially on the evenings when we're invited out together."

S. A. Boy Scouts

The first hike of the Boy Scouts of the Salvation Army will take place to-night, under Scout Leader Yost, starting from the Temple at 7:30 sharp.

They will march out and wind up at Byersville Temple, take part in a meeting there, and be served with refreshments afterward.

FOOTBALL CLUBS LOSE A NUMBER OF STAR PLAYERS

"We are more than amazed at the glaring advocacy of some people that football clubs should pay the war tax," says the Athletic News. "Rightly or wrongly we have construed the spirit behind the tax as suggesting that those who enjoy their amusements at the present time, thanks to the brave services of our army and navy, should contribute something directly to the upkeep of the forces.

"We have no wish to minimize the services of those engaged on munitions, or any other national service at home, but they have every cause to be thankful that the work they are doing is free from the risks faced by soldiers and sailors.

"This is not the time to cavil over who should pay. 'Tis true the cost of living has grown, but we are now dealing with a recreation and an amusement, and we cannot imagine any man spared the risks of those who daily face death for their country begrudging a penny extra for his amusement. Let us be grateful and pay.

The Roll of Honor.

Word has been received of the death of Andrew Ross, the old Royal High School and Scottish International forward.

Ross played in all three matches in season 1904-5 and against Wales and Ireland in 1909, but he spent the greater part of the intervening period abroad. He was a marine engineer by profession, and was abroad when the war broke out, throwing up his profession to join the army. Ross went to the front with an infantry battalion, and his death took place in the trenches.

Still Another.

[illegible] is the latest Scottish athletic internationalist to lose his life in the war. None of the others were precisely a contemporary of the old Dennistoun Harrier, but the man who beat him in the international half-mile when he was Scottish champion, J. E. Finnegan, also died a soldier's death. An international of a later period Lieutenant T. Jack is reported to have officiated at a recent sports meeting in Egypt, when two Edinburgh Harriers, R. Davie and W. McEwan, were among the successful competitors.

Full Back Injured.

The supporters of Manchester City and the followers of football generally, will learn with regret that W. Henry, the right full back, has met with an injury whilst undergoing his army training. Henry joined the Glasgow Yeomanry a few weeks ago, and recently he was given permission by the Manchester City Directors to assist Glasgow Rangers, his old club.

A Famous Junior.

Footballers will learn with sincere regret of the death from wounds received in action of Sergeant David Parker, of the H.L.I. the popular Ashfield right wing forward of a few years ago. "Davie" who latterly assisted one of the Denny Clubs was a Boys' Brigade product, as also was his brother Robert, the Rangers and Everton centre.

Was Leeds City Back.

J. McQuillan, the Leeds City back, who has been assisting his old team at Hull this season, has been seriously injured. Working on munitions at Hull, he was engaged near a grindstone which "burst" and caught him on the head and shoulder. In addition to having [illegible] stitches inserted in his head, his collarbone and a wrist are fractured.

In German Trench

Twelve months ago Manchester City sent a number of handkerchiefs on which was reproduced a photograph of the team, to the soldiers at the front. Two of these have been picked up on the battlefield. One which was returned to Manager Mangnall last week, was found in a recently captured German trench.

Gassed.

John McDonald, the left wing player, originally of Raith Rovers, who has assisted Liverpool and Newcastle United, as well as other clubs in Scotland, has been badly 'gassed' at the front.

HOW do your shirts treat you when they come back from the wash? Do the neckbands pinch, or do they remain as comfortable as before? This is a test that few neckbands meet.

W. G. & R. "Red Label" shirts can, because the neckband materials are thoroughly shrunk before the bands are cut.

Look for the "Red Label."

"Three of a Kind" Delighted a Big Audience

Enjoyable Entertainment in the Conservatory Hall Last Evening —The Programme

The large audience that attended the entertainment in the Conservatory hall last evening was more than delighted with the programme presented. A one act farce entitled "Three of a kind", given by seven girls was the outstanding feature of the evening and was mirth provoking in its ludicrous and ridiculous situations. Each one portrayed the character she represented in a manner altogether creditable, reflecting th highst praise on Mrs. Corrigal who trained them.

Assisting on this occasion was Miss Bertha Louise Tamblyn of Toronto who sang two numbers of her own composition, in one of which, a violin obligato was played by Miss Edwina Palmer. Miss Tamblyn possesses a voice of much richness and purity of tone and her solos last evening were much enjoyed.

Miss Ioline Wedd won unstinted applause in her solo dance, interpreting the chopin valse, Op. 64. No. 2.

That splendid musical organization, the Conservatory orchestra, rendered two dual numbers that were well received.

The Programme

The programme was as follows:

1. (a) Overture—Weber.
   (b) "Pizaicato"—Strauss
2. (a) "Carmen"—Bizet.
   (b) "Carnival March"—Faust.

Orchestra.

3. Chopin Valse, Op. 64, No. 2.—Interpreted in solo dance. Ioline Wedd.
4. (a) "Spring is Here"—Bertha Louise Tamblyn.
   (b) "Mother's World"—Bertha Louise Tamblyn.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Pte. Gordon Carroll, Hall's Glen, killed in battle fields in France, April 24, 1916.

He went into the battlefields,
Ho fought the deadly foe;
Our brave Canadian soldier,
Was not afraid to go.
He left his home and country,
His friends all so dear;
He gave his life for freedom,
He was not afraid to go.
He left a dear kind mother,
A father kind and true;
Sisters and brothers they are nine
All dearly loved him to.
He left a good position,
Brakesman on the train;
To go to the bloody battle.
When shots and shells did rain.
When news came in our little town,
I quickly spread around;
The friends they felt it sadly,
When they heard that he was gone
He was a brave young soldier,
At the age of twenty one;
He gave his young life for his country,
Our Saviours will be done.
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled;
He died in the trenches,
It was our Saviours will.
He left his home and country,
To Battle for the right;
Our brave Canadian soldier,
Was not afraid to fight.
In heaven we hope to meet him,
Where no battle will be fought;
And our brave Canadian Soldier,
Will be found among the lot.
Dear Gordon we all miss you
From our little corner dear;
But hope some day to meet you,
In a brighter land than here.
He was huddled on the earth,
To bleed up in the sky;
Our brave Canadian soldier,
Was not afraid to die.

When the 93rd Battalion gets into camp at Barriefield, they will be able to put a soccer team in the field that will make the other battalions in camp look to their laurels. Some very clever football players are members of the 93rd and the only difficulty will be selecting the best team from all the good material available.

Owing to the absence of Sergt. Major Miller, Sergt. Jay will be Pte Chas. Cooke's opponent in the special bayonet bout at the armouries to night. The members of the 93rd are expecting something good from the two veterans.

A special meeting of the Dummer Council, in compliance with the direction of the Reeve, was held in the town hall on Saturday evening, May 6th, for the purpose of co-operating with the adjoining municipalities of Asphodel, Norwood, Havelock and Belmont, in the matter of assisting to provide a field kitchen for "D" Company. The following resolution was passed by the Council:

"Moved by Mr. Webster, seconded by Mr. Clifford, that A., B. and C. companies are already furnished with a field kitchen that we will contribute our proportionate share to to furnish one for D Company provided that the other municipalities will contribute each their proportionate share for the same purpose. —Carried.

R. DEEN, Clerk.

To capture a German prisoner and find that he had been a Toronto citizen for seven years was the odd experience of Pte. Reginald Sandford 105 Shuter street, Toronto, and formerly of Fenelon Falls, who is well known in hockey circles. During the recent St. Eloi fighting Pte. Sandford was overcome by shell shock and was admitted to No. 3 Stationary Hospital Wimereux, France. From there he writes: "I am getting along all right, and expect to be in the trenches soon again. It is getting pretty hot there now, I can tell you, but it is not half bad as one doesn't seem to notice it in the excitement. I think the war is going to last a long time. We captured some Germans and among them was one who had worked in Toronto for seven years. He knew me, but I didn't remember him. He says he came back just before the war started. It just shows what we are up against. We are fighting every day. One day there were about 100 of us crossing an open field in daylight, and the Germans spotted us and started throwing shells. You should have seen us scatter. It was the best extended order you ever saw. We kept on lying down and then running when we saw a chance. Tom Longboat was not in it. Tell any of the hockey boys you see that if they have not already joined, they ought to sign up as we are in need of all the help we can get."

Corp. Stan. Anderson of the Machine Gun Section of the 93rd Battalion, is attending the Machine Gun School at Kingston.

Lance Corp. H. O'Keefe of the 93rd Machine Gun Section, will attend the special school of bayonet fighting and physical training at London in addition to the non-coms. mentioned yesterday. They will leave for London on the early C.P.R. train next Sunday.

Ald Dobbin has received notice that the following women, wives of members of the 93rd Battalion, have been listed for separation allowance:

Grieves, Mrs. Dan, Norwood.
Hill, Mrs. Sherman E. Lakefield.
Hogan, Mrs. M. A. Oak Lake.
Newhall, Mrs. Jas, 340 Water St.
Post, Mrs. Geo. F., Glenalda. Chandos.
Post, Mrs. Warren T., Glenalda. Chandos.
Rathwell, Mrs. John, Norwood.
Reid, Mrs. Thos. P., 149 Maria street.
Rowe, Mrs. Geo. H. Lakefield.
Snider, Mrs W. Edgar, Glenalda.
Sweeney, Mrs. John 209½ Hunter street.
Teal, Mrs. Wm., Norwood.
Tighe, Mrs. Ed., Lakefield.
Trickey, Mrs. Henry, Apsley.
Walker, Mrs. Gildson, Norwood.
Wegg, Mrs. Robt. E., 22 Antrim street.
Wingett, Mrs. L. Lakefield.
Winter, Mrs. Geo. Glenalda.

BIG CROWD IS EXPECTED TO-NIGHT

Everything is ready for the big athletic night in the armouries to-night, under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, the proceeds of which will be given to the 93rd Battalion. In addition to the events already advertised a number of other bouts have been added, and an interesting and varied programme will be provided. Boxing, wrestling, bayonet fighting, card tricks, ventriloquism and music will make the evening a noteworthy one. The admission is 25c. to all parts of the armouries, and there promises to be a crowded house. Come along and help the battalion.

SETTING A BAD EXAMPLE

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, May 11.— Hon. Isaac Lucas, Attorney General of Toronto, to-day expressed surprise that Toronto should set so bad an example to smaller municipalities as to refuse to pay provincial war tax and go to courts about it. Mr. Lucas said there was positively no doubt that the government had a right to impose this tax and the fact that Toronto cheerfully paid it last year, was proof of it.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 11.—Live stock receipts light, market strong. Prices unchanged.

COUNT WAS IN RUSS. ARMY

Something About the Husband of The Irish "Joan of Arc."

MOSCOW, May 11.—The Russky Slovo has had an interview with Count Markievics, husband of the Countess Markievics, who was sentenced to death by court-martial for the part she played in the recent uprising in Dublin, but whose sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

The newspaper learned that the Count is an artist and dramatist. Responding to the appeal of Count Duke Nicolas to the Poles, Count Markievics said he enlisted in the Russian army as a trooper in a Hussar regiment. Later he contracted typhoid fever and was discharged from the army on the ground that he was unfit for further service.

Justice Prendergast Declines Application for Bail.

WINNIPEG, May 11.—Thomas Kelly, who returned to Winnipeg to-day from Chicago on an order of the United States supreme court, to stand trial on criminal charges arising from his connection, as contractor, with the Manitoba parliament buildings, is now in the provincial jail to await the disposal of his case by the assize court.

Justice Prendergast refused an application for Kelly's release on bail. Edward Anderson applied before Justice Prendergast for Kelly's release declaring there was no reason why bail should not be granted. R. A. Bonnar, for the crown, reviewed the progress of the case and Kelly's fight against extradition, and left the matter with the court. The judge then refused the application.

Czar May Throw Half A Million Men Into France During Summer

Vast Troop Movement Over Archangel Route is Presaged --One Hundred Vessels Await Ice-break

NEW YORK, May 12.—The London correspondent of The Herald cabled yesterday morning:

The recent order of the Russian Government in closing the White Sea to all but Government traffic is looked upon in military circles as presaging important troop movements from that locality. The ice in the White Sea is now breaking up, and according to recent information as published in these despatches there were more than one hundred merchant steamships before Archangel awaiting a chance to discharge cargoes and clear from the White Sea.

Within the last few weeks all information relative to ship movements at Archangel has been a closed book.

CONTRAST IS MARKED.

This situation is in marked contrast to the giving out of news from Archangel during 1915. It is known that the railroad from Petrograd to Archangel has been changed during the last winter from a narrow gauge to standard gauge and, furthermore, that this railroad has been double-tracked. The distance by railroad from Moscow to Archangel is only 752 miles, as against nearly five thousand miles by the trans-Siberian to Dalny on the Pacific coast.

The Herald despatches indicated, on the occasion of the first landing of Russian troops at Marseilles, that these forces came from the Pacific, a surmise which has since been confirmed by recent admission from France. The sea journey from Dalny to Marseilles is approximately nine thousand miles, and the distance from Vladivostok to Marseilles by sea is 9,526 miles.

VESSELS IN WAITING.

Archangel could not be used during the spring because of ice conditions, but with the breaking up of the pack in the White Sea and the liberating of a great fleet of more than one hundred steamships, the Russians have it in their power to despatch on vessels which would otherwise leave Archangel in water ballast a contingent estimated at one hundred thousand men. That a force of this size can be transported on one hundred steamships of the type employed in the trans-Atlantic-Archangel service is made all the more practicable, it is said, by reason of the fact that the Russians are not sending any arms or field equipment into France.

Their soldiers destined for service on French soil are leaving Russia void of all but the clothes they stand in, plus overcoat and blanket. For the Russians France is the country where they are to be armed and equipped, and France is able to render this service.

As against the nine thousand miles of sea journey required in voyaging from Dalny to Marseilles, the steaming route which it may be expected that transports will take from Archangel to the French coast should not cover, it is estimated, more than 2,750 miles.

With the Archangel route open it is believed that Russia will be able, if so required, to throw 500,000 men into France during the coming summer months.

War Brings Into Being "Cripple City" of Vienna

To get an idea of all the awful misery created by the present world war one has to visit the "Cripple City" of Vienna. Far out in the 10th district, away from the noise and bustle of the heart of the Austrian capital, a small town of maimed soldiers has sprung into existence. Every one of the 3,000 inhabitants, with the exception of the surgeons, attendants, and instructors, has lost one or more limbs on the battlefield. The "Cripple City" was originally a school of war invalids founded by Dr. Spitzy late in 1914. The institution soon became too small, as cripples arrived from all sides. When the founder found himself unable to receive more unfortunates he appealed to the Austro-Hungarian war department for aid, and a military hospital with 42 other large buildings was turned over to him. Many workshops and dormitories have been erected and the colony now consists of about 80 buildings.

Their Training.

Many of the inhabitants of this strange, sad town have lost both legs and are helpless when they arrive, but within a comparatively short time, in three or four months, they not only walk about with artificial limbs, but also do useful work which makes them self-supporting. After the legless invalids have been examined by Dr. Spitzy and his assistants their training begins. Short stilts are fastened to the stumps of the amputated limbs, and, hanging on ropes guided by trolleys, they begin to hobble about. In a week or two most of them are able to walk without the supporting ropes. Then they receive higher stilts, and these are lengthened from week to week until they reach normal hight.

After more practice artificial legs with joints take the place of the wooden stilts and the cripples are soon able to throw away their crutches. They not only walk with ease, but also run, jump, dance and are now ready for instruction in some trade. In 32 workshops and 22 classrooms the cripples' work or study six to eight hours every day. Each one of them is taught to make the best possible use of the limbs he still possess and the artificial substitutes of the amputated arms or legs, as most cases special tools have to be constructed for the maimed men. In one of the workshops we see a watchmaker who has lost both of his legs in one of the battles in the Carpathian mountains busily at work at his old trade. In another shop carpenters and cabinetmakers with one or two artificial arms handle their saws and planes and in the barber shop barbers with cork legs and one artificial arm shave their comrades and trim their hair. A wood carver whose right leg has been torn off by a shell in Serbia is making an artificial hand, which will enable his friend, a clerk, to write again.

See Others; Take Heart.

When the cripples first arrive it is generally hard to convince them that they will ever be able to earn their living and enjoy life, but they soon take hope when they see their comrades, who came before them, at work. The "Cripple City" contains workshops for machinists, tinsmiths, electricians, opticians, watchmakers, painters, compositors, masons, stone cutters, bakers, sign-painters, butchers, barbers and shoemakers, and also schools for stenographers and typewriters, telegraphers, bookkeepers, chauffeurs and photographers. Even a school of music has been organized and the colony has an orchestra of fifty odd cripples. Farmers an laborers receive their training and instuction on a large tract of land which belongs to the army department and has been transformed into a garden.

Cripples who are not able to handle any tools are taught to run automatic machines. In one of the factories of this unique town machines daily turn out 10,000 pairs of shoes for the soldiers in the field, and in another shop hundreds of sewing machines produce uniforms, while in one large building dozens of machines represent a capital of more than a million dollars and have been donated to the cripples by manufacturers.

SENT RUSSIANS WEST TO AID FINAL STROKE

Ten Thousand Men Came to France in First Two Detachments—25,000 There Now

TRAVELLED 17,500 MILES

GERMANS TRIED TWICE TO ATTACK SHIPS BRINGING THEM FROM DALNY—MEN EQUIPPED AFTER LANDING.

Marseilles, April 25th.—The second installment of the Russian contingent for France landed here to-day after a land and sea voyage of approximately 17,500 miles from Moscow overland to Port Dalny, and thence by water transport.

The total number of Russian troops now landed, supplied with French rifles and sent on to Camp Mirabeau, three or four miles along the coast from Marseilles, for a two days' rest before being conveyed to the depot at Mailly, near Troyes, to prepare for service on the French front, is estimated at something under 10,000.

Since the foregoing was written three additional contingents of Russian troops have landed at Marseilles. On the basis of the size of the first two contingents something like 25,000 Russians are now in camp or in the field on the western front.

The voyage of the Russians constitutes a record in military transport history for distance and diversity of route. The soldiers who were especially chosen from every division of the Russian army were concentrated in Moscow under the supervision of General Lochwitsky, who landed with the first contingent on Thursday. They entrained for carriage by the Trans-Siberian Railroad across nearly 7,500 miles of country to Port Dalny, near Port Arthur. From there they voyaged about 10,000 miles along the coasts of half the eastern world, the route being from Dalny along the Corean shore, then through the Yellow and the Chinese seas, passing Shanghai and Hong Kong, to Singapore. The transports entered the Indian Ocean by the Straits of Malacca, got a glimpse Southern India at Ceylon, and so made their way by Aden and the Red Sea to the Suez Canal and Port Said.

Once in the Mediterranean the run to Marseilles was as straight as precautionary measures against enemy submarines would admit.

The arrival of the Russians was a great surprise to the general public in France, their coming being known only to officials and to a few newspaper men in Paris. On the other hand the coming of the contingent was in all probability well known to the German authorities. General Lochwitsky told a correspondent that two attempts were made by the Germans to attack the transports while on their way from Port Dalny to Marseilles. The first was made in the neighborhood of Shanghai, but failed, it is said, owing to the non-arrival of German heavy gun ammunition. The second was to be be made near Singapore but warning reached the Russians by wireless from the British Admiral in the straits, but the Russians avoided the attack by changing their route.

The contingent arrived without arms or military equipment of any kind. As they stepped off the transports French rifles with removable bayonets were handed to them—an incident which may suggest to the Germans that the French have a surplus of munitions.

The sending of a Russian contingent to France is more than the demonstration of friendship, which it is officially declared to be. Its ultimate object is to try out out the question of further military aid to the French. The war, it is generally believed in all European countries, will be decided on the western front, so that keeping this probability in view, it may well be that the Russian soldiers now landing on French shores are only harbingers of more substantial help to come.

Verdun Drive Meant As Prelude to Peace

Among financial and business men in England, according to a passenger who arrived here yesterday from London, there is a strong feeling that Germany hopes to capture Verdun and then notify the neutral nations that she is ready to consider terms of peace. Some optimistic persons believe the war will have ended by October, but military officials think it is certain to last in 1917, and preparations are being made for another Winter campaign.

Some officials at the Admiralty are of the opinion that the German fleet will come out into the North Sea, but advices from Berlin seem to indicate that the Kaiser's policy is to wait developments favorable to Germany before trying this.

With regard to the Far Eastern prospects, this opinion was expressed recently by a London editor who has access to valuable sources of information:

"I believe that the only reason that Rumania has not yet definitely joined the Allies is the hesitation of Sir Edward Grey to make concessions to the Rumanian demands with regard to Bulgaria. Sir Edward is, rightly or wrongly, considered to have Bulgarian sympathies, while Rumania not unnaturally insists that the provisions of the treaty of Bucharest shall be upheld by Great Britain.

"It is considered almost certain that Greece will follow the course pursued by Rumania, and with these two countries on the side of the Allies, a forward move to roll up the Austrian flank would immediately be come possible."

"Poison Pen" Again Excites Flushing

Flushing is again stirred by the discovery that another "poison pen" writer has been wielding the serpent's quill there. Mrs. Gertrude Westhead, wife of James Andrew Westhead, who is connected with an importing house in Manhattan, was the recipient of the missive. Mrs. Westhead kept silent since she received the letter last Thursday until yesterday when she announced that a scurrilous missive had been sent to her.

The letter bore the postmark of Flushing and was addressed to "Mrs Gertrude Westhead, No. 43 North Seventeenth street, Flushing, N.Y." The writing is in a feminine hand. Mrs. Westhead declared yesterday that she was confident about the identity of the sender.

"It is a woman, and she doesn't live far from my home," declared Mrs. Westhead. "The woman I suspect of writing the letter has nothing to do but play bridge whist and go to afternoon dances."

Alfred J. Kennedy, postmaster of Flushing, said he would begin an investigation to-day.

"If I find the letter went through the mails and it is of a malicious character the federal officials will start an investigation at once," said the postmaster, "but to date we have received no formal complaint."

Recently, Dr. George Drew Egbert pastor of the First Congregational Church, of Flushing, and the Dominion Fathers who are conducting a mission at St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church spoke on grasping and evils.

FRANCE INDUSTRIALLY BUSY.

No Such Things as Unemployment Now—All Lines Active.

PARIS, May 10.—Unemployment, which was such a difficult problem at the beginning of the war, is now practically non-existent in France, according to a report issued to-day by the Minister of Labour. On the contrary there is a dearth of both skilled and unskilled labour which is keenly felt in view of the remarkable revival of industries, not only those employed in supplying the needs of the army, but also in the civil and export trade.

Government statistics show that at the end of January over 80 per cent of the factories were working at full capacity and the number of employees actually exceeded by one per cent. the total in normal times.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this just get about four ounces of plain common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

To remove mud from clothes scrape with the edge of a penny. This will not destroy the nap of the cloth as will a sharp knife.

Shabby oak should be brushed over with warm beer and then thoroughly dry polished with beeswax and turpentine.

To prevent the iron from sticking to the clothes while ironing put a teaspoonful of kerosene into the hot starch and let it boil up.

Misery in Back, Headache and Pain in Limbs.

"Dear Mr. Editor—For more than a year I suffered with misery in the back, dull headache, pain in the limbs, was somewhat constipated and slept poorly at night until I was about ready to collapse. Seeing an account of the wonderful qualities of "Anuric," prepared by Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., I sent for a box, and before using the whole box I felt and still feel improved. My sleep is refreshing, misery reduced, and life is not the drag it was before. I most cheerfully recommend this remedy to sufferers from like ailments.

Yours truly, W. A. ROBERTS.

NOTE: You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Dr. Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists of Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints, and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "Anuric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing Tablet, Dr. Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

I know of one or two leading druggists in town who have managed to procure a supply of "Anuric" for their anxious customers in and around this locality. If not obtainable send one dime by mail to Dr. Pierce for trial package or 50 cents for full treatment.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"THE HARBOUR OF DOUBT"

BY FRANK WILLIAMS

A rope made fast to a main-stay and furnished with a hook at its end was slipped into a loop hole at one end of the dory. A similar device caught a similar loop at the other end.

One strong pull and the dory rose out of the nest of four others that lay just aft of the mainmast. A hand swung her outboard and she was lowered away until she danced on the water.

Jimmie Thomas leaped into her, received a tub of briny squid, a dinner-horn, and a breaker of water, besides his rectangular reels with their heavy cord, leads, and two hooks.

"Overside port dory!" came the command, and Kent was sent on his way. Thus one after another the men departed until on board the Lass there remained only the cook and a boy helper Code, as well as Ellinwood, had gone out, for they wished to test the fishing.

These dories were entirely different propositions from the heavy motor-boats that the men used almost entirely near the island. They were light, compact, and properly big enough for only one man, although they easily accommodated two.

The motor dories of Thomas and Code were on board, nested forward, but they were of little use here, where only short distances are covered, and those by rowing.

The nine dories drew away from the schooner, each in a different direction, and until they were a mile or more apart.

Code threw over his little three-fluked anchor. Then he baited his two hooks with bits of tentacle and threw them overboard. With the big rectangular reel in his left hand, he unwound as the leads drew down until they fetched bottom and the line sagged. Unreeling a couple more fathoms of line, he cast the reel aside.

Then he hauled his leads up until he judged them to be some six feet off the bottom and waited.

Almost instantly there was a sharp jerk, and Code, with the skill of the trained fisherman, instantly responded to it with a savage pull on the line and a rapid hand-over-hand as he looped it into the dory. The fish had stuck on. The tough cord sung against the gunnel, and at times it was all the skipper could do to bring up his prize for the great cod darted here and there, dove, rushed, and struggled to avert the end.

Thirty fathoms is a hundred and eighty feet, and, with a huge and desperate fish disputing every inch of the way, it becomes a seemingly endless labour. But at last Code, straining his eyes over the side, caugh a glimpse of quick circles of white in the green and reached for the maul that was stuck under a thwart.

Two more heaves and the cod, open-mouthed, thrashed on the surface. A smart rap on the head with the haul and he came into the dory quietly. There were little pink crabs sticking to him and he did not seem as fat as he should, although he topped the fifty-pound mark.

"Lousy!" said Code. "Lousy and hungry! It's good fishing."

With a short, stout stick at hand he wrenched the hook out of the cod's mouth, baited it, and cast again. The descending bait was rushed and seized. This time both hooks bore victims.

When there were no speckled cod on the hooks there were silvery hake, velvety black pollock, beautiful scarlet sea-pearch that look like little old men, and an occasional ugly dogfish with his Chinese jade eyes.

When the dogfish came the men pulled up their anchors and rowed a mile or so away, for where the dogfish pursues all others fly. He has the shape and traits of his merciless giant brother, the tiger-shark, with the added menace of a horn full of poison in the middle of his back instead of a dorsal fin; an evil, curved horn, the trust of which can be nearly fatal to a man.

The bottom of the dory became covered with a flooring of liquid silver bodies that twined together and rolled with the roll of the dory.

At five o'clock Code wound his line on the reel (he usually used two at a time, but one had been plenty with such fishing), and started to pull for the distant Charming Lass. He was now fully five miles from her, and his nearest neighbour was Bill Kent, three miles away. All hands were drawing in toward her, for they knew they must take a quick mug-up and then dress down until the last cord lay in his shroud of salt.

The schooner lay to the northeast of Schofield, and as he bent to his work he did not see a strange, level mass of gray that advanced slowly toward him. From a distance to the lay observer this mass would have looked like an ordinary cloud-bank, but the experienced eyes of a fisherman would have discerned its ghastly gray hue and its flat contour.

All the afternoon there had been a freshening breeze, and now Schofield found himself rowing against a head sea that occasionally slapped over the high boy of the dory and ran aft over the half ton of fish that lay under his feet.

He had not pulled for fifteen minutes when the whole world about him was suddenly obscured by the thick, woolly fog that swirled past on the wind. It was as though an impenetrable wall had been suddenly built up on all sides a wall that offered no resistance to his progress and yet no egress.

He immediately stopped rowing and rested his oars, listening. No sound came to him except the slap of the increasing waves and the occasional flap of a wet fish in its last struggles.

He carried no pocket compass, and the light gave no hint of the direction of the sun. In the five minutes he sat there the head of his dory swung around and, even had he known the exact compass direction of the Charming Lass before the fog, he would have been unable to find it.

The situation did not alarm him in the least for he had experienced it often before. Reaching into the bow, he drew out the dinner-horn that was part of the equipment of the dory and sent an ear-splitting blast out into the fog.

It seemed as though the opaque walls about him held in the sound as heavy curtains might in a large room; it fell dead on his own ears without any of the reverbant power that sound has in travelling across water.

Once more he listened. He knew that the schooner being at anchor, would be ringing her bell; but he hardly hoped to catch a sound of that. Instead he listened for the answering peal of a horn in one of the other dories. Straining his ears he thought he caught a faint toot ahead of him and to starboard.

He seized his oars and rowed hard for several minutes in the direction of the sound. Then he stopped and, rising to his feet, sent another great blast brawling forth into the fog. Once more he listened and again it seemed as though an answering horn sounded in the distance. But it was fainter this time.

A gust of wind, rougher than the others, swirled the fog about him in great ghostly sheets, turning and twisting it like the clouds of greasy smoke from a fire of wet leaves. The dory rolled heavily, and Code, losing his balance, sprawled forward on the fish, the horn flying from his hand overboard as he tried to save himself.

For a moment only it floated; and then, as he was frantically swinging the dory to draw alongside, it disappeared beneath the water with a low gurgle.

The situation was serious. He was unable to attract attention, and must depend for his salvation upon hearing the horns of the other dories as they approached the schooner. Rowing hard all the time, with frequent short pauses, he strained his ears for the welcome sound.

Sometimes he thought he caught a faint, mellow call; but he soon recognised that these were deceptions, produced in his ears by the memory of what he had heard before. Impatiently he rowed on.

After a while he stopped. Since he could get no track of any one, it was foolish to continue the effort, for every stroke might take him farther and farther out of hearing. Off the other hand if he were headed in the right direction, another dory, trying to fin dthe schooner, might cross his path or come within ear-shot.

He was still not in the least worried by the situation. Men in much worse ones had been rescued from them without thinking anything of them.

But the rising wind and sea gave him something to think of. The waves found it a very easy matter to climb aboard the heavily laden dory, and occasionally he had to bail with the can in the bows provided for the purpose.

An hour passed, and at the end of that time he found that he was bailing almost constantly. There was only one thing to do under the circumstances. The gaff lay under his hand. This is a piece of broom handle, to the end of which a stout, sharp hook is attached, and the instrument is used in landing fish which are too heavy to swing inboard on the slender fishing-line.

Code took the gaff and commenced to throw the fish over the side one at a time. He hated the waste of splendid cod, but things had now got to a pass where his own comfort and safety were at stake. Once the fish were gone, with the cleanliness of long habit, he swabbed the bottom and sides of the dory with an old rag and rinsed them with water which he afterwards bailed out.

The dory now rose high and dry on the waves; But Code found it inexcusingly difficult to row because the water tended to "crab" his oars and twist them suddenly out of his hands.

To keep his head to the wind he paddled slowly listening for any sound of a boat.

Another hour passed and darkness began to come down. The pearly gray fog lost its colour and became black, like smoke from a burning oil tank. He knew the sun was below the horizon. He condered if any of the other men had been caught. If none were gone but himself he reasoned the schooner would have come in search of him.

So, from listening for the horn of a dory, he tried to catch the hoarse voice of a patent fog-horn that would be grinding on the forecastle head.

By this time the wind was a gale, and he knew it was driving him astern despite his rowing. The waves were no longer the little choppy seas that the Lass had encountered since leaving Freekirk Head but hustling, slopping hills that attacked him in endless and rapid succession. His progress was a continuous climb to one summit, followed by a dizzing swoop into the following depth.

Each climb was punctuated at the top by a gallon or so of water slopped into the dory from the crest of the wave. These influxes became so frequent that he was obliged to bail very often. Consequently he unshipped one oar and crawling to the stern, shipped the other in the notch of the sternboard.

Here he sculled with one hand so as to keep the dory's head to the wind, and bailed with the other. Being aft, his weight caused the water to run down to him, and he could thus perform the two operations at the same time.

When pitch blackness had come he knew that he was out of reach of the schooner's horn. His only chance lay in the fog's lifting or the passing of some schooner.

His principal concern was for the wind. It was just the time of year for those "three-day" nor'-easters that harry the entire coast of North America. When the first excitement of his danger passed he was assailed by the fierce hunger of nervous and physical exhaustion, but there was no food aboard the dory. He had, of course, the breaker of water that was part of his regular equipment; but this was more for use during a long day of fishing than for the emergency of being lost at sea.

He took a hearty drink and prepared for the long watch of the night.

By a wax match several hours later he found that it was midnight. His struggle with wind and sea had now become unequal. He found it impractical to remain longer in the stern attempting to scull. So very cautiously he set about his last defensive measure.

Taking the two oars and the anchor, as well as the thwarts he bound them together securely with the anchor rodine. This drag he hove from the bow of the dory, and it swung the boat's head into the wind. Schofield, with the bailer in one hand, lay flat in the bottom.

With the increasing sea, water splashed over the sides so that his exertions never ceased. The chill of the night penetrated his soaked garments, and this, with his exhaustion, produced a stupor. The whistle of the wind and the hiss of foaming crests became dream sounds.

JUST GOOD ENOUGH TO BE DANGEROUS?

If Poor Advertising Mediums were ENTIRELY worthless, they would not be Dangerous. For they would not, then, make any appeal whatever to sensible advertisers.

But an ADVERTISING MEDIUM which has a LITTLE MERIT is like "a little knowledge," a dangerous thing." Some Business Men there are, always, who—for considerations of "cheapness" etc.—will either rely upon such mediums wholly, or give them an absurdly large part in their Advertising Campaigns.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Leanox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Specter Of Goruckpoor

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The garrison of Goruckpoor, in the province of Oudh, India, in the year 1857 consisted of 4,000 men, and about half of these were split up into small detachments and stationed here and there in the north to keep order among the hillmen and punish raiding dacoits. Dacoits are bands of robbers under command of a chief who holds a religious influence over them, and they are yet the pests of India along the foothills of the Himalayas. They are daring men and make fighters, and very few British soldiers who fall into their hands are spared.

We were in the midst of what seemed to be peace when the government dispatched a large train of treasure and military supplies from Goruckpoor for Ghazipa. Colonel Kemble, who had been ordered to take command of the garrison at the latter place, being just back from a year's leave of absence in England, was with the train, and the whole was escorted by 250 cavalrymen. The route for the train brought it past our station, where it rested for a day and then moved on. In a defile fifteen miles to the north of us it was ambushed by over a thousand dacoits and suffered a severe misfortune. There was not only a heavy loss in killed and wounded, but the treasure and a portion of the supplies were captured and run off by the dacoits.

The remnant of the train returned to us and went into camp until re-enforcements could come up, and the bullet headed, tyrannical Colonel Kemble, whose obstinacy and recklessness had brought about the disaster, proceeded to make it red hot for everybody. It was a well populated country, with hundreds of loyal natives to be picked up, but the colonel proceeded to look upon each and every one as guilty of having had a hand in the attack on the train. More than a score were shot or hanged offhand, while many were whipped at the post or ordered out of the district. It was a reign of terror for three weeks, and the end was a fitting one.

My own detachment one day brought in a mere boy whom we had found cowering in a thicket. The colonel bulldosed and browbeat him and finally ordered his execution on the ground that he was a spy. It was only when he knew that he must die that the young fellow braced up and showed his courage, and as he was being led away to execution he said to the colonel:

"Sahib Colonel, I am innocent, and you will be punished for my death. You may shoot me and bury my body, but my spirit will follow you to the grave."

Half an hour later he was dead, but he was the last one to be executed. At midnight that night the colonel called the sentinel into his tent, and, with white face and trembling voice and the perspiration standing out on his forehead, he said:

"Man, do you see that boy sitting on the chest?"

"I see nobody, sir," replied the sentinel.

"He is there, I tell you! He followed me to mess and back, and he has been here in plain sight all the evening. Take him away."

"But there's nobody here, sir."

And there wasn't. The sentinel called in two officers, who looked and searched in vain and assured Colonel Kemble that no boy was present. He tried to turn it off with a laugh, but in less than twenty-four hours every man in camp knew that the colonel was haunted by a specter. He made a brave effort to bluff it out, but it was useless. The specter followed at his heels by day and sat by his bedside at night, and in a week the strong, aggressive man was becoming a mental wreck. He turned to us for pity and sympathy, but we had little to give. He had been brutal and without mercy in his vengeance.

The surgeon looked upon the case at first as some disorder of the brain, but later on acknowledged that it was something beyond his medicine. No one else could see the specter. The colonel would say that it sat beside him or stood in the door, but there was nothing for the eyes to rest upon. He would draw his sword and cut and slash and thrust at the specter, but he could not harm it. By the surgeon's advice the colonel returned to Goruckpoor. It was reported as a case of breaking down over mental anxiety, but hundreds of people came to know better. The specter followed him back, followed him to the house of a friend, sat with him through every night and dogged at his heels through every hour of the day. He could no more shake it off than he could change the color of his eyes. He made the gamest sort of fight, knowing that his future career was at stake, and at length all men came to pity him—pity him and avoid him as one accursed. He was medically treated, given brief furloughs and every effort made to build him up, but at the end of eight months, every day and every night of which had been a terror to him, he ended by blowing out his brains.

Was it a case of a man haunted by a spirit seeking revenge? It was not so reported officially, but from first to last and from the highest to the lowest, and this includes two surgeons, it was fully and firmly believed that it was, and the uncanny affair had a great influence over other officers in their future treatment of the natives.

A Juvenile Critic.

A small girl of five was walking recently with her mother through the public garden in Boston. The Washington monument attracted her attention, and she inquired what it was.

"That," replied her mother, "is a statue of George Washington."

The little lady regarded it critically for some moments, and then she said, "Washington didn't take a very good statue, did he, mother?"—Everybody's.

Afflicted with Lame Back

THREE YEARS AGO COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Goudaw, 689 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

REVENGE AT DOUAUMONT

Hun Treachery and French Cold Steel in Fierce Contest

A thrilling story of the defence of Douaumont has been told by a French officer to a British correspondent. The first Germans seen were advancing from the fort. They were wearing French helmets, and for an instant the French hesitated. The Major shouted out "Do not fire; they are French." He had scarcely uttered the words when he fell with a bullet in his throat. Another officer at once took his place, and cried: "Fire, fire! They're the Boches!"

Meanwhile the enemy tried to surround the French and capture the village. When the position was in serious danger a single French company charged the German masses, which were trying to force their way into the lines. There was a terrible hand-to-hand struggle, the bayonet and rifle butt opened many a hole in the German ranks, but the fight was too unequal, and at last the Frenchmen were overwhelmed by numbers. The last survivor of the company died still charging forward. The German troops at this moment began to move towards the southwest entrance to the village, and it was clear that their objective was the crest near the farm of Thiaumont, 500 yards south of Douaumont. A captain at once took steps to check their advance, and a machine gun opened upon them. Out of about 100 Germans scarcely 20 were left capable of retreating.

Some days later the French artillery concentrated on Douaumont, and the lesson that the Boches received was a consolation for everything the French had gone through. At nightfall a French counter-attack was carried out by two battalions of two neighboring regiments. After a tremendous rifle fire, a shout was raised of "Forward à la baionette." The attack was successful, and the French first line was carried forward beyond the village. The Germans returned three times in massed formation, but were stopped dead by rifle and machine guns, and next morning the French counted about 500 corpses in front of their trench. The Germans have never been able to advance at this point since.

WHERE WOMEN FAIL

Berliners Find Necessary Work Too Hard For Women

Years ago the streets of the German capital were cleaned by men of military age. Their places were taken by boys, and now women are being introduced as fast as the youths grow up to military age and enter the army. It is a common sight on any street to see coal being carried into residences from teams by women instead of men. The underground railway companies of Berlin installed women as ticket choppers, and then introduced them as guards. When it was found that their dress frequently got caught in doors, the companies did not go back to male help but ordered the women to don bloomers, and there are more of them to be seen than men.

Even Germans, accustomed to seeing women performing heavy duties, gasped a little when they heard that the steam railroads, in addition to installing women at the stations for minor duties, had put them in as track walkers, switch tenders and track layers. Yet the Prussian railways today have a large number of women now in their employ.

It is almost universally admitted that the women do not adequately substitute for the men. Women conductors, for instance, are said to be about 50 per cent. as efficient as their male predecessors, and only about half of those who go to work as conductors are able to stand the strain. There has been a notable increase in certain women's diseases resulting directly from this work. Few of the trades are harder or more strenuous than metal work, which is booming because of the need of munitions. Yet there are thousands of women thus employed to-day, who do not seem to mind the heavy work, and who are earning, relatively, a great deal of money.

Appropriate Name

Old Captain Flint had gone in for house erection, and had built a row of "highly desirable residential villas" three miles from anywhere, because the land was cheap. Now that they were finished, he had taken an old friend to have a look at them.

"What shall I call them, Jim?" he asked.

"Well," said his friend, "being as this is an out-of-the-way place, I'm blowed if I wouldn't call them Calais Buildings."

"Why Calais Buildings?" inquired the captain.

"Well," explained his friend, "it don't look as though Calais will ever be taken, and these houses seem to the same kind."

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

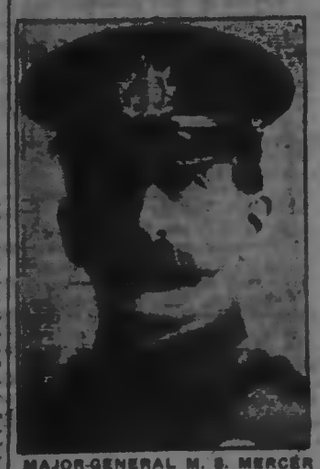
PEERAGES KILLED OUT

Aristocracy of England Knows How to Sacrifice

The old French adage "noblesse oblige" was never more true than it is in Great Britain at the present time. The peerage of England is paying toll far more willingly than any other class of the community, numerous as have been the heroes in all ranks of society. The much-abused House of Lords refused to pass a resolution authorizing the return home of members absent at the front despite the fact that there have been definite fears that before the war is over the British peerage will be practically wiped out. Thirty heirs to peerages have been killed, and as many more wounded. Fifty younger sons of peers have been killed and hundreds of them wounded. The death toll of the brothers and cousins of members of the House of Lords is enormous. The aristocracy is, after all, not a very large corporation, but at the latest computation, 218 peers and 424 sons of peers were serving with the colors. At present a goodly number of peerages are held by children who will not be fitted for the exercise of their legislative duties for some years to come.

Taking them as a whole, the handsome young men whose pictures used to ornament the pages of the London illustrated weeklies whenever a great social event was to be depicted, and seemed mere butterflies of fashion, have shown that they do not value their lives when the future of their great and glorious Motherland is at stake. Nor does Britain stand altogether alone in this; the hereditary aristocracy of all the nations at war on either side have shown an equal devotion. The war has shown the real truth that lay back of Gilbert's celebrated satirical lines:

"High rank involves no shame,
We boast an equal claim
With him of humble name
To be respected."



MAJOR-GENERAL M. S. MERCER

who commanded the 1st Infantry Brigade at the Battle of Ypres. Major-General Mercer won a C.B. and has been mentioned in despatches for his work at the front. He is a former commander of the Queen's Own.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can work and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

ORGANIZED "TERRIERS"

Lord Esher Much Snubbed by Army, But Big Figure

Lord Esher, president of the Territorial Force Association, which has done such valuable work in the organization of the "Terriers," is a man of extraordinary activities and accomplishments, and there is scarcely anyone inside or outside the House of Lords who has played a bigger part in contemporary politics and army organization. Lord Esher began his career by writing a letter to the "Times," in which, curiously enough, he discussed the Brussels Conference for Revising the Rules of War. He was only twenty-two at the time, and this letter created no small stir. And it is amusing to recall that one of his letters to the Navy League aroused the ire of the Kaiser, who wrote to Lord Tweedmouth assuring him that England need not worry about his fleet, and adding with characteristic "kultur" that Lord Esher might confine himself to looking after the sewers at Windsor Castle! This was a cheap sneer at Lord Esher's post as Secretary to H.M. Office of Works, a position he held for seven years.

Lord Esher served his political apprenticeship as private secretary to the Marquess of Hartington. His most important work was done after the South African War, when he served on commissions which brought about many much-needed reforms. Ultimately he became chairman of the War Office Reconstruction Committee. In military circles it was once considered a fashionable affectation to ask, "Who the dickens is Esher?" and a certain general to whom he had wired, "Come to town at once to see me," had the temerity to wire back, "Sorry; don't know you." Within ten minutes of the receipt of the last telegram, a command from the Minister of War himself was being tapped for the innocent general to proceed to London.

Extremely popular with the late King Edward and Queen Victoria, it will be remembered that Lord Esher was entrusted with the task, together with Mr. Arthur C. Benson, of editing Queen Victoria's letters, and one of his most treasured possessions is a ring which Her Majesty left him in her will. Lord Esher is the author of several volumes of essays dealing with affairs of national importance, to the study of which he has devoted his life, his literary tastes being shared by Lady Esher, who was Miss Eleanor van de Weyer, daughter of a former Belgian Minister resident in London.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MOQUE, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. (confidential) for free advice which will prove helpful.

Such Extravagance.—A lady was continually accusing her servant of extravagance without any real cause. The girl bore this accusation patiently for a time, but at last she rebelled. She informed her mistress that the coal had all been consumed. The lady blurted out:—"What! Done Already? Why, you surely eat them." Next day the candles were all done. "Candles done!" said the mistress. "Why, I bought half a pound only a week ago. Where have they all gone?" "Well," replied the servant, sarcastically. "I'll tell you where the candles have gone. I ate them to grease my throat so that I could swallow the coal more easily!"

HERE'S A SECRET

If you want to cure that skin disease of yours, you can only do so by using an ointment so refined as to be capable of penetrating to the root of the disease. Zam-Buk is capable of doing this, whereas ordinary ointments remain on the surface skin.

Besides its wonderful power of penetration, Zam-Buk is such a strong germicide that germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. Thus, all germs, both on the surface and in the underlying tissues, are destroyed. Then the herbal essences, of which Zam-Buk is composed, promote the growth of new tissue, and a complete and permanent cure is the result.

Prove it for yourself. All druggists, 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

ZAM-BUK

LOUIS RIEL'S NEPHEW.

In a letter to the Alliston Herald, Pte. Clare Henderson writes: I attended the funeral of one of our boys a couple of weeks ago. He was a half-breed named Riel—a nephew of the notorious Louis Riel who led the Indians in the N. W. rebellion of 1885. He was a crack shot and out here was a sniper. He put a notch in the butt of his rifle every time he shot a German. He had forty-two notches. I thought as I stood by his grave, what a change may take place in one generation — my uncle fought against his uncle; now I am fighting alongside him. His rifle has been sent to his home in Canada.

HAD A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN COULD NOT SLEEP OR WORK

Is Now Cured and Attributes His Recovery to the Use of Dr. Chase's Medicines

Some splendid results have been reported to us from the combined use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food. In complicated cases they work together with great success.

While the Kidney-Liver Pills arouse the action of liver, kidneys, and bowels, and so overcome, derangements of these organs, the Nerve Food enriches the blood, strengthens the nerves and builds up the system in a general way.

Mr. R. B. Hillman, Purbrook, Muskoka, Ont., writes: "About four years ago I was all run down and could not work, and as to writing a letter, I could not do it on account of my hand shaking so badly. My nerves were unstrung and I was troubled with a nervous breakdown. I could not sleep soundly and would start up so suddenly so to almost jump out of bed. My kidneys were bad, too, and I had awful pains in the back all day. I doctored with our family doctor, but he did not seem to know what I needed. I was recommended to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and could sleep well three nights after, starting the use of the Nerve Food and Kidney-Liver Pills. I take great pleasure in recommending these medicines as I have proved that they do all that is claimed for them."

When used together the Nerve Food should be used after each meal and at bed-time, and the Kidney-Liver Pills only as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in healthy condition. Dr. Chase's medicines are for sale by all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' AND SMALL WOMEN'S COAT SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

7753

It is so important to have the dress or suit match the person and have that person fit the dress or suit that women more than ever will dress becomingly this spring and summer; to "dress becomingly" is the spring slogan. Suits will be seen extensively in "Poiret twill," Bolivia cloth, velour checks and in wool jersey cloth, plain and plaided. Corded striped poplin is also named among the popular fabrics. To adapt the style of suit shown in No. 7,753 one will show very good taste, for it is ultra smart with its unbelted coat in the fashionable flare and having only braid as the modest trimming. The collar and revers may be of self material or contrasting goods, as you prefer. Below the V neck buttons close the garment. The braid trimming is repeated in the bell sleeves, where it marks the cuffs, and the one piece skirt has four plaits in each half to produce the generous sweep in stylish models, and braid encircles the hem line.

The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 20 years. To reproduce in size 16 will take 5¼ yards of 36 inch goods, 9⅝ yards braid and ⅜ yard contrasting goods. If it is to be introduced for collar and revers.

You may obtain the pattern by sending 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

SAYS HOT WATER EACH DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out the poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleasing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, tshoamtorucelb, rjoifi(.S others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Lo. We turn to the Gentiles. Acts 13: 13-52.

Golden Text: I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. Acts 13: 47.

1. Verse 13. At what points had Paul and Barnabas touched, according to the last lesson?

2. Where are Paphos, Perga, and Antioch in Pisidia?

3. Verse 14. Why should a Christian always attend church on Sunday, whether at home or away from home, except prevented by circumstances over which he has no control?

4. If a man does not act like a Christian when away from home, is he a real Christian when at home?

5. Verse 15. Why is it that so many of our present-day church services are so stiff and formal, compared to the services in this synagogue?

6. Why should not our church services be sufficiently elastic so that other members of the congregation, beside the pastor, may take part in them?

7. Verse 16. Would you say, and why, that there were many devout Jews, and others, in those days, who feared God, and were accepted of Him, who had not embraced Christianity?

8. Would you say, or not, and why, that preachers and teachers in addressing non-Christian audiences, should assume that there may be some present who fear God, notwithstanding that they may have never heard about Jesus?

9. Verses 17-37. In addressing a hostile audience it is well for a speaker to commence with things which they believe in common, making those things lead up to the disputed question. What matters did Paul refer to in carrying out this wise rule?

10. Verses 38, 39. In what sense can God forgive sins through Jesus, that He could not through the law of Moses?

11. Granted a future life of rewards and punishments, what question can compare, in importance, with the forgiveness of our sins?

12. What are the indications that men are not sane who reject the mercy and forgiveness offered to them though Jesus Christ?

13. Verses 40, 41. What do unconverted sinners need to "beware" of?

14. Why do sinners reject the salvation offered to them by Jesus?

15. Verses 42, 43. What is it a sign of when men want to hear the gospel preached?

16. Verses 44, 45. What is the evidence that the story of the cross told by a man filled with the Holy Spirit, still draws crowds, as it did when told by Paul at Antioch?

17. When one preacher is jealous of the good another preacher is doing, what does that signify?

18. Verses 46-49. Is God now, or has He ever been, more partial to one nation than to another?

19. Who are those to whom God ordains to eternal life? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

20. Would you say, or not, and why, that without exception, all those who love and serve God in sincerity have gladness in their hearts?

21. Verses 50-52. When the bad persecute the good, which are more hurt?

Lesson for Sunday, May 21, 1916: The Cripple of Lystra. Acts 14.

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

ADMIT NO MORE TROOPS.

Mexico Will Not Allow Another American Punitive Expedition.

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—The Government press says: "We are officially informed that for no reason whatever will our Government permit more American troops to invade our territory. If using the Big Bend occurrence as a basis, the United States attempts to send a new punitive force into our country, Mexico will resist it at all cost. The Mexican people do not desire war, but will defend the sovereignty of the country at any cost, fighting hand to hand and body to body to maintain it."

FOR THE HANDS

If your hands give you trouble by getting red and sore, prepare the following lotion:

To spirits of camphor, add an equal amount of ammonia and glycerine. Shake each time before using.

WEAK AND TIRED WOMAN

TELLS HOW VINOL MADE HER HER STRONG.

Peterboro women who are weak, run down and suffer from the consequent effects of such a condition, will be interested in Mrs. Odell's letter. She says:

"I am a farmer's wife and was all run-down, weak, tired and suffered from indigestion, and sometimes it seemed as though I could not keep around and do my housework. I had taken many medicines without benefit. One day I saw Vinol advertised and made up my mind to try it. I have taken four bottles and have gained seven pounds in weight, am much stronger, and feel many years younger than before." Sarah Odell, Lockport, N.Y.

The reason why Vinol builds up weak, run down women so quickly is because it contains a delicious combination of three most successful tonics, peptonate of iron to enrich and revitalize the blood, the strength-creating, body-building elements of fresh cods' livers without oil, and beef peptone.

We want to say to every weak, run-down, over worked woman in Peterboro that we will return your money if Vinol fails to help you as it did Mrs. Odell.

TWO MORE LOCAL BOYS APPEAR ON CASUALTY LIST

Lance.Corp. Percy Borland and Pte. Jack Garrett of Peterboro' Are Both Officially Reported Wounded

Two more Peterborough boys are today officially reported wounded.

This morning Mr. Thos. Borland, 308 Margaret avenue, received a wire from the Adjutant General's Department at Ottawa stating that his son, Lance Corp. Percy Borland, No. 412366, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to No. 1 Canadian General Hospital at Etaples on May 3rd suffering from shrapnel wounds in the thigh. Lance Corp. Borland, who was born in Canada, was a teller in the local branch of the Union Bank before he enlisted here early last year with the 39th Battalion. He went overseas with the 39th and was afterwards transferred to a 1st Division Battalion at the front. He was a member of the 57th Regiment for two years before enlisting for overseas service.

Miss Sadie Garrett, assistant with Dr. Morrison, was officially notified this morning that her brother, Pte John Garrett, another native born member of the 39th Battalion, who enlisted here last spring, is reported admitted to No. 8 Stationary Hospital at Wimereux on May 1st suffering from a gunshot wound in the face. Pte. Garrett who was a member of the 57th Regiment before the war, went overseas with the 39th and was afterwards transferred with eleven other Peterborough boys to the 25th Nova Scotia Battalion.

The Women of Ashburnham Are Grateful

To All Those Who Contributed to the Success of the Paper Collecting Yesterday

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham take this means of thanking the citizens for their co-operation in the collection of old papers yesterday. The ladies appreciate the fact that the people had their papers and magazines neatly tied in bundles and conveniently laid out for the collectors. Between twenty-three and twenty-four tons of paper were gathered, which will bring a very handsome sum of money.

To the ladies who worked so hard to those who lent their trucks and automobiles, and to the citizens generally, the league extends its heartfelt thanks. If there were any places overlooked it was merely an oversight and the people are asked not to destroy their papers but set them aside until the next time.

CHARGE AGAINST K. FEIGE DISMISSED

Manslaughter Charge Against Feige Dismissed by Grand Jury

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 11. — The Grand Jury to-day dismissed the manslaughter charge against K. Feige, the alleged "health builder." Feige had been bound over to the Grand Jury by the Coroner's inquiry in the matter of the death by starvation of Hon. Jas. R. Stratton of Peterborough, Ont. The Grand Jury did not consider that the evidence showed that Feige had caused the death of Mr. Stratton.

DOES PETERBORO' COUNTY WANT TO BE ASHAMED OF ITSELF?

If the City and County of Peterborough desire to gain the reputation of the meanest community in Ontario, they have only to continue their present policy and allow the 93rd Battalion to go into camp at Barriefield with its present equipment. Probably this statement will come as a shock to many citizens of the city and county, but if it will serve the desired effect and cause a change in the conditions, The Examiner has no apology to make. The situation briefly is that the officers of an overseas battalion are forbidden to canvass for funds with which to supplement the Government allowance of equipment. There are many things which are necessary for the comfort of the members of a battalion that are not supplied by the Government, and it is in this connection that a regimental fund is required. In other counties the citizens have freely, gladly, and generously contributed, and the result is that their battalions will go into camp fully equipped with field kitchens, mess tents, adequate funds to provide sporting equipment for their men, and everything that the thoughtful ones at home can provide for the soldier boys they are sending out.

In the 93rd Battalion Peterborough has a purely county unit, of which every citizen of the county should be proud. They have earned a reputation for good conduct and efficiency that is an enviable one, and when they go to Barriefield they will be a credit to the district from which they come. But if they go into camp without the needed number of field kitchens, without mess tents or sporting equipment, without even colours, they will give this community a reputation that it will have trouble in living down. Does Peterborough want that kind of advertising? Does she want her boys who have come forward gladly to do their bit to struggle along without any of these comforts, while other county battalions with more thoughtful or more generous citizens backing them, are on a totally different footing? Does she want the word to go around that although the boys of Peterborough County were brave enough to fill a battalion, the citizens generally were too indifferent to see that their own battalion was properly equipped?

So far little or nothing has been done for the 93rd with the exception of the presentation of band instruments, the campaign for which The Examiner started last autumn. The City Council has not contributed one cent to the battalion—a record for the province. The County Council did better early last winter with a $400 grant which, of, course, has been expended oling ago for recruiting expenses. The other day one generous citizen contributed $400 which made it possible for the battalion to order one field kitchen. And that is all that has been done.

The Examiner believes that the people of the city and county do not want the 93rd Battalion to go away like orphans, and that if a proper effort was made the necessary funds would soon be in sight. The time is short. Action is needed at once. Let Mayor Duffus call a meeting of the City Council, invite the Speakers' Patriotic League, the I.O.D.E., and other patriotic bodies, and the citizens generally, and let us go to work. In some counties the school children have undertaken to furnish a field kitchen or some other equipment. With proper organization that could be done here. The different women's patriotic organizations might undertake the furnishing of colours to the battalion. The curlers, bowlers, and other sporting clubs could easily supply athletic materials. The City Council, the County Council, and the councils of the different townships in the county should supplement the work with grants. Leadership is needed—only a short time remains—and we have a right to look to the City Hall for leadership in this case. Will Mayor Duffus get busy?

93rd BATTALION WILL HAVE A GOOD SITE AT BARRIEFIELD

Officers Have Returned After Inspecting the Camp---Battalion Will Likely Be Here Over Victoria Day and Preparations Are Being Made For Demonstration---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Major K. G. Lech and Capt. Rollins, of the 93rd Battalion, have returned from Kingston, where they have been inspecting the site at Barriefield Camp to be occupied by the 93d. The Peterborough Battalion will be located at the northern limit of the camp, on the site occupied last autumn by the 80th Battalion, on good ground and conveniently situated close to the headquarters buildings, and a little to the east of the parade ground. Their neighbours on the west will be the 77th Battalion of Ottawa.

Through the kindness of Capt. Rollins, the Examiner is enabled to give a rough description of the 93rd's camp at Barriefield.

Along the northern boundary will be the latrines and horse lines, between which and the next section of the camp a road intervenes. South of this road, at the west side of the camp, will be found the officers' mess and east of it the sergeants' mess. A marquee tent for the band is situated near-by. Still further east will be the battalion kitchen, a large frame building, containing twelve stoves, three for each company. The tables for A and B Companies are at the side of the kitchen, and C and B Companies on the other side, the tables being protected by an awning from sun and rain. South of the kitchen, and facing on a road bisecting the camp, will be the regimental canteen. The medical officer's quarters are also in this section, while to the east will be found the machine gun section and the signallers.

South of the road running through the camp will be the tents of the four companies. On the centre will be the battalion stores, and just south of them the Paymaster's tent. Col. Johnston's headquarters will be at the south-west corner of the camp, with the battalion orderly room close by.

The camp is practically ready for the arrival of the troops, even the tent pegs having been hammered into the ground. The public will be interested in knowing that it requires 157 bell tents, as well as a dozen or more marquees, to accommodate the 93rd.

There is still nothing definite about the date of departure of the 93rd, but from present indications the battalion will be here over Victoria Day.

Mr. Joseph Bell, formerly of this city, has enlisted with the 231st Overseas Battalion, Seaforth Highlanders, and is stationed at Hastings Park, Vancouver, B.C.

The 93rd Battalion Bugle Band needs the services of four more buglers and a small drummer. They would prefer young men who already know how to play the bugle, and would particularly like to hear from some of the 57th buglers. Two men can be taken on at once.

CITY UNSUCCESSFUL IN APPEAL CASE BE POWER COMPANY

City Will Have to Pay the Peterborough Light and Power Company $154,000.00 as Awarded by the Arbitrators — Chief Justice Meredith Allowed Appeal With Costs

WAS OVER-RULED

Judgment was handed out to-day by the Appellate Division of the Court of Appeal at Osgode Hall, Toronto, respecting the Peterborough Light and Power Appeal. It will be remembered that the award of the arbitrators was $154,000.00, and the city appealed against this, contending that it was in excess of the proper valuation.

Chief Justice Meredith of the Court of Appeal gave a judgment in which he finds that the award should be reduced to $100,000.00, the amount of the Hydro-Electric valuation, and would allow the appeal with costs. Mr. Justice Masten gave a written judgment in which Mr. Justice Riddell concurred and would uphold the award, and intimated that brokerage and certain other items should not be included (if they were included).

The Honourable Mr. Justice Lennox also gives a written judgment in which he concurs substantially with Mr. Justice Masten's judgment and indicates various reasons for giving it.

It will be seen that upon this division of the Court of Appeal, that the award of arbitrators stands and the city is unsuccessful in setting it aside.

SHOCK GIVES HIM SPEECH.

Dent Mute's First Words Were Prediction of His Death.

New Westminster, B.C., May 12. — According to a leading medical man of Vancouver, a 13-year-old boy of this city, who was born minus the power of speech and hearing, suddenly gained the power of articulation while helping his mother dry the dishes after dinner a few weeks ago.

His parent was terribly surprised, and for some moments was unable to grasp the fact that her boy had really spoken. In fact, she could not believe the evidence of her senses, and, in order to further test the matter, dropped a second dish behind her to the floor, whereupon the boy said, "That's two." A third crash of a falling plate caused the youth to say, "That's three," after which he said, "That means that I shall die next Thursday, and that the war will be over in June."

The most peculiar feature is that the boy actually passed away on the day he had mentioned, so that one prophecy at least is said to have come true.

93rd Battalion Will Be Leading Factors in Celebration Being Arranged by the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association.

SOME OF THE DETAILS

The Sportsmen's Patriotic Association are arranging for a big demonstration on Victoria Day in which the 93rd Battalion will play the leading part. While the details have not yet been arranged. The committee is hard at work and it is planned to have one of the biggest days of its kind ever held here. If possible the committee will endeavour to have Sir Sam Hughes review the 93rd Battalion in the morning. The Minister of Militia will be in Lindsay for the afternoon, and it is hoped that he will be able to arrange his affairs so that he can be here in the morning. At all events there will be a review of the battalion, while in the afternoon there will be a big field day at Riverside Park commencing with a ball game between the 93rd Battalion and a picked city team, the latter to be selected by Mr. Dan McCabe. There will be a varied programme of athletic and military events, including exhibitions by the 93rd Signallers, Machine Gun Section and Physical Drill squad. In the evening there will be war pictures and a band concert. Other details will be added as the committee goes into the plans. The relatives of the boys will be here from outside points in the county.

THE CHORUS LADY A GREAT PICTURE

The Empire Theatre Has a Fine Programme For To-day and To-morrow

"The Chorus Lady" is one of the most popular contributions ever made to the Paramount Programme by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. It is a picturization of James Forbes' comedy of stage life of to-day— a play which ran two whole years in New York and several seasons uninterruptedly on tour. Thousands have enjoyed its fun and have laughed through tears at its human qualities.

It is a play which lends itself excellently to picturisation. The frequent and compelling incidents which lead to the dramatic climaxes are especially suited to the photo drama.

The play tells the story of the struggles of a keen-witted, clean-lived young girl of the chorus to keep her younger sister from falling into the clutches of a scheming man of the world. She saves her sister only To lose the love of her young detective sweetheart. The wonderful charm and mystery of "behind the scenes" is said to cast a spell over the entire five reels of thrilling action.

"The Chorus Lady" is sure of being one of the most sensational successful plays ever presented on the screen.

Empire Theatre. Continuous performances afternoon and evening.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, MAY 12, 1916

BACK UP THE 93RD.

The 93rd—the Peterborough—Battalion, is now well on to full strength, and within the next fortnight may, almost any day, expect to receive orders to leave the city to go into camp at Barriefield. Though the battalion is almost complete numerically it is still far short of the equipment and conveniences the government does not supply, but which are absolutely necessary for the comfort of the members of the battalion. These include field kitchens, mess tents, colours, and a score of other things which can only be furnished by means of an adequate regimental fund. Every man of the battalion is a Peterborough city or county boy, and when they leave town to do the fighting for them they leave behind, they should carry with them something more than the echo of our cheers, which won't mean much unless there is something substantial behind them. The city and township councils did much for the 100 odd Peterborough boys that enlisted in the 59th battalion—voted a total regimental fund of $6,000. Shall we be behind when a battalion, one thousand strong, recruited entirely of Peterborough boys, make the appeal of needed equipment to civic, municipal and fellow citizen generosity? How can we send them off with flying colours if we don't provide them with colours? We have done well in providing with instruments, the best military band, as Col. Hemming says, in the district, if not in the Dominion; but there are no funds for a large list of necessities—funds for a large list of necessities required to make the boys comfortable in camp, to offset the inevitable hardships of camp life. We must act at once if we are to do even a part of what we should do to loyally back the battalion. By their courage in enlisting they have brought credit to Peterborough city and county and both will lose credit if we send the boys out without a tangible evidence that we appreciate their action in fighting for us and the Empire—if we send them out without decent supplementary equipment. There should at once be a mobilization of the home forces. There should be a public meeting called to arouse the enthusiasm and loyalty of the city to the point of effective organization. With proper and prompt appeal the largest auditorium in the city could be filled with people, representing every rank and class of the community, as the battalion represents every rank and class. Mayor Duffus is an old soldier, and we look to him as civic head of Peterborough, to take the preliminary steps that will organize local organization and provide for promptly sending the fiery cross to every township that has sent recruits to the 93rd Battalion.

CANADIAN FLYING MEN WANTED.

The experience of this war is that aerial war craft are one of the most important military equipments for the larger success in military operations. What militates against the greater employment of air craft is not the lack of machines but the lack of trained aviators or pilots. The importance of these is shown by the fact that the Imperial War Office gives a grant of $375 to every trained pilot; and the Dominion government also gives $250 per Canadian pilot accepted by the war office. The Imperial government has signified that it needs men from Canada who can fly and will take from Canada ten qualified aviators per month during the continuance of the war.

In this connection the Examiner has received an attractive poster, with the stirring heading, "Fight or Pay," and at the foot the words, "Help Win the War." The poster is made more striking by a picture of an aeroplane blowing up an Zeppelin. The text of the poster is an appeal by the Canadian Aviation Fund, for aid in the establishment of an aviation school or schools in Canada to send trained Canadian war craft pilots to the front. This is a commendable ambition and purpose. Is there any reason why the Canadian government should not establish these schools at the public expense, as it thus maintains schools for training officers?

The question of private contribution to war purposes is a very important one. The willing among our people are subjected to extraordinary strain for all sorts of war funds which are needed to promote our military success, and are as important in their way as the provision of clothing, food, arms and munitions for soldiers. The government by not meeting these necessary expenses, throws a double burden upon patriotic citizens; for the great mass of the people do not substantially contribute to financing the war, except by their contribution in taxation through the Dominion, local and municipal governments. In this way everybody pays a share; but by the multiplication of war demands the willing are compelled, to, or do, contribute the chief total to the supplementary funds. Why should not the government pay the full share of the active work of waging this war. Looking after the consequences is enough for the unorganized people to do. Red Cross, work almost as essential as fighting strength, is almost entirely supplied by voluntary popular effort. The supplementary equipment of new battalions, to be what we owe to those who enlist to fight for us, must come from private liberality.

If the Imperial government needs war craft pilots for Canada, it seems that the Canadian government should bear the bulk of the expense of providing schools for their training. Should localities be asked to do more than provide the funds to pay the fee to send to the school and then to the front some local young men, or young men to represent the district?

But why should there be a fee? Is is not enough for the young man who to offer himself for preparation for the most perilous post in the field, without having to pay for the privilege of doing the most important work and taking the greatest risk of any arm of the service? A fee suggests a regrettable tendency—that of restricting aviation service to a class that has money, a tendency rather too much in evidence in the appointment of battalion officers.

The proposal for aviation schools is admirable; they seem to be a necessary element in our contribution to the great fight; and the people of Canada will be a unit in favour of the government devoting all the public money necessary for the purpose. Private citizens surely have enough demands upon their patriotism and purses without further relieving the government funds by contributing to the establishment of aviation schools. Contributing to pay the entrance fee of some city or county young man to an aviation school constitutes a more direct appeal and the liberal public could very well be counted upon for that. Considering what the people of Canada have individually given, above their share of taxation, for supplementary war purposes, considering what they are committed to giving, and considering what they will hereafter be called upon to give, it does seem that further demands on private liberality should not be made for purposes that distinctly involve the duty of the government to provide the financial means. We should also consider that there is now a more insistent demand upon local patriotism and the liberality of Peterborough, than a demand for funds to establish aviation schools— the demand of a duty to our fellow citizens, who have helped Peterborough do her duty and gain large credit—to furnish a regimental fund, or its equivalent, to the 93rd, Peterborough's own battalion. We shall all cheerfully submit to whatever general or specific general taxation will be necessary, to establish aviation schools, but we have enough claims, and the specific claim of our own boys to absorb all our financial ability.

WHAT IT AMOUNTS TO.

HOW ONTARIO SPENDS THE MONEY OF THE PEOPLE

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, May 12.—Two different incidents before the public at the present time emphasize the Ontario Government's failure to administer economically the finances of the province.

Monday, May the 15th, sees the coming into effect of the new amusement tax which it is estimated will bring in an annual revenue of about $600,000. In other words the people of Ontario who visit places of recreation, and especially the great mass of the people who attend the movies will have to pay the government in Queen's Park half a million dollars a yar more than they have been paying already.

The other incident is the decision of the Toronto Ctiy Council to fight the payment of the special provincial tax of one mill on the dollar.

The question isn't whether or not Toronto is right in its contention, or whether or not the amusement tax is a fair one. The fundamental point is this—if the government had been more careful of their finances and if they had been as keen to tax wealthy corporations as they are to tax the common people there would have been no need, even with the war, for either the one mill tax or the amusement tax.

Take the one instance of the tax on nickel companies. Admittedly without authority, Mr. Hearst, when Minister of Mines, agreed in 1912 that the Canada Copper Company for a period of five years, should pay a flat-rate tax of only $40,000 a year instead of 3 per ent. of the value of ore at the mine, as provided in the Mining Tax Act. On the basis of the government's own estimate of the production and value of nickel in 1915 the tax of 3 per cent. would be at least $400,000, so that the government, in one year, has relieved the company from paying $360,000 justly due by the company to the province for taxation under the Mining Act.

As Sam Clark said in the Legislature "the government taxes the poor man who wants to see a nickel show and lets the plutocrats of the nickel companies off with a song".

From 1908 to 1915 the annual expenditure under this Conservative government has increased from 8½ to twenty-three million dollars per year.

ARE WE THE SLAVES OF CLOCKS?

Now it is proposed to follow in this country the example already set by several of Europe's warring nations, and to put all our clocks, for the summer months, an hour ahead of "standard" time.

The idea is not such a bad one—it even has the merit of promising with plausibility certain advantages the reality of which most people with more or less sincerity would admit. Unlike so many of the folk across the water, we have no particular reason for the saving of electricity, gas and kerosene that would result from the change, but, so far as it would make us get up and go to bed earlier, and do more of our working and playing by daylight, it is probably to be commended. Opinions differ, however, as to how far that would be.

It is yet to be proved that a return to, or toward, the hours kept by hens and savages confers any ponderable benefits on people in reality or pretense civilized. Nocturnal animals are not a bit less healthy than those whose activities are conducted in the sunshine, and the extent to which any nation uses artificial illumination is a fairly accurate measure of its advancement.

With our clocks as they are, such of us as have a passion for seeing sunrises can gratify it without breaking any law or even offending the proprieties. Thereby, on the contrary, a mysterious merit can be acquired in one's own eyes and in those of his neighbours.

An intelligent Bostonian suggests that the really popular thing to do would be to have the clocks an hour slow in the earlier morning, and an hour, or perhaps two hours, fast in the afternoon. That would indeed suit almost everybody except the members of the salary and wage paying class, and who are they to have a word to say about anything. — New York Times.

"You can't tell me there is no honesty in the world!" "How now?" "I left a box of cigars somewhere the other day. Somebody found it, smoked one, and returned the rest!"

One of 'Em.—Lady—"Are you leaving us so soon, Norah?" New Cook—"Yes, mum. I never stay long in one place, mum." Lady—"I see. You're one of these Cook thurists!"

A man dropped his wig in the street, and a boy picked it up and handed it to him. "Thanks, my boy," said the owner of the wig. "You are the first genuine hair restorer I have ever seen."

The More You Know About
PASTEURIZED MILK
The Better You Like It

READ THESE FACTS FROM THE PETERBORO CREAMERY:

Our Patrons Are Assured of the Following Conditions:

1. BUTTERFAT — Every day's milk is tested for its Butterfat (richness.) Creamery patrons depend on our tests for all the pure, rich, wholesome, safe milk sent out on our milk waggons.

2. CLARIFYING — Cleanliness contributes to health and strength. Clarification means that our creamery patrons get milk from which all sediment and waste matter from the udder is removed, as well as all impurities which may come from the handling of milk. When raw milk is passed through the clarifier all objectionable matter is thrown out and the milk is made safe. Other methods of cleansing the milk with wire strainers, or filters, are not efficient.

3. PASTEURIZING—This process consists in heating milk to such a temperature for such a length of time as will destroy all tubercular or other disease germs. Pasteurizing milk does not affect the food value of milk. No epidemic of disease has ever been traced to pasteurized milk. This Creamery sells the only Clarified and Pasteurized Milk in the city. It is contrary to City of Toronto by-laws to sell unpasteurized milk or ice cream made from cream which has not been pasteurized

4. BOTTLING—Our Creamery Milk is bottled under sanitary conditions. All bottles are washed and thoroughly sterilized every time they are used. No bottles are allowed out that have not been sterilized.

Tangled Tale of Seizures, Bailiffs, Sales and "Law"

Leamon Garnsey Evidently Had a Harried Existence Since the Day His Landlady Called For Back Rent and He Borrowed $200—Hearing in Progress To-day

Leamon Garnsey, his wife Phila A. Garnsey, and Miss Catharine Hill are plaintiffs in an action before Judge Huycke to-day for $2000 on a charge of illegal seizure of certain of the... ...ir and chattels under a writ of ...cution.

Mr. O. A. Langley is representing the plaintiffs. The defendants are W. J. Hancock, his counsel Mr. F. D. Kerr; C. A. Beatty represented by Mr. B. D. Hall, Mr. S. T. Wedlock, with Mr. D. O'Connell acting for him, and Mrs. Clarissa Sampson, who was absent this morning although it was stated in court that she had been served.

Such are the opposing parties with their legal supports. The plaintiff's claim spreads over ten typewritten pages and up to the noon session Mr. Langley had led his client Garnsey up to the threshold of the case which is a tangle of seizures, sales and the other actions that occasionally generate from mortgages.

Mr. Charles W. Turner of Campbellford, who desired to return on the afternoon train, was called first to identify a mortgage given to him by Leamon Garnsey who later defaulted it and was seised upon. Mr. Turner sold or assigned the mortgage to Mrs. Sampson. To Mr. Langley witness said he had advanced $200 to Garnsey when the mortgage was arranged.

It is understood that Garnsey was seized upon fourteen times, and evidently the bailiffs and other "officials of seizure" became so familiar with the road to Garnsey's they could travel it blindfold.

The Plaintiff.

Leamon Garnsey said he was a tenant on Lot 27 and part of Lot 28, Con. 5, Otonabee. Previously he had farmed in Belmont. He resided on the Otonabee property when the alleged offenses were committed. In October, 1910, he and his wife gave a chattel mortgage to Chas. W. Turner, of Campbellford, by whom he was first advanced $200. Reviewing the chattels mentioned in the mortgage, witness, who said he could not read them declared, as Mr. Langley enumerated the items which were his and his wife's. At this point Mr. Kerr called for the removal of Mrs. Garnsey and Catherine Hill, the other plaintiffs.

Mrs. Garnsey owned one team of mares and all the household goods except a range, which was shared by the husband, and her property had belonged to her before her marriage. Waggons, sleighs, cultivators, plows, buggies, sets of harness, etc., were the property of the witness alone.

Mr. Garnsey stated that Mr. Turner made the first seizure on chattels, and Mrs. Sampson, plaintiff's landlady, made a later seizure for rent. This latter seizure was previous to a suit with Mrs. Sampson in March, 1915, in which an injunction was granted restraining a sale of the chattels.

On June 2nd F. J. A. Hall and C. A. Beattie arrived at plaintiffs' home, presented a paper, and stated that they had come to make a seizure of chattels. Among the articles taken were 2 horses, 9 small pigs, 4 hogs, 2 cows, 2 small cattle, 50 hens owned by Mrs. Garnsey, one cow owned by Wm. Hill, and two turkeys owned by witness's children.

Garnsey said he immediately came to Peterborough, saw a lawyer, and a claim of ownership was put in on that day for Mrs. Garnsey. Witness admitted that the list included some articles which were solely his.

On June 4th Mr. Jos Barnard broke the news of another seizure. Charlie Cook arrived a few days later, replacing Mr. Barnard.

Item—June 7th—Another seizure.

June 10th—Mr. Barnard removed roan mare and gray mare to Peterborough.

Mares Became Blind.

Garnsey testified that the mares were kept at Munroe's four weeks. He valued them at $250, and two years ago refused $175 for the gray.

August 14th—Messrs. Hall and Beattie sell the mares, which are bought by Robert Hill, and immediately rented to Garnsey. Both mares were blind when sold.

"They were perfectly good when they left me," Garnsey testified, ascribing their blindness to their four weeks' confinement in a dark stable after coming off the grass.

August 18th—Witness alleges seizure of goods at the Belmont property, including household furniture belonging to his wife and daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Sampson bought them at a sale on Oct. 26.

Sold Crops to Miss Hill.

August 11th—Garnsey sold certain grain and crops to Miss Catherine Hill.

September 2nd—Another little seizure. This time Mr. Beatty made the trip, accompanied by a Mr. Middleton. Among the goods seized were Miss Hill's grain. Witness further said that on the advertised date of sale, 50 or 60 persons arrived, spent several hours rambling over his property. He forebad Mr. Hall to proceed with sale, and after a parley with Sampson, witness said that the Deputy Sheriff postponed the event to a later date. However, Mr. Hall said he would sell nine pigs to cover his expenses. Therefore, Mrs. Garnsey takes up the leading role, since she, as owner of the pigs, was financially interested in them. She took up a pitchfork, long and sharp of tines, and a position covering the way to the hog pen and defied the Deputy Sheriff to sell her pigs. Needless to say, she was greatly excited, dramatic and impressive. At any rate none of the visiting farmers got a chance to bid on the hogs.

However, Mr. Langley pointed out that Mr. Hall effected a seizure that day, and at that point Judge Huycke adjourned the hearing until after lunch, when the seizure recital was to be continued.

PREFERS PENITENTIARY TO THE PRISON FARM SO HE CAN'T ESCAPE

Swede Who Makes Getaway Accommodated With Two Years.

GUELPH, May 11.—Gustave Calton, a Swede was sentenced at Hamilton a few weeks ago to a term of 20 months at the Ontario Reformatory, for stabbing a man.

He arrived at the local institution on April 19, and in a little more than a week' time had made his escape. He was soon recaptured, however, and has been for the past week confined in the county jail.

He was brought before Magistrate Watt this morning and pleaded guilty to the charge of escaping from custody. He informed the magistrate that he desired to be sent to Kingston, as, if he were sent back to the reformatory he would escape again, claiming that the temptation there was greater than he could stand. He was accommodated and sentenced to two years in the Kingston penitentiary.

Thin Men and Women

Here's a Safe and Easy Way by Which You May Gain 10 Pounds or More of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to try Sargol, the famous flesh-building agent, that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out, and rolls of firm, healthy flesh form over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point.

All good druggists have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee of each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take, and highly efficient.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00, money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 70 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you, postpaid in plain wrapper.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

Mistress (to servant)—"Now, Elsa considering that you are quite ready to take the advice of an idiot who offers it to you, I can't think why it is that you will never listen to me."

Eight Conservatives Voted With Minority and Eleven Liberals With The Majority

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 12.—At ten minutes to four this morning, after an all night discussion on the Lapointe bilingual resolution, division bells rang and members of the Commons trooped in sleepily to register their votes. Party lines were broken when the resolution was defeated by 107 votes to 60. Eight Conservatives voted with the minority and eleven Liberals voted with the majority.

The principal defection was in the ranks of Western Liberals, under Hon. Frank Oliver. They opposed the resolution against the stand of Sir Wilfrid. All the Quebec members of the Cabinet voted with the Government against the resolution. All told, 11 Liberals and 8 Conservatives broke with their parties on division. The Liberals who opposed the resolution were: Hon. Frank Oliver, Buchanan, Clark (Red Deer), Cruzise, Douglas, Knowles, McNutt, Thompson (Qu Appelle), Terriff, Warnock, and Traux. All these except Reuben Traux are Western members. Traux is sitting for the Ontario constituency of South Bruce.

Eight Conservatives all Quebec French-speaking members who supported resolution are, Archin, Barrette, Bellemere, Boulay, Lamarche, Mondou, Raquet, Bainville. Two prominent Ontario Liberals Hon. G. P. Graham and Mr. F. F. Pardee, followed the lead of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and supported the resolution asking Ontario to deal more generously with the French Canadian minority.

Returned Soldier Applicant For Mr. Spence's Position

Sergeant T. R. Cooper, a returned soldier, has applied for the position of Sanitary Inspector made vacant by the resignation of Mr. C. A. G. Spence, which takes effect on May 31st. At a meeting of the Property Committee last night the chairman Ald. Saunders, with Aldermen Edgar and Evans, were appointed a special committee to arrange for the appointment of a successor to Mr. Spence.

The members present last night were Alderman Saunders, Mayor Duffus, Aldermen Duncan, Langford, Edgar and Evans. Mr. Spence's formal communication was on the council file hence was not discussed by the committee.

"Did you hear that the daughter of that rich man in the next street had been driven from home?" "Driven from home? Impossible. When did it happen?" "Just after she got into the taxicab."

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE PRICE QUESTION

There is a lot of talk about increased prices of woolen goods. A good many makers have had to come to it.

There is a scarcity of raw material; no doubt about that.

It is getting harder every day to obtain high grade woolens. That also is true.

Blue serges, grey worsteds and other staples are the worst. Their prices have hit the sky.

The tailoring concerns who buy in relatively small lots end for immediate needs, have had to increase prices.

But the makers of "Sovereign Brand" do not buy that way. We are among the largest buyers in Canada. Orders for serges, worsteds and staples were placed over a year ago at prices prevailing at that time. That was not foresight. It is the usual custom.

Even in new pattern goods the conditions are similar. New patterns are not made in a day. Anyone can see that. They are designed from six months to a year before the public ever sees them. The Sanford Co. get first choice through their English Agent and frequently control the output for Canada.

It is large buying power and established business connection that counts. The prevailing high prices may effect the customers of the Oak Hall stores a year from now. That remains to be seen, and depends somewhat on the Kaiser.

But right now "Sovereign Brand" Clothes at $15, $18, $20 and $25.00 represent high water mark in clothes value. Do not worry about sky-rocket prices of raw material. Buy "Sovereign Brand", and choose your suit now while stocks are so complete.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Stables and Chicken Coops Must Be 25 Feet From Dwellings, etc.

Such is Recommended Amendment to Health Act—No Hogs Permitted to Be Kept in City Limits Without Permission From Board of Health.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE'S DOINGS

Sanitary Inspector Spence's amendments to the Health bylaw were considered by the Property Committee last night. One clause called for water tight floors, sewer drainage and proper ventilation for all stables in the city.

Mayor Duffus moved seconded by Ald Duncan that the application of this regulation be confines to that part of the city within the fire limits. Carried.

In the discussion on the original clause, Ald. Saunders expressed the opinion that the measure would be a hardship on some of the teamsters in outlying parts of the city.

Ald. Edgar favored the idea as far as the fire limits of the city were considered.

Mayor Duffus agreed that in the centre of the city there should be sewer drainage from the stables.

Ald. Langford—They would be regarded as a nuisance and it would be sufficient to notify the owners to that effect.

Ald Evans felt that the by-law should apply to hotels and liveries, but he questioned the advisability of making it more inclusive.

This Clause Deleted

Another clause to the effect that ducks, geese, and other fowl running at large on the streets be confiscated and a penalty be imposed on the owners was struck out on motion of Mayor Duffus seconded by Ald Evans for the reason that a separate by-law already covered this point, providing for a penalty but not confiscation.

Poultry 25 Feet Back

A clause providing that no poultry coops may be located nearer than twenty-five feet to any dwelling, hotel, restaurant, or other place where food is kept or prepared was entirely supported by the Committee. Full sanction was given to the clause prohibiting hogs to be kept within the city without written permission from the Board of Health.

Stables Likewise Removed.

The Spence amendments were augmented by a provision requiring stables to be situated at least twenty-five feet from any dwelling restaurant, hotel, or other place where food is prepared. Mayor Duffus made the suggestion but the motion was fathered by Ald. Langford, seconded by Ald. Evans. The committee felt that it was a step in the right direction. Ald Evans remarking that if a chicken coop was a nuisance a stable was surely a nuisance, too.

The motion provides that no stable shall be permitted to be erected nearer than 25 feet to any dwelling, etc., without th written permission of the Board of Health. The qualifying phrase pertains to exceptional cases. For instance the Board of Health might allow a stable to be built within 24 feet, or might consider some other circumstances that came within the spirit of the by-law.

Ice for Public Fountains.

Ald. Saunders pointed out that it was time provision was made for a supply of ice for the public drinking fountains. He was instructed to obtain information regarding this year's price. Most of the members desired that the contract be given to the Allin Ice Co.

Call for Coal Tenders.

Mayor Duffus stated that the committee should prepare for next winter's supply of coal. He moved seconded by Ald. Duncan that the chairman call for tenders by letter to the local dealers, the coal to be obtained for the city buildings, police station, fire hall, Queen Mary hospital.

The Committee of the Whole Council decided some time ago not to renew the coal supply at th Fire Hall until the bin was emptied. The committee desired to learn what quantity was consumed at the Fire Hall The Property Committee are arranging for the winter's supply, on account of the uncertainty of the market prices, but this step will not interfere with the original intention of the Committee of the Whole.

Caretaker Needs Buckets.

Ald. Edgar informed the committee, that Caretaker Wilson required twenty galvanized iron buckets for removing ashes from the furnaces at the City Building. This was to enable him to take advantage of the garbage collection.

Mayor Duffus thought that twenty was too large a supply.

Ald Duncan—It would be cheaper to get a carter.

Ald Edgar—They are stout buckets and should last a long time.

Ald Duncan—They should but they don't.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by the Mayor that this matter be left with Chairman Saunders to make the best arrangements.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

There is much speculation as to who the next Sanitary Inspector will be. Several applicants are in the field. One of these is said to be a member of the police force.

WILL NOT RE-CONSIDER

There is little likelihood of Sanitary Inspector Spence reconsidering his decision. His new field of labor will provide ample scope for a man possessing the qualifications of Mr Spence.

THE DUSTLESS SWEEPER

The dustless sweeper made its appearance on Water street this morning. A preliminary trial trip was made on the paved portion of Water street with satisfactory results. Ex-Mayor Buller, who is interested in the new project, was on hand for the demonstration.

WATER NOT NEEDED.

The dustless sweeper is built on the same lines as a vacuum cleaner. The sweeper operates to the best advantage when the streets are thoroughly dry.

ITALIAN TROOPS TAKE LINE OF TRENCHES

ROME, May 12.—The War Office communication issued to-day says:

"There have been most intense artillery actions in the Assa Valley and in the Upper But, where, by our accurat fire, we overthrew the enemy's batteries opened fire against inhabited places in the Dreseence basin, on the Upper Isonzo, whereupon our artillery renewed its bombardment of Tolmino.

In the Plezzo basin, after, effective artillery preparation, our Alpine soldiers by a vigorous assault captured a strong line of enemy trenches and redoubts on the summit of Mount Cimia.

"On the slopes east of Mont Romon we captured four officers and 118 men and four machine guns, a quantity of arms, munitions and other materials.

FISHERS LANDED AFTER TORTURE

Liverpool, May 12th.—Nine of the crew of the French fishing vessel Berradotte were landed here to-day. They were six days in an open boat after their vessel had been sunk by a submarine 160 miles from land when bound for the Grand Banks of Newfoundland for fish.

The sailors declare that they had no time to supply themselves with food and water before taking to the boat, and that they suffered excruciatingly from hunger and thirst. One man drank salt water became demented and jumped overboard.

All the men were in the last stages of exhaustion when they were picked up.

Honey should be reckoned as food, and not merely a confection.

TO GIVE CARRANZA ONE MORE CHANCE

President Wilson and Cabinet Will Decide To-day Their Mexican Policy

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson and his Cabinet to-morrow will consider a new policy that may lead to intervention in Mexico.

Notification that the conference in El Paso between Gen. Scott and Gen Obregon had ended in disagreement brought the Administration face to face with the fact that a new policy must be adopted.

The rock on which the conference split was the demand of Carranza for withdrawal of American troops and the refusal of Gen. Scott under orders from Washington, to accede to this demand.

It was considered extremely likely to-night that the Cabinet to-morrow will decide to give Carranza one more chance to co-operate with the United States in suppressing outlawry along the border. If this course is adopted there may be an exchange of notes before further steps are taken along lines that may lead to intervention.
